No Christmas current sparks dispute with Edison

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Still reeling from what they say was Eastern Edison's unsatisfactory handling of Cohasset's Christmas weekend power-outage crisis, selectmen plan to ask power company officials some hard questions.

They stopped short of requesting that the attorney general's office and state department of public utilities (DPU) launch a full investigation into the matter.

During the winter's first northeaster hitting town in the wee hours of Christmas Eve, many Cohasseters lost power which was not restored in some cases for 12-to-18 hours.

Selectmen said there were no repair trucks in town until the afternoon and then only after numerous calls to the company's Brockton office.

Selectmen will meet with Eastern Edison's vice president of operations and director of distribution at noon, Tuesday, Jan. 17 at town hall to discuss what

Manners never go out of style in pre-teen dance classes

By Mary Grayken
Mariner correspondent

Many of the girls wore 3/4-length dresses with velvet collars and bibs of white lace. They all wore white gloves and flats — comfortable dancing shoes. Some wore pearl necklaces. To the music of Bing Crosby's Silver Bells, they waltzed with the boys attired in chinos, blue blazers and loafers.

"I didn't think I'd get used to this stuff, but I did," said seventh-grader Caitlin Donovan, one of about 150, 11- and 12-year olds participating in dance party classes for sixth- and seventh-graders in Cohasset.

Cohasset Dance Party instructor, Donald Mason, has taught dance for 30 years and at one time taught in the Arthur Murray program in Boston. Lisa French is the assistant instructor. She is the granddaughter of former Duxbury residents Mr. and Mrs. John Nott, now of Florida, who founded the dance program in 1946.

Classes, divided into hour-long sessions for each grade, conducted at Walton Rodgers Hall at St. Stephen's Church. In the bi-monthly classes held from September through January, participants learn a number of traditional, party and popular dances, including the waltz, fox-trot, jitterbug, polka, Charleston, and disco dancing.

Newsstand rates rise

Effective immediately, The Cohasset Mariner is raising its newsstand price to 75 cents.

The Mariner Newspapers has not had a price increase since June 1988 and the move is necessitated by rising newsprint and distribution costs. In-town subscription rates will remain the same at $22 for a year, or 42 cents per issue, which is 44 percent off the newsstand price.

To subscribe, call circulation manager Maria Tedone at 1-800-649-6661.

Civilian dispatcher eyed with E-9-1-1

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Plans to switch to civilian dispatch when Enhanced 9-1-1 comes on line in the spring has local firefighters concerned.

Reducing the manning at the fire department from five to four per shift — because selectmen say the firefighter who currently works the desk won't be needed — selectmen have opted not to fill three firefighter vacancies in 1995.

But firefighters are worried that less manpower on shift will result in a lower level of service. Union president Frank Mahoney explained that with the present set up, the firefighter on the desk can be called off the phones if necessary to respond to an emergency.

But Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan insisted

Cohasset's week

Nomination papers ready

Nomination papers for the town election on Saturday, April 1, will be available at the Town Clerk's office beginning Monday, Jan. 9 through Thursday, Feb. 9, until 7 p.m. that evening.

All nomination papers should be submitted to the registrars of voters for certification of names and addresses on or before Monday, Feb. 13, until 5 p.m.

Open seats include two positions for three years for selectmen; one position for three years for assessor; two positions for three years on the school committee; three positions for three years as trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; one position for three years on the Board of Health; one position for three years for water commissioner; one position for five years for sewer commissioner; one position for three years on the planning board, one position for five years on the recreation commission and one position for five years on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

50 signatures are needed to have a name placed on a ballot. Campaign forms must be filled out.

Supermarket manager fired

The manager of the Cohasset Super Stop & Shop supermarket was fired for "violating our strict code of ethics," according to company spokeswoman Terry Vandewater.

She would no specify what former manager James Molisse of Kingston had done to warrant his dismissal.

Cohasset Police Det. Rick Grassie said Tuesday that his department was not involved in any investigation that led to the dismissal of Molisse and no charges from the Cohasset police would be filed.

He did say that he was asked to sit in on a meeting with Stop & Shop security regarding the matter. He said Stop & Shop planned to seek its own complaint which will be handled by its loss prevention department.

Ambulance rates rise

The amount the town charges for ambulance service is increasing slightly to reflect the new Medicare Approved Rates. The new charge for basic transport increases by about $5 to $206.81. Rates for oxygen go up 93 cents to $38.10 and the amount charged per "loaded" mile goes up 23 cents to $9.25. "Loaded" miles are incurred when the patient is in transport.

Selectmen approved the rate increases this week.

A tree at 15 Border Street was felled by the Christmas Eve northeaster which wreaked havoc with electrical service in town.

Home inspections slated

The assessors office will send a representative for make a brief inspection of specific homes in town as part of the town's 1996 revaluation project.

Only information needed for a fair market appraisal will be recorded. The inspection takes about 15 minutes, the assessors office said.

Questions about the revaluation should be directed to the assessors office at 383-9900 ext. 124.

Growth to be trimmed

Safety officer Clifton Jones notified selectmen this week that a resident's concerns about visibility and pedestrian safety at the intersection of N. Main Street and Jerusalem Road have been addressed.

He said the highway department will replace a CHILDREN sign with a larger one and the tree and park department will cut back limbs and overgrown foliage that are hindering visibility at the intersection.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

BE SMART FROM THE START

QUESTION: I have just agreed to purchase a home. It is extremely important that I move in within three days after the closing date. Is there some way I can prevent the possession date from being delayed?

ANSWER: If timing is important, be sure that the phrase, "time is of the essence" is inserted into the agreement.

If this key phrase is not included, then either the buyer or seller can delay settlement for a "reasonable" time. What may be reasonable for one party may be unreasonable for the other. At this juncture, it may become a matter for the court to settle. Be sure to consult with your Realtor and attorney.

State house vote helps keep Hingham rail tunnel on track

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

Last month when the legislature passed a $3.8 billion transportation bond bill, it included $50 million for the construction of a rail road tunnel under Hingham Square should it be required. As a long time supporter of rail restoration to the South Shore, outgoing Senator Brian J. McDonald pushed for the tunnel funds, securing them in the Senate version this summer and persuaded his colleagues to retain it in the final version of the bill.

The three-quarter-mile tunnel would be part of the restoration of rail service to the Old Colony Greenbush line and the cost for construction is to be split between the state and the federal government.

Known as alternative 6A, the recommended short tunnel option is the result of hard work and compromise among members of the state-appointed Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC). With members from all towns along the Greenbush Corridor, the CAC reached a consensus and endorsed alternative 6A last spring.

But the short tunnel is only one of several alternatives before the MBTA, which is currently studying the costs of operating the Greenbush line and is expected to come out with its environmental impact report early next year.

But Hingham Historical Commission Chairman and Old Colony Response Team member Alexander Macmillan doesn't expect the MBTA to make a decision much before June.

Making an exception to its two term limit, the board of selectmen recently refused to accept Macmillan's resignation from the Historical Commission and asked him to remain on board and continue to work on the train issue. The commission is a legal body with the authority to protect the historical assets of the town and Macmillan has studied the project and its effects on Hingham for years.

Filed by McDonald at a time when the MBTA was saying there was not enough money to fund the project, Macmillan said the commitment the legislature has made to help fund the tunnel "sends an important message politically, but is not technically necessary."

According to Macmillan, the MBTA already has sufficient bonding capacity to cover the state's share even with the most expensive tunnel option. The project is now 80 percent federally funded, he said.

Macmillan said the tunnel will result in shorter running time to Boston and is necessary for legal reasons as the train will run through a nationally registered historic district.

"Unless money is spent to protect the area, the federal government may not approve the project," Macmillan said.

"The MBTA has to decide what their priority is. They have the federal money, and if there was a question that the state did not, there is no longer," he added.

According to Macmillan the real concern and delay on the MBTA's part is over the line's operating costs.

"The entire MBTA operates at a deficit," Macmillan said, "I think they're not prepared to file a draft impact report on Greenbush until they get their budget approved by their advisory committee."

As for the tunnel, Macmillan said it meets the town's needs effectively but is everyone's second choice.

Macmillan pointed out there are those in Hingham who wish the whole thing would go away, those who favor boats, or think the train is too expensive, and those who support rail restoration and think the tunnel is not necessary.

As the founder of Back on Track, a pro-train group and a member of the CAC and the town's transportation committee, Grimes helped to engineer the tunnel compromise.

"Safety and traffic issues would be addressed with the tunnel," said Grimes, who does not disapprove of at-grade restoration of the train.

"Politics is the art of compromise and this is a political issue," Grimes said, adding "I'll go along with the tunnel, but the only people who are pushing for it are three selectmen and Mr. Macmillan. A few people are making the decisions for everyone else."

A 20-year resident of Hingham, Grimes called it "a nice little town."

"But to say its better than other areas, or more historic, I don't agree with that," he added.

Grimes said he respected Macmillan's commitment to what he is doing and to his "image" of the town.

"But not everyone agrees with his image of the town," he added.

Grimes is concerned by the tone of the most recent meeting of the Old Colony Response Team, which like everyone else is waiting for something to respond to. An informal group of representatives from town boards, committees and businesses formed nearly five years ago, Selectman Katharine Reardon gathered the group together again last week to get some new input and an exchange of ideas for responding to the MBTA on this issue.

Grimes said he is particularly worried that if the MBTA chooses to restore the line but not to build a tunnel below Hingham Square, that Macmillan, an attorney, will take legal action or set such strict limitations on the MBTA's construction that they would be impossible to follow. Grimes said he would discourage the town from setting up "road blocks" from engaging in litigation.

"If the process is dragged out, the cost of the project will increase," he said noting that the other two Old Colony lines are already under construction.

"It's far better to deal with mitigation rather than litigation," he added.

In fact, should the town file suit, Grimes said it could find itself the target of a counter suit by the surrounding communities that have lost patience with Hingham's delays and demands and have indicated that $100 million for a tunnel could be better spent elsewhere.

Grimes said he'd be willing to work cooperatively with the Old Colony Response team.

"If it's mission is to deal honestly with the rail option, that's fine. If it's a "stop the train" committee in disguise, we'd have trouble agreeing.

Overall, Grimes wants to see things moving along more quickly, especially in light of the changes in Washington and the recent plans for cut backs in the transportation department.

"We've been working on this for the last 10 years. I hope we're not working on it for the next 10 years,"

Greenbush is on Chronicle

Camera crews from channel five's Chronicle made their way up from Greenbush to Cohasset to Hingham Square last week filming a segment on the proposed restoration of rail service on the Old Colony Greenbush line and the on-going controversy surrounding it.

Hingham Historical Commission Chairman Alexander Macmillan, a proponent of alternative 6A which involves rail restoration with a short tunnel under Hingham Square; Nancy Buckley of the Coastal Coalition that opposes any rail restoration to the South Shore; and William Grimes of the pro-train group Back on Track are among those who will be featured in the episode originally set to be aired Jan. 10. Chronicle said Tuesday, the segment would air Jan. 19. Manners never go out of style in pre-teen dance classes

Senior High, admits some of the dances are out-of-date.

"We'll probably use them when we're old," he says.

However, Jennifer Chastain, disagrees politely.

"It's fun to see everyone doing old-fashioned dances a[illegible]ve receive prizes if we win contests."

Teaching manners as well as dance technique is one of the fundamental objectives of the class, Mason explains.

"There is a time and place for certain kinds of behavior. If kids are prepared for certain social situations, they'll be comfortable. Kids need this kind of experience that promotes respect and courtesy in a world that promotes disrespect and violence," Mason says.

Participants are taught how to make formal introductions. They learn the importance of a firm handshake and direct eye contact when meeting people.

There is a time and place for certain kinds of behavior. If kids are prepared for certain social situations, they'll be comfortable. Kids need this kind of experience that promotes respect and courtesy in a world that promotes disrespect and violence.'

— Dance instructor, Donald Mason

They are also taught dance essentials about dance positions, seating, posture, polite acceptance and refusals of dances, and thanking the partner at the end of a dance.

For some of the young dancers, etiquette can come in handy.

"They teach you how to be nice if you are paired off with someone with whom you're not comfortable," Deer Hill student, Elizabeth Ingber, 11, says. "I pretend to be nice while we're dancing."

Parents, who generally sit together in the back of the room while the class is going on, take an active role in the program. They are asked to chaperone on a volunteer basis and they participate in the introductions aspect of the program.

"Being in a social setting away form home and school makes it special for them," says Diana Kinch, whose 12-year-old son Andrew takes the class. She stresses the emphasis on manners is especially important as the children "learn how to treat one another respectfully and be sensitive to one another's feelings."

Mason says that teaching manners as part of the party dancing classes can help parents.

"When kids say to their parents they think that learning about manners is silly and then they come here and realize manners are being used, this reinforces what the parents are teaching at home," he says.

Mason sets the example. When a student acts up, he disciplines with respect.

After spotting a dancer kick another student during a recent class, he handled the situation quickly.

"You are learning about being polite here," he said in a raised voice. "Kicking does not fall under this category."

The students seem to respond.

"He is strict, but you learn more because he is strict," says Kerry Sullivan, 12. "If you fool around he might make fun of you, but he does this in a funny way, like asking you to show everyone how to do a dance if you weren't paying attention."

For some youngsters, there are added benefits to the dance classes.

"It's fun to get to know people," says Mark Verrochi, 12, who attends Dexter Academy.

"I met Zoe Davis here," he said beaming.

Dance Party invitations will be sent to all Cohasset seventh and eighth graders in late summer, Mason said. Interested families can also watch for notices in the Cohasset Mariner in August.

Hingham rail tunnel on track. . .

Grimes said.

With the legislature's support and the consensus agreement in town, Grimes said of the tunnel, "if it gets the railroad built, the price is small."

But for Nancy Buckley, founder of the anti-train group the Coastal Coalition, the price is too high and any delay on the MBTA's part, is a victory for her group.

Instead of restoring train service to the South Shore, the Coastal Coalition suggests increased and improved busing and boat service into Boston.

According to Buckley, the best thing to come of the legislature's commitment to funding the tunnel, is the omission in the final bill of an earlier provision pushed by McDonald. In its original form, there was wording with the bill that prevented the construction of any other train projects in the state until ground was broken on Greenbush.

"That was like holding the state hostage," said Buckley, who maintained that the Greenbush line might never be built.

Buckley said members of the Coalition actively lobbied the senate subcommittee to have the wording removed.

"As far as we're concerned, there is no need of the train being built at all," she said, adding "we say there is a viable alternative at one tenth the cost of the train."

Buckley said that the MBTA delay on choosing a transportation option is due to their recent decision to do a financial feasibility study on all the alternatives.

"We feel strongly that in the study, the numbers will speak for themselves," she said, adding "it's to our advantage."

The Coalition plans to continue to educate people, Buckley said.

"If people really listen and understand that what we have to say is all documented, they'll change their minds," she said.

Freda is appointed

Selectmen unanimously appointed Ellen Freda, 62 Howe Rd., to fill a vacancy on the historical commission this week.

"It was a tough choice, there are three good people," Selectman Merle S. Brown said. He said that Freda's expertise with the national register of historic places was the deciding factor.

that with a civilian dispatcher there would be no change in level of service because the times the firefighter on the desk is called away have been "minimal," Sullivan said.

Mahoney stressed that currently there is no dispatcher per se. All firefighters and EMTs are trained on the phones so if there's a fire call, an EMT can take over the phones and visa versa. In cases when all hands are needed in an emergency, the phones can be switched to the police department.

Under the new plan "we're down a guy," Mahoney said. When the ambulance is out of town with two firefighters, there would be two not three men left at the station to respond to another call.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said 177 times last year, while the ambulance was out of town on a call, three men were left at the station when a second or simultaneous call came in. He explained without that fifth man on duty, call backs would increase.

"A loss of one pair of hands is dramatic in a small department," he said.

Selectmen said with E-9-1-1 and a trained civilian dispatcher, the town will be able to provide more efficient public safety services.

A civilian dispatcher, who will never leave his or her post, will also free up the police sergeant who operates the desk in that department and enable the town to put another uniformed officer on the street, selectmen said.

They will seek town meeting approval for start up funds to pay for training of the dispatcher and police officers who will be able to operate the system until a dispatcher can be hired. The hiring of a civilian dispatcher will also require a change in the personnel by-law at town meeting.

Selectmen also plan to meet with firefighters to discuss their concerns about reduced manning levels.

With Enhanced-9-1-1 a caller's address automatically appears on the control board at the dispatch center. Last fall, selectmen hoped to set up a regionalized dispatch service with towns in the proposed Seaside Fire and Rescue District but those efforts were rejected when the other towns opted to go ahead with individual plans. Five area towns, including Cohasset, have been studying regionalized fire service for about two years.

Doyon's contract renewed

Selectmen renewed Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon's contract for a year from 11/14/94 to 11/13/95 with a salary of $56,266, the contract said.

Warrant to close

The deadline for submitting articles for the annual town meeting warrant is Jan. 9. The special town meeting warrant will be open from Jan. 30-Feb. 6., selectmen said.

Selectmen accepted with regret the resignation of David L. Punch from the Council on Aging this week. Punch has moved to Scituate they say was the company's lack of attention to Cohasset's power problems.

Saying the board was being too nice, Selectman Peter Pratt pressed for the town to seek a full state investigation. But his views were tempered by his fellow selectmen who opted to see what Eastern Edison has to say first.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said at the meeting he will insist on a complete analysis of what occurred from Eastern Edison.

"If we don't get that, we will take additional steps," he said.

After the Jan. 17 meeting, selectmen plan to send Edison's response to the DPU regulators for analysis.

According to officials at Eastern Edison, 20,000 customers were without power as a result of the northeaster. The company brought in outside crews and in many of the company's 17 communities, crews worked through the night, a company spokesman said.

Osgood thanks parents

The Osgood PSO wishes to thank all parents who volunteered to cook, bake and decorate for the annual Holiday Luncheon for the Osgood staff. The event was festive, the food was delicious and the efforts of parents were much appreciated by the teachers and staff. The PSO wishes everyone a happy holiday.

Open House at Derby

Derby Academy in Hingham invites parents to an Open House on Tuesday, Jan. 24, in the school library, beginning at 9 a.m. The snowdate is Thursday, Jan. 26.

The focus of this year's Open House is grades four through seven, but parents interested in other grades are welcome to attend. Headmaster Edward Foley and Jay Sadlon, admissions director, will be on hand to talk with parents. Visitors may tour the campus and observe classes.

Derby Academy is an independent day school for boys an girls in pre-kindergarten through grade 9. Currently 245 students from South Shore communities are enrolled at Derby.

For further information or to reserve a place at the Open House, call the school office at 749-0746. The registration deadline for first-round applications is Feb. 1.

After-school recreation

The Recreation Commission will be holding after-school programs at the Deer Hill School from Jan. 23 through March 17, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

They include team games/sports on Mondays (ages 4 and 5); hoop games/skills on Tuesdays (grades 4-6); low-organized games on Wednesdays (ages 4 and 5) and arts and crafts on Fridays (ages 5-8).

The Cohasset School Department conducts an after-school day-care program at the Deer Hill School until 6 p.m. each school day. If day-care is needed prior to, or following, recreation programs, registration may be made on an hourly-rate basis. Registration forms are available at the Deer Hill and Osgood school offices.

Osgood children enrolled in the day-care program at the Deer Hill School will be bused to Deer Hill at the conclusion of the Osgood school day at 2:50 p.m.

The registration deadline for the after-school recreation programs is Jan. 18. Classes run for seven weeks unless school is cancelled due to inclement weather.

The cost for a three-day program is $60/1 child, 2nd child/$30, 3rd child/$15. The fee for a two-day program is $45/1 child, 2nd child/$23, 3rd child/$12. For a one-day program the cost is $28/1 child, 2nd child/$15 and 3rd child/$9.

by Sallyann Chatterton

Cilla Goff received an early Christmas present this year, and she made it herself! She made the dean's list at Boston College, Carroll School of Management for the first semester. Cilla, a CHS 1994 graduate, is a freshman at B.C. who obviously studied hard, and we all applaud her for her hard work.

And, lots of you remember Sacha Ordelheide! Well, he studied real hard too, and he made the dean's list at Boston University. Sacha is a sophomore, he graduated in 1993. We all give you a "high five" for making it in a difficult world of studies — keep it up!

This is the time of year when all of us are writing zillions of thank you notes, there is one more note that must be written — to John Raftery. You remember John, he was the business manager at Cohasset High School for a long time. He is a great guy, and undergoing a tough battle with his health as this is being written. He is at South Shore Hospital, in Emerson, room number 437, and would love to hear from you. Send him a note, and a prayer. What a gentleman!

JoAnn Fictner wants YOU! She is at it again folks, she is going to be the director and choreographer of the "Congo Capers II." Can you sing? How about dance? Sure you can! Auditions will be held Feb. 14 and 15, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Cohasset High School auditorium, and showtimes will be held May 19 and 20, at 8 p.m., at the CHS auditorium. Jo always does a fantastic job, and with Bob Leavitt as the musical director, you know it will be an awesome production. More info will follow, just as soon as we receive it.

We have one more date for you to circle on your calendar, Saturday, Jan. 21. At 7:30 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church, you will be treated to a local folk trio called "PB&J." This acoustic sandwich consists of two guitars and three voices.

The group takes its name from the first initials of its members: Priscilla Swift of Concord, Bob Wareham of Bedford Rd. in Carlisle and Jon Verdun of Weymouth. They are a very talented trio that specializes in wonderful harmonies, well-written songs and tasty treatments of folk favorites. You will adore them! The admission is $5, that includes coffee and desserts! Should be great, and we cannot forget it! As the kids say, "be there or be square."

Gosh, we must have a talented town! The Cohasset Dramatic Club wants to make an announcement too. They are holding auditions for its second production of the season, "The Importance of Being Earnest" to be held Sunday, Jan. 8, at 4 p.m., and Monday evening, Jan. 9, at 8 p.m., at the Cohasset town hall auditorium. Performances are scheduled for late March and early April. Director Sally Wright will be looking to cast five men in age from 25 to 60 or older, and four women ages 18 to 60. Ages are approximate, so don't let the numbers stop you! For more information, call production manager Angie Walsh at 383-2151.

We certainly hope that Ozzie Ingram is feeling better as he reads this, he is the true meaning of "a pillar of the community!" Ozzie always has been known for his ability to give to others, be it through the church, the driving for cancer patients, the food pantry — you name it, he is always there! Get well soon!

Wasn't it nice to see the skaters buzzing around at the Common last weekend? Yes, it means that winter has set in, but it is much to the delight of the children! Besides, we haven't had to shovel yet (hope I'm not like the cover of Sports Illustrated), don't want to jinx us!

Have you seen Rocky Laugelle around town since his retirement? He looks super and we'll bet he is working even harder since he "stopped working." You know Rocky, he cannot stay still, always wanting to help others.

Hope that all went to the various sports events that went on during the vacation, the kiddos did a super job to represent us — during their vacation they worked very diligently; we thank you for your efforts, you were super!

Please call with your news!

The Grand Tour —— with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

Doesn't Judy and Daniel Cellucci's home at 21 Bates Lane look just lovely decked out for the recent holiday season? Here at the The Grand Tour, we wish all of you a very Happy New Year. Please make one of your 1995 resolutions to give me a call at 383-2863 so we can share with Cohasset Mariner readers some of those special hometown touches that make Cohasset such a unique place to live! Young artist recognized

Kirsten Pounder, a former Cohasset High School student, along with other artists enrolled in the UMass at Dartmouth's Artisanry Program, fabricated an ornament for the White House Christmas tree.

In August, the school received a letter from White House Social Secretary Ann Stock inviting UMD students to handcraft "unique ornaments" no more than eight inches high that weighed no more than twelve ounces. Ornaments could be constructed from glass, paper, metal, ceramics or fabric, revolving around the theme of "The Twelve Days of Christmas". Kirsten designed a metal ornament for the tree.

Pounder works primarily in silver, brass and copper, designing fine jewelry and larger sculptural pieces.

Kathleen Dodd

Kathleen (Fuller) Dodd, 82, of Cohasset, died Dec. 23 at the Mediplex in Weymouth after a long illness.

She was born in Hartland, Maine and lived in Newton before moving to Cohasset more than 50 years ago.

Mrs. Dodd, a homemaker, was a former secretary and longtime member of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset and a member of the Cohasset Historical Society.

She was a graduate of the Amy Sacher School of Art in Boston.

Mrs. Dodd was the wife of the late Richard Dodd and leaves two sons, Jonathan Haven of Florence, Mont., and Daniel Haven of Redland, Calif.; a sister, Jane F. McLean of Cohasset and a nephew and niece.

A memorial service was held in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Burial was private.

Drama workshop offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department is sponsoring a Drama Workshop for children ages 7 to 12 on Saturday mornings from 9 to 10:30 a.m., beginning Jan. 21.

The class will meet at the Cohasset Town Hall and will be taught by Grace Deveney. The fee is $24 per student for the entire six-week session.

The class will be offered again in the spring. Children will put on a skit for parents to show what they have learned.

To register call the Recreation Office at 383-6791. Non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis.

Pierson hosts SSH staff

Wigmore Pierson, host of the cable television talk show, "Pierson to Person," shown on cable channels 3 and 53, will feature South Shore Hospital's Dr. Jeffrey Johnson, Dr. Jeffrey Ericksen and Maureen Murphy, certified nurse midwife, on his Thursday, Jan. 5 show, at 8 p.m.

Dr. Johnson is the chairman of the Department of Emergency Medicine, Dr. Ericksen is with the Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation Department and Maureen Murphy is a member of SSH's medical staff.

The medical specialty of each panelist, general medical issues facing society and the South Shore Hospital will be the topics of discussion.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience of any "Pierson to Person" show, and should arrive at the North Scituate Continental Cablevision studio by 7:30 p.m.

For further information call the show's executive producer, Robert Belliveau, at 545-2500.

Actors, director needed

Hull Performing Arts, Inc. is holding auditions for its production of "Is There Life After High School?" on Tuesday and Wednesday, Jan. 17 and 18, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the offices of Charisma Realty, 115 Nantasket Rd., Hull. Please come prepared to sing. For further information call (617) 925-9086 or (617) 278-3356.

Hull Performing Arts is also looking for a director for its summer show. Performances are slated for the second and third weekends of July, with an eight-week rehearsal schedule. "Pink Thunderbird" is the show currently under consideration, but the group is open to other suggestions.

For further information call Siobhan McGurk, business manager, at 278-3356 days, or 925-3395 evenings. Hull Performing Arts is a public educational charity, dedicated to presenting quality community theater.

Auditions for play slated

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold auditions for "The Importance of Being Earnest," its second production of the season, at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium on Highland Street on Sunday, Jan. 8, at 4 p.m. and on Monday, Jan. 9 at 8 p.m. Performances are scheduled for late March and early April.

Director Sally Wright is looking for five men ranging in age from 25 to 60 or older and four women ages 18 to 60 to audition for roles in "Earnest."

For further information call production manager Angie Walsh at 383-2151.

Williams art on display

Claffy Williams, a Cohasset resident, will have her oil on monoprint artwork, "Marino In Trouble III," displayed in a juried exhibition, "Works on Paper," which will feature art by members of the Boston chapter of the Women's Caucus for Art. The Boston group, founded in 1972, is committed to educating the general public about the artistic contributions of women.

The exhibit may be viewed in the Dana Art Gallery at Dana Hall School in Wellesley from Tuesday, Jan. 10 through Friday, Feb. 3. An opening reception for the artists and public will be held on Tuesday, Jan. 17, from 6 to 8 p.m.

30 artists, including ones from many Greater Boston communities and several Boston city neighborhoods, were selected to participate. Their works represent a wide range of styles and many diverse techniques using paper.

The Dana Art Gallery is open Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and on Wednesday and Friday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. For further information about the exhibit call (617) 235-3010, ext. 174. For information about the WCA call (617) 739-2971 or 566-4749.

The exhibit and reception are free and open to the public.

Sign up for story hours

Registrations are currently being accepted for the winter series of preschool story hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The series will begin on Jan. 12 and 13 and continue for six weeks.

Sessions will be offered at 10 a.m. on Thursdays and Fridays. Each 45-minute program will consist of several picture book stories and simple fingerplays, songs and crafts. Children must be at least 3-1/2 to participate. To register call the children's librarian at 383-1348.

Garden Club meeting set

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting on Tuesday, Jan. 24, at the Walton Rodgers Hall, St. Stephen's Church, at 9:30 a.m.

The program will feature a speaker from the Nature Conservancy. Coffee will be served at 9 a.m.

Some of the names may be familiar to you, others may not be. But the people attached to these names all have one thing in common: they wrote at least one letter-to-the-editor in 1994.

A few wrote thank you's to the people of Cohasset or organizations for their help or support; others complained about a decision or lobbied to have their views considered; while still others educated us about programs, problems or activities.

But no matter what the subject — putting pen to paper to share your views with your fellow citizens is important. The First Amendment is close to our hearts here in the newspaper business and at no time do we appreciate it more than when ordinary citizens, like those listed here, take advantage of their Freedom of Speech. And what better vehicle is there than your local paper?

The editorial pages of the Cohasset Mariner belong to you. It's where you can speak out or just say thank you to a citizen or organization that went beyond the call of duty.

Sometimes it takes a good dose of courage to let your voice be heard but we think it's worth it. Often one voice is all the inspiration needed to propel others to action.

To those of you that have thought about writing and haven't, please reconsider. To those whom we hear from on a regular basis, keep writing!

There are lots of weeks to go in the New Year — which will be filled with events, decisions, and happenings that have an impact on Cohasset.

Let us hear what you think in 1995.

— Mary Ford

Chamber thanked for $2K donation

Dear Keith:

I write on behalf of the Harborfest Committee to express our deepest thanks to you and to the members of the Chamber for your most generous donation of $2,000.

As you well know, Harborfest has struggled for the past four years to raise seed money to support its activities. Although we have been able to 'keep our head above water' through this period, it has always been after the fact that we were able to raise money for our various expenses.

Your most gracious donation takes the pressure off of the Committee and will enable us to purchase supplies and provides with 'deposit' money for bands, entertainment, etc.

The foresight of the members of the Chamber in providing us with this seed money is to be congratulated and proves once again the positive impact of the Chamber in caring for their community.

Once again, thank you, the members of the Chamber, for enabling us to continue bringing many of Cohasset's organizations and townspeople together during Cohasset's biggest fun-filled weekend "Harborfest."

Cohasset Harborfest

political notes

Victory for seniors noted

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray recently praised the decision by the state's Insurance Commissioner to reject the Blue Cross/Blue Shield 20.3 percent rate request for Jan. 1, 1995, for Medex Gold Medicare supplemental insurance.

Rep. Murray, along with other legislators, had recently announced their intention to pass a law blocking the increase. She called the Commissioner's decision a victory for seniors.

Despite the Commissioner's recent decision, BC/BS may submit a new rate request at any time, with specific stipulations attached. After July, BC/BS may come back with any proposal, including another hefty rate hike request.

Rep. Murray says she would reactivate the freeze effort if the company decides to make another excessive request.

Murray wants full funding

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of the Third Plymouth District has joined 91 legislators in calling on Governor William Weld to fully fund regional school transportation aid in this fiscal year 1996 budget request. The amount needed to meet the state's longstanding obligation to fully fund this account would be $13.8 million statewide for the 86 regional and regional vocational schools across the state.

The South Shore Vocational Technical High School would receive an increase of $36,256 under full funding.

Gymnasts' depth is too much for Scituate

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The two biggest obstacles the Cohasset High gymnastics team expected to face this season was the ability to nail their balance beam routine and beating the Scituate High squad.

Cohasset may not have landed its best beam routine yet, but the Skippers were strong enough to remain undefeated (4-0) with a huge Dec. 22 victory over Scituate High.

The win was especially gratifying because Cohasset recorded its best score of the season (120.75) against a Sailors' squad it tied for the South Shore League championship last winter.

"I'm hoping the second time around they'll be very confident," said head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni. "And we will have the home advantage in our own gym."

Cohasset's team depth was the key to the meet as the Skippers swept the bars, vault and floor exercise.

Ardizonni said there was a different feeling heading into the meet as compared to the two teams' second meeting last season when Scituate won to clinch a tie for the SSL title.

"They (Cohasset) knew they had beaten them in the first meet so they would wind up in a tie," Ardizonni said. "This year I told the girls not even to look at them but to focus and concentrate on what they had to do.

"This year it was Scituate who was watching us."

What is particular scary about Cohasset this season is the potential for an elite score once the girls become more comfortable on the beam. The Skippers actually wound up with solid scores on the beam even with the falls. Once the scores begin to improve, the overall team mark could be in the 125 area, Ardizzoni believes.

Erica Hettstrom, who finished second to the Sailors' Ginny Stone (8.5), had two falls but still wound up with a more than respectable 7.5. Third-place finishers Jodi Colwill and Megan Pratt also had falls, though their 7.25 score was solid.

The Skippers held a 1.9-point lead after the first event of the night with Hettstrom scoring a 7.30 on the uneven bars for first and Tara Hettstrom tying Scituate's Ginny Stone in third (7.00).

Experience, not victories, key in hoop tourney

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

When Cohasset boys' basketball coach Ron Ford entered the Skippers in a Division I tournament over the winter holiday, his team didn't need a win. What Cohasset needed was experience against top-notch teams.

They got it.

The Skippers came away from the tournament with their record lowered to 4-2. But they also came away all the wiser against the upgraded competition.

In the first game, played in Brockton's stadiumesque gym, Cohasset faced the top-ranked squad in the state, the Cambridge Ringe & Latin Falcons and wound up with a 68-57 loss.

The Falcons came out of the gates quickly and built a 12-0 lead. But Cohasset's co-captain Joe Slotnick pulled up and sank the jumper. Dorian Bryant extended the Skippers' run with an offensive rebound and put-back. Co-captain Pete Bishop muscled in a pair through heavy traffic and then picked up four more points to pull the Skippers within five.

Forward Jarred Hardwick skyed for a rebound and launched an outlet pass to Tom Allen for a lay-up.

At halftime, the Skippers trailed by a score of 38-23. But Jim Magner nailed a three-point shot and Bryant and Brow each had offensive putbacks to put CHS within eight points. Brow popped a jumper and Tom Allen grabbed a Bryant pass and took it to the basket over two defenders. Cambridge finally put a stop to the 9-0 Cohasset run with a lay-up but Hardwick answered with a finger roll of his own.

Despite strong hoops by Bishop, Matt Pierce, Bryant and Slotnick, and outscoring the Falcons in the second half, the Skippers couldn't pull off a victory.

Ford summarized the 68-57 loss: "Cambridge was quicker. They beat us on the boards and they beat us on penetration. But I'm proud of them. We didn't quit and that's the most important thing. It was a good experience."

In the second tournament game, the Skippers squared off against the Durfee Hilltoppers. They fell to Durfee by a score of 58-38. Durfee was led by the hot outside shooting of Dan Couto.

Bryant grabbed an Allen pass on the break for the game's first points. Brow

Just a few random thoughts while cleaning out the '94 Extra Points file.

*The MIAA should be praised for instituting penalties for taunting during games and for dropping the state tourney qualifying mark to 50 percent.

However, they have dropped the ball big time in another area.

There is still no shot clock for boys' basketball, despite having one for the girls' hoop.

Once again, fans will be subjected to coaches slowing down play in order to keep things close against tougher teams.

If I have to sit through another 32-31 game, I will lose what's left of my mind.

* The new Boston Garden (excuse me, Shawmut Center) is set to open in the fall of '95. But with the Bruins on strike and the Celtics only playing so-so, there should be a lot of open dates for Larry Moulter and the boys to fill.

It would be a great PR if more high school games were played at the new Garden.

Sure, the state championship basketball and hockey games are already played there, but I think it would be nice to have the sectional championships and selected tournament games played there as well.

More high school games would allow more people to see the new facilities and would lead to younger fans getting more excited about the Boston sports scene.

It would be a no lose situation for the new Garden.

* Now that the Patriots are out of the NFL playoffs, attention can be focused on more important sports matters such as the baseball and hockey strikes, the great success of local college teams (UMass and UConn for example) and the great achievements by area high school athletes.

How many times over the last month did you read stories or watch TV pieces about Bill Parcells and his testy attitude during press conferences.

The Patriots coach being in a bad mood was the biggest sports story out there every day? I don't think so.

Instead of state tournament soccer games, high school football Super Bowls, or exciting local college games, the so-called 'elite' media brought us endless stories about Parcells yapping at reporters for asking "dumb-ass" questions. Wow what journalism.

In the glory days of sportswriting with Grantland Rice and Ring Lardner, reporters wrote stories about action on the field and didn't even seek quotes from players or coaches afterwards.

C'mon guys, go to a high school or college game once in awhile instead of transcribing the tape of a press conference and inserting your by-line.

* The Cohasset High boys' basketball team is for real.

I know the Skippers had a tough time during a Holiday tourney against the likes of Brockton and Cambridge, but the explosive team, under coach Ron Ford, is the early season favorite to win the SSL title and the Division 3 crown, and with good reason. They have talent to spare.

Last week the Skippers didn't play a good game at all, and still beat Scituate

Gymnasts' depth is too much

Holding a 1.55 lead at the half, Cohasset began to pull away with the vault. Ardizonni put her coaching tactics to use by having her gymnasts avoid the twists in their vaults. The degree of difficulty wasn't as high as it usually is but the girls landed their vaults clean.

Scituate chose to keep the twists in their routines, and even with the difficulty involved, not all of them were landed as cleanly as they could have been.

Colwill won the event with her 8.05 and the team's performance gave Cohasset a 1.9-lead heading into the floor exercise.

Stone edged Erica Hettstrom in the event, 8.45 to 8.4, with Tara Hettstrom sealing third (8.35). In the all around it was again Stone over Erica Hettstrom, 31.85 to 30.7. Tara Hettstrom finished fourth in 28.95.

stuck the jumper from eight feet for another pair. After a three-point play at the other end by Durfee's Colin Christ, Beezer took the ball strong to the hole for his first bucket of the game. The Hilltoppers started to pull ahead and led 20-14 at the half.

A 7-0 Durfee run was interrupted by hoops from Brow and Bryant. Hardwick broke up another run with a pair of free throws. The Hilltoppers again gained ground against the Skipper despite a three-point play and a lay-up by Bishop and a slashing drive to the hoop by Hardwick.

Dave Nothnagle knocked down two free throws and Jerome Marion hit a three but the game was out of reach.

Step aerobics signups

Registrations for step aerobic classes, held at the Cohasset Town Hall on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6:30 p.m., are currently being accepted. The 60-minute class, led by Dr. Mary Jane Butera, includes basic stepping, stretching and toning and the workout can be adapted to all fitness levels.

For further information or to register for the class, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Drop-ins are welcome ($5 per person).

High, the second best team in the SSL by a 54-41 final.

The game was close until two monstrous dunks by Jarred Hardwick put the game out of reach in the final minute of play.

Only two things can derail the Skippers: injuries and overconfidence.

Ford will take care of the overconfidence side. Lady Luck will have to handle the injuries.

* It is already January and there hasn't been any snow yet.

I was all excited about writing stories about skiing and sledding on the South Shore. Now, I'll have to write stories about how there is no skiing or sledding on the South Shore.

But I shouldn't speak so fast. When I was in high school we had a snow storm during April vacation that wiped out a week's worth of baseball games.

Mother Nature has yet to be heard from this winter, but I'm hoping she doesn't have much to say.

* Lastly, writing fresh and original sports columns every week can be difficult, but writing with the Cold From Hell is even worse.

If anyone who has read this far has a remedy for the Cold From Hell, call me, FAX me, chicken soup me. Anything.

I'm dyin' over here.

—David McKee

If bandwagon fans aren't the most irksome people on this planet I'd really like to know who are. And with the ups and downs of Boston's professional sports teams, this area is loaded with them.

For high school kids and younger it is understandable. But when you see a man in his 40s wearing a Patriots team jersey with the mighty No. 11 on emblazoned on the front it is pretty pathetic.

With the football season over, at least for Parcells and the rest of the Patriots, you can bet your last souvenir dollar that the fickle fans of New England will hop on the Jose Canseco bandwagon next.

And try not to give me that worn-out argument that the fans no longer care about baseball and won't return to Fenway this spring. After a long, cold winter baseball fans come alive when that first article appears in the Globe and Herald of the annual packing and shipping of equipment to Florida.

The spring is a rebirth and the fans will be aching to see Canseco, Vaughn and Clemens limbering up in February and March.

Besides, people have short memories. Baseball has stood the test of time for years. This strike, as serious as it is, will eventually be a faded out bad memory of things gone wrong for one season.

With players and owners alike losing millions of dollars because of the strike, some sort of agreement will be made in time for the start of the '95 season.

My only worry is that Canseco will line a pitch so hard off the Green Monster, Fenway's fabled left-field wall, that it will collapse on the 20-something crowds heading to the clubs on Lansdowne Street. And then he'll beat the throw stealing second on the first pitch.

I love the night life baby!

Sales of Cohasset homes healthy in 1994

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

While 90 home sales in Cohasset in 1994 fell behind the 101 that changed hands in 1993, the average price of a house in town cracked the $300,000 level last year.

According to Gail Bell of Home Center Real Estate, the average price of a house in Cohasset was $315,207 in 1994, compared with $297,634 in 1993, and $268,724 in 1992.

Pat Villani of the DeWolfe real estate office said the real estate market in Cohasset is not as active as it is elsewhere because the town is smaller with fewer homes, and residents will add onto their homes rather than move.

"There are a lot of people who go to Cohasset and stay there for years," she said.

Both real estate agents noted the intimacy of a small town and the desire for waterfront property, and the small school system that make Cohasset attractive to prospective buyers.

Chris Ford of Hallmark 100 said Cohasset has a prestige that prospective buyers notice when comparing average house prices in nearby towns, particularly Hingham, Norwell, and Duxbury.

He has also observed that there is more "internal movement," with more Cohasset residents moving within the town, and often those who "keep their eyes open" waiting for particular houses to come onto the market.

While there are few condominiums in town, those

No lights edict turns some off

Frustrated by having the plug pulled on efforts to light the town common for the holidays, about 60 local citizens signed a petition which will put the issue before the people at town meeting.

Stephanie Church, program director of the South Shore Community Center, said she was surprised when requests to light trees on the town common for the Center's December Jingle Bell Walk were denied.

"That disappointed a lot of people — so I asked how to go about getting permission," she said.

Church said the Community Center has lights available and that trees around the duck pond were lit years ago.

She said it would be nice to have more lights there throughout the holiday season but she was especially frustrated when a request to light the trees for just two

Train experts compete for contract

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

There's no shortage of environmental companies lining up to help the town walk through a state feasibility study on restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad project.

Officials from three firms tried to persuade selectmen this week that they can provide the best analysis of the Environmental Impact Report (EIR) to be released this spring.

Last fall, special town meeting voters appropriated up to $15,000 to hire a consultant to help the town comment on the EIR, which covers six transportation alternatives including restoration of train service to the South Shore.

Once the EIR is released, the public has 45 days to comment on the report.

Five companies submitted bids, three of which came in at or below $15,000 and were invited to make presentations this week.

Cohasset's week

Bill Baird to step down

William Baird will step down from the health board before his third term expires for business reasons, he said this week.

By press time Wednesday it was not clear exactly when Baird's resignation would be effective. He initially planned to step aside at town meeting in order for the seat to be on the April 1 town election ballot. But Town Clerk Marion Douglas said this week that Baird would have to resign by Feb. 9 — the closing date to take out nomination papers for the position to appear on the ballot.Town counsel is looking into the matter, Baird said.

Nomination papers for the town election on Saturday, April 1, are available at the Town Clerk's office through Thursday, Feb. 9, until 7 p.m. that evening.

All nomination papers should be submitted to the registrars of voters for certification of names and addresses on or before Monday, Feb. 13, until 5 p.m.

Open seats include two positions for three years for selectmen; one position for three years for assessor; two positions for three years on the school committee; three positions for three years as trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; one position for three years on the Board of Health; one position for three years for water commissioner; one position for five years for sewer commissioner; one position for three years on the planning board, one position for five years on the recreation commission and one position for five years on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Fifty signatures are needed to have a name placed on a ballot. Campaign forms must be filled out.

As of Tuesday, Jan. 10, Selectman Merle S. Brown, 546 Beechwood St. and Sewer Commissioner Henry A. Rattenbury, 7 Briarwood Lane, had taken out nomination papers.

Roofers injured in fall

Edward Duff, 33, of Milton and Dennis Alden, 23, of Marshfield fell off the roof at 82 Jerusalem Road when the aluminum-type walkway and rigging collapsed last Wednesday (Jan. 4), police said. The men are employed by SRS Construction of Abington.

The men, who suffered multiple trauma, were transported to South Shore Hospital. The Medivac Helicopter was not used.

Duff was treated and released. Alden was scheduled to be discharged Tuesday (Jan. 10), a hospital spokesman said this week.

B&E suspect arrested

Following a joint investigation with Scituate, Scituate police have issued a warrant for John C. Cottle, address unknown, for breaking and entering. and Cohasset police arrested Amy Guinee, 24, whose last-known address is 21 Ripley Road, Cohasset, and charged her with receiving more than $250 in stolen property allegedly obtained in a Dec. 17 burglary of a Cedar Street home. The about $2,500 in stolen computer equipment was recovered, police said. Guinee was arraigned on the charge Jan. 7 with a further court appearance set for Feb. 17.

Accountant's budget ok'ed

Selectmen will recommend approval of the town accountant's proposed FY'96 budget to town meeting.

Michael Buckley is asking for $93,969 up from $84,250 appropriated in FY'95, which ends June. 30.

Salaries per contracts and a request for a digital-network computer printer make up the increase, Buckley said. The general expenses line of the accounting budget is level funded to FY'95 levels.

Buckley's budget must still pass muster with the advisory board.

Bill payments approved

Selectmen approved payment of the following bills this week: $2,929.50 to town counsel Richard A. Henderson for services rendered the town in December; $1,058 to the BSC Group for monitoring progress at the high school tennis courts pending sign off by Gary Vanderweil of the athletics field committee; and $6,500 to P.B. Starr Contracting for painting town hall.

Overtime gets nod

Selectmen approved Tree & Park Supt. Peter Laugelle's request for a transfer of $1,455.73 to his budget to cover overtime incurred during the Christmas Eve nor'easter.

Ambulance billing update

The fire department billed $7,231 for 23 ambulance transports in December. During that same time period, $6,237.93 was collected, clerk Jane Henderson said in a written report to selectmen.

The department maintains a 92 percent daily collection rate. One hundred and sixty-six (166) actual transports remain unpaid for fiscal years '93, '94, and '95 for a total of $42,804 owed, Henderson said.

Beggan is appointed

Town moderator George Marlette recently appointed Robert Beggan, 20 Old Pasture Rd., to a three-year term on the school facilities committee.

SWITCHING TO INDUCTION PICKUP

A good number of theaters, museums, and houses of worship are already outfitted with induction loops that deliver desired sounds to people wearing hearing instruments with microphone-telephone ("M-T") switches. Instruments with this feature have induction pickup (T-coils) that enable them to directly receive signals coming via magnetic energy from the theater's or museum's audio source. By switching their hearing instruments to induction coil sound pickup, listeners have the advantage of hearing only sounds from the magnetic sources without any competing background noise. Thus, they are able to hear the speech of speakers or sound tracks without having to deal with annoying background noise.

It is nice to know that some public places are making it easier on people who wear hearing aids. Now you can enjoy these places more and not have to worry about not being able to hear. Come in to THE HEARING CENTER, and let us show you these amazing hearing aids. We provide routine examinations, free hearing aid cleaning and maintenance, diagnostic physician follow-up audiogram reports, and a complimentary battery club membership program. Please call us at 1-800-339-9316. Our offices are conveniently located at 306 Washington St. (Rte. 53), Norwell, and 470 Southern Artery (Rte. 3-A), Quincy. Mastercard and Visa are accepted We are a healthcare provider for Pilgrim Health Care and Medicare. Medicaid and most major insurance plans are accepted, and we will help you process the forms.

P.S. The recently passed Americans With Disabilities Act guarantees hearing impaired people access to effective communications and activities in public places.

New board dispatched to oversee E-9-1-1 operators

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The town will advertise for four full-time civilian dispatchers to man the Enhanced 9-1-1 emergency telephone reponse system which is scheduled to come on board in Cohasset this spring.

Selectmen may also set up a committee probably consisting of the police chief, fire chief and selectmen chairman to oversee the civilian dispatch department.

The $108,000 projected civilian dispatch budget — including four full-time salaries at $21,000 each and money for part-timers, overtime and uniforms — will be partially offset by not filling three vacancies on the fire department. Not included in the $108,000 is money for training police officers to fill in once E-9-1-1 is set up until fiscal year '96, which starts July 1.

Last week selectmen said using civilian dispatchers would enable the fire department to run with four and not five men per shift and would free up the police sergeant currrently on the desk so the police department could put another uniformed officer on the street.

This week the board hashed over how to handle policy issues regarding the dispatchers, who will respond to both police and fire calls.

"This is not a criticism of one shade of blue over another," Selectman Peter Pratt said.

"But the bottom line is that civilian dispatchers will sit within the within the confines of the police department."

Pratt, who raised the issue, said there could be potential problems with the "creation of a cross-discipline integrated culture."

Initially Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan disagreed but softened his opposition after a general discussion.

Selectmen reached a consensus that a mangagement dispatch committee to set policy for the dispatchers might be the best route. They also noted that the position of civilian dispatcher must be added to the personnel by-law — a process to be handled by the personnel committee.

Half casual labor request buried

For the first time in years, Tree & Park Supt. Peter Laugelle could get some casual labor this summer to help out with maintenance of town-owned parks, fields and cemeteries.

Laugelle requested 16 weeks of casual labor (one person at $5.50/hour) which would add $3,520 to his Tree & Park Department budget but selectmen decided Monday to cut that in half.

They also denied his request to pay the cemetery superintendent Herbert L. Marsh's $24,478 annual salary completely out of taxation. Laugelle, who also heads the cemetery department, hoped to raise his cemetery budget by $5,000 this year. He wanted to use all of the $5,000 in cemetery trust fund money — which usually goes toward Marsh's salary — to add a line item to his budget which would pay for materials and some casual labor for the cemetery department. Selectmen authorized $2,500 for fertilizer, seed, and loam for maintenance of town cemeteries with the remaining $2,500 going toward the superintendent's salary.

Selectmen also voted to combine the tree & park and cemetery budgets — although line items for each will remain — so that Laugelle could use the casual labor as needed in either department.

Laugelle also asked for $3,520 to pay for 24 large arborvitaes at Woodside Cemetery to block off trailer trucks parked at the old Rte. 3A skating rink property, now owned by Paul Barry.

Money for the arborvitaes will come from an article approved at last year's town meeting to pay for cemetery improvements and not out of this year's operating budget, selectmen said.

Laugelle's combined $126,638 budget request also goes before the advisory committee before being presented to the annual town meeting.

Officials hope garage gets go ahead at town meeting

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

A town committee is gearing up to ask town meeting to construct a garage to house the public works departments.

After withdrawing a similar warrant article last spring when it was revealed the site they had selected was part of the town's ground water protection zone, committee members began looking for an alternative site. They propose constructing the garage on Cedar Street, at the landfill on a site abutting a maintenance shed owned by the golf course.

The proposed facility would allow the highway department, tree and parks department and civil defense committee to consolidate their equipment into a single, secure area. Currently town-owned public works vehicles, equipment and materials are scattered at sites all over town. Locations include the highway garage, the water department, the sewer department, the landfill, the Haggerty building, Deer Hill School, the high school, Sestito's garage, the old West End fire station and the Milliken field.

'I can see stars through the roof.'
— Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield on the state of his equipment garage.

Some of the storage facilities are so decrepit, the equipment may as well be stored outdoors.

"I can see stars through the roof," Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield said of the crumbling three-bay garage housing some of his equipment.

Architect Garry Gardner and Engineer John Modzelewski could not give an estimate on the cost of construction at Thursday's meeting. According to Gardner, most of the cost will be in site preparation. The figures depend on the amount of ledge to be removed, the cost of bringing water service to the site, whether a retaining wall will need to be built and what kind of septic system the health board will require for the facility.

Although Modzelewski hopes to have some hard figures on-site preparation cost by the end of January, Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield estimated the new site could cost the town almost double the $450,000 price tag for the gravel pit site.

Preliminary designs include toilet and shower facilities for employees, inside and outside storage and a mechanic's pit for repairing town vehicles, in addition to garage and office space. The building will be constructed of pre-engineered steel and contain a mezzanine level for additional storage. Office space for both the highway and tree and parks departments is included.

Based on the vehicles and equipment the departments currently own or anticipate acquiring in the near term, the committee estimates the garage must contain a minimum of 16,000 square feet. Litchfield and Laugelle have asked the architect and engineer to plan for future expansion in designing and siting the garage.

According to committee member Terry Atherton, the garage facility is long overdue. Not only will it enable the town to preserve and protect valuable vehicles and equipment, having them located on one site will enable town employees to perform their jobs much more efficiently.

Atherton said public works employees must spend too much time shuttling between the various sites where their vehicles, equipment and materials are stored.

Hefty fines levied for shellfish violations

By Rob Rogers
Mariner staff

Scituate selectmen have voted to raise the maximum fine on clamdiggers who exceed their limit from $50 to $250.

The vote follows a Dec. 8 incident in which four North Shore clam bandits attempted to steal 720 pounds of shellfish from the recently-reopened clam flats on the Scituate side of Cohasset Harbor.

"The maximum fines currently in place, which were designed in the 1950s, don't seem to be deterring the professionals from the North Shore," said Scituate clam warden Joseph Strazdes. "A $50 fine doesn't seem like much of a risk to someone who can get $2,000 for the clams he's digging."

Strazdes recommended that selectmen change the system of fines currently in place to a range of penalties from $50 to $250 per offense, to be imposed at the discretion of the shellfish officer.

Selectman Donald Brown expressed his concern that the range of fines would give accused clam thieves the right to appeal their penalties once caught, causing unnecessary legal hassles for the town. Board chairman Joseph Norton replied that a single penalty for all captured clam grabbers would not best serve the interests of justice.

"You wouldn't want to apply the same penalty to someone who was caught with two clams over the limit as you would to someone who had two bushels over the limit," Norton said.

The state must approve the $250 maximum penalty before it becomes law. The penalty will only be applied to those who have purchased town licenses to dig for clams and have gone over the legal limit. It is a felony to dig for clams on town property without such a license.

Four men from Revere and Lynn were cited by Cohasset, Scituate, and state environmental police on Dec. 8 for removing 14 1/2 bushels of clams from the Bassings Beach area on the Scituate side of Cohasset Harbor, in violation of the eight quart per-person limit on clams mandated by law. Police believe that closures of North Shore clam bed · drove the four men, at least one of whom had a commercial digging license, to pilfer clams from the South Shore.

Safe Homes workshop set

The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee will host a Parents Workshop for 1994-95 "Safe Homes" families. The workshop will be held at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Jan. 23. at Cohasset High School. Parents will have the opportunity, through open discussion, to better utilize the networking capabilities that are provided by "Safe Homes," said coordinator Ted Carroll. The 1994-95 "Safe Homes" directory will be available at the workshop.

Her hair design philosophy has the same "clean" basis as that of Frank Lloyd Wright, her hair designs are natural and timeless. Although they are informal and "country" they are as elegant and sophisticated as a Navajo Indian weaving or a Georgia O'Keefe painting.

Local Charter School opens for a look-see this month

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner staff

In a state house ceremony last month, the South Shore Charter School received its charter and administrator Timothy Anderson said interest in the innovative new public school based in Hull is growing.

More than 90 families in ten South Shore Towns including Cohasset, Hingham, Scituate, Marshfield, Norwell and Weymouth have made applications to the school which will open in September 1995. The school will open with 150 students enrolled in grades K-2 and 6-12 and Anderson said he intends to add grades 3,4, and 5 in 1996, increasing the enrollment to 400.

Anderson expects about half of the school's enrollment to come from the Hull Public School system. Charter school students from Hull will be able to ride Hull school buses and students from out of town will carpool, he said.

As part of the State Education Reform Act of 1993, 15 new Charter Schools will open across Massachusetts this year and Anderson says they will become educational models for the future.

But this new form of public education has some school officials worried.

The way the state has organized the program, the money follows the students, which means that some public schools will lose not only students but also money when the Charter School opens.

Running the school for the first year will cost about $960,000 and the cost for each student is $5,100, Anderson said.

Schools Supt. Stephen Hart noted that there are concerns in Cohasset about losing money along with students, but said thus far he hasn't heard anyone express an interest in sending their children to the school.

As far as academics are concerned, Hart maintained that Cohasset High School does some of its own "experiential learning," similar to the Charter School's initiatives through its "Excel Program."

Hart, who has worked with Anderson in the past said he would be willing to work with him in the future.

"If there are things we can work on cooperatively, that can be mutually beneficial, we should look at that," Hart said, adding the new school may help some schools respond to some of their own programs and make changes where needed.

Anderson said the school — which is governed by the same rules that regulate all state public schools — will be open to all interested South Shore students and will involve project-based learning that will help students grasp all academic disciplines and career competencies, skills that prepare students for college, the work-place and life.

Four themes will shape the curriculum at the school: communications, the environment, human services and entrepreneurship.

The curriculum is comprehensive and rigorous and will prepare students in the arts and humanities, math and science, language and communications and life skills, Anderson said. Students will work with parents and teachers to develop an educational contract and learn at their own pace, he added.

As students master subjects and complete the required examinations and written assignments, they will be asked to make a presentation to a panel of peers and teachers.

According to Anderson these "Exhibitions of Mastery" challenge the students and celebrate the excellence of student work.

The community, and outside partner organizations like Suffolk University and parents are involved in a big way, Anderson said.

In fact, parents are encouraged to be in contact with the school on a weekly, if not daily basis via E-mail, phone or by just stopping by the school to visit.

"It's important to have an adult in the life of each student, to be involved in their education as an advocate and a helper," he said.

In addition to certified teachers coming to the Charter School from other public schools, Anderson said that part-time teachers who are active members of the work force will offer students valuable insights into the market place. And Anderson said that professors from Suffolk University will also teach classes giving students a head start toward higher education.

All grades, test results, student work and teacher comments are accessible by computer in what Anderson calls an "interrelational data base." Parents can check their children's progress by switching on their

Charter School offers college courses

After receiving its charter last month at a state house ceremony, the new South Shore Charter School, which is slated to open in Hull this September is busy hosting open houses and accepting applications from interested families in at least 10 South Shore communities.

The school's founder Timothy Anderson of Hull, said that in addition to the question-and-answer sessions provided for interested parents and students, the open houses provide workshop opportunities to older students to put together resumes, which are required for acceptance to the school. The open houses will run on Saturdays throughout January and February and Anderson said that state secretary of education Piedad Robertson will be on hand for a press conference at the Charter School on Jan. 18 from 3 to 5 p.m.

Also starting in January the Charter School will offer its "Great Explorations" enrichment programs for adults and students on Saturdays, vacation weeks and during the summer.

By working in conjunction with Massasoit Community College, one of the school's partner organizations, the Charter school will offer eight winter-spring courses to students, adults and seniors. The course offerings cover subjects like Gerontology, General Psychology, English Composition, Children's literature, the History of Modern Russia and are free to high school juniors and seniors who can earn both high school and college credit. Registration for these afternoon and evening courses is Jan. 17.

For more information call Timothy Anderson at (617) 925-3078 or the Division of Continuing Education at Massasoit's Brockton Campus at (508) 588-9100 ext. 1309.

Grant awarded to conservatory

South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., owners and operators of the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset and the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis, has awarded the final installment of a $200,000 challenge grant to the South Shore Conservatory, with campuses in Hingham and Duxbury.

The grant, which has been fully matched by the Conservatory, will be credited to the capital campaign of the Ellison Center for the Arts in Duxbury, a project of the trustees of the South Shore Conservatory.

"Supporting the Ellison Center helps us fulfill the mission of the South Shore Playhouse Associates," said Bruce Tuthill, president and treasurer of Playhouse Associates. "Our goal is to funnel the proceeds from the Music Circus and Melody Tent to other non-profits who support arts and education on the South Shore and Cape Cod. The Ellison Center fits that profile perfectly and we are pleased to be able to assist them."

"We are most grateful to the South Shore Playhouse Associates for their generous contribution to the capital campaign," said Barbara Clifford, Conservatory trustee and Campaign Chair of the Ellison Center for the Arts. "Their early support of the Ellison Center project encouraged the trustees, volunteers and staff alike. It has brought us much closer to our groundbreaking, scheduled for spring of 1995."

The Ellison Center for the Arts is a consortium of the South Shore Conservatory and the Duxbury Art Association. Both are non-profit organizations dedicated to providing broad based community access to quality education in the arts. Together they have a 100-year history of bringing arts and education to the South Shore.

The Ellison Center will be housed in the former Holy Family Church on St. George St. in Duxbury. The existing site requires considerable renovation. The rectory will be demolished and a new two-story wing added to the existing brick church structure. The grand opening of the Ellison Center is scheduled for Dec. 1995. For more information, call (617) 934-2731.

Charter School opens

home or work computers and can make comments of their own, Anderson said.

Extended school days and school years, negotiable for parents and students will allow for flexibility in learning and a summer camp will provide employment opportunities for some students and offer community service projects for students.

Applications for the new school are being accepted until March 7, and enrollment will be decided by a random lottery drawing in April and if one member of a family is chosen, all of his siblings are also accepted, Anderson said.

Open houses will be held on Saturdays throughout January and February and interested student and parents will be interviewed during the spring. Anderson said the open houses will give parents and a students a chance to meet teachers and learn about the school before making a decision to go there.

"We want to be sure that there is a good fit and that they know what they're getting into," Anderson said.

In the meantime, Anderson said he's looking for a lot of cross involvement and cooperation with other public schools. At this point, the relationship with Hull public schools is an adversarial one, in which the public Charter School is seen as a competitor rather than another positive educational option.

Following a series of meetings between officials of both schools, Hull's school committee agreed to cooperate, on the sharing of files and transportation issues. Both public schools will share buses and Anderson said that special ed teachers from both schools will work together on students' individual education plans.

"Now that we have the charter and people realize that their support (or lack there of) won't make or break us, the best interest of the students comes forward," he said, adding "that's why these people went into education in the first place. When things calm down, they get back to that."

Anderson said that while he has had inquiries from as far away as Sharon, the vast majority of the charter schools students will come from Hull, with the rest coming from Hingham, Cohasset, Weymouth and other nearby South Shore towns.

"I'm ready to talk with any school committee or councils about the school," he said, adding "they think they know us, but they don't."

Santa paid a visit to the Dooley household Christmas Eve this year, did he ever! Welcome Conor Joseph Dooley, the son of Lisa and Kevin Dooley of 124 Doane St.

Conor was born at 5:17 p.m., Dec. 24, weighing in at 7 lbs. 12 ozs.

His maternal grandparents are Mary and Joseph Foreman of Quincy, and Roseann and Joseph Dooley of Dennis. Another boy to continue the Dooley tradition in Cohasset — super athlete, super person — how wonderful! Congratulations to all of you, we cannot wait to see Conor "around town."

Did you know the fifth graders at Deer Hill School recently collected over 400 pounds of coats to send to the needy Native Americans at Pine Ridge, S.D., and that Robert O'Hayre, sales manager of Packaging Products Corp. of New Bedford, arranged for the shipping boxes? Peter Clougherty of Eastern Connection Operating Inc. provided delivery services free of charge? We applaud these men, the teachers and the students who organized the project and collected the clothing, also those of you who donated coats and money!

I sure had a busy weekend, Mimi and I took a train to Philly, then went to Mt. Laurel New Jersey, to visit my sister, Ricki, who was there on business from Hawaii. We also managed to visit Holly Pompeo and see her place, and went to one of the biggest Malls, the Franklin Mills Mall in Philadelphia, then hopped back on the train and returned home. What fun we had! Ricki sends her love to all, of course, and hopes that maybe she can return for her class reunion this summer.

Drivers needed for cancer patients

An appeal for volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment has been issued by the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society.

This agency operates a free transportation service out of a Road to Recovery "hot line" headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham, serving patients in Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

"We have had a large number of requests for transportation in recent weeks and have been hard-pressed to respond," Susan McVeigh, Cohasset, chair of the Service Committee of the unit, said. "With cold weather coming on and volunteers going South for the winter we are anxious to increase our pool of drivers so that we will not have to turn down any callers. Many patients have no other way to get to hospitals for treatments that often require them to go daily for a period of 5 to 7 weeks."

Patients are referred to the service by doctors, social workers and hospitals and the "hot line" is often called on to provide rides for up to 10 patients a day.

Volunteers are asked to pledge one trip per month, are covered by blanket insurance and may be reimbursed on a mileage basis if necessary. Arrangements can be made for new volunteers to team up with experienced drivers to learn the procedure.

For further information call the Hersey House office, 749-2535, or the Unit office, (617)341-4210.

Not for public reading

You live on a residential street — a nice, quiet place to raise your family.

But what you don't know is that your town plans to re-route some bothersome truck traffic off a major thoroughfare and onto your peaceful road.

And if it weren't for the press demanding a copy of the streets planned as alternate truck routes listed on a "confidential" memo — you may have found out too late, after the deed was done.

As bizarre as this may sound — it did happen in another town when a reporter covered the department of public works there.

Although we sympathize with public officials' concern about allowing access to public documents — the alternative is frightening.

We urge our elected and appointed officials to educate themselves about the public records law, which provides all of us with an absolute right of access to public information.

The Massachusetts General Laws states that any records made or received by a public official or even a secretary acting in an official capacity are public.

There are narrowly construed exemptions to the law such as medical files of personnel and some police investigatory materials.

Correspondence the selectmen receive and generate and any documents discussed at an open meeting do not qualify as exemptions. Any denial must detail the specific legal basis for withholding the requested materials, according to the Attorney General's office.

We raise the issue because we often find ourselves asking for documents and receiving the pat answer: that's not for public reading.

This week in Cohasset, Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan was upset that a letter was published in the Mariner which the author had addressed to him.

"I think that certain documents which come before the board should not end up in the Mariner," he said.

Mr. Sullivan felt there ought to be some records not for public viewing and was concerned that citizens who write letters to the board may not realize that they could end up in the paper.

For the record: if the subject of the letter (in this case it was the train) is newsworthy and the content isn't libelous — like all newspapers — we either excerpt parts of the letter for use in stories or publish it in its entirety if space allows.

In Hingham obtaining preliminary budget sheets lately from the executive secretary has been like pulling teeth. The fact that the budgets are drafts and subject to change doesn't exempt them from the law.

The Attorney General's office says that government officials must supply requested records within a reasonable time.

When in doubt, the Attorney General's office suggests that custodians of records call for an advisory opinion. The number is 617-727-2832.

It's important to remember that the relationship between government and newspapers is an adversarial one. We are not a newsletter of the town government.

We promise to continue to enthusiastically pursue access to public records and will demand that town officials follow the law. We hope that town officials will comply and not be obstructionistic.

Democracy isn't always convenient and we're not trying to win any popularity contests.

But when you begrudge the press — just think about that 18-wheeler coming down your quiet street.

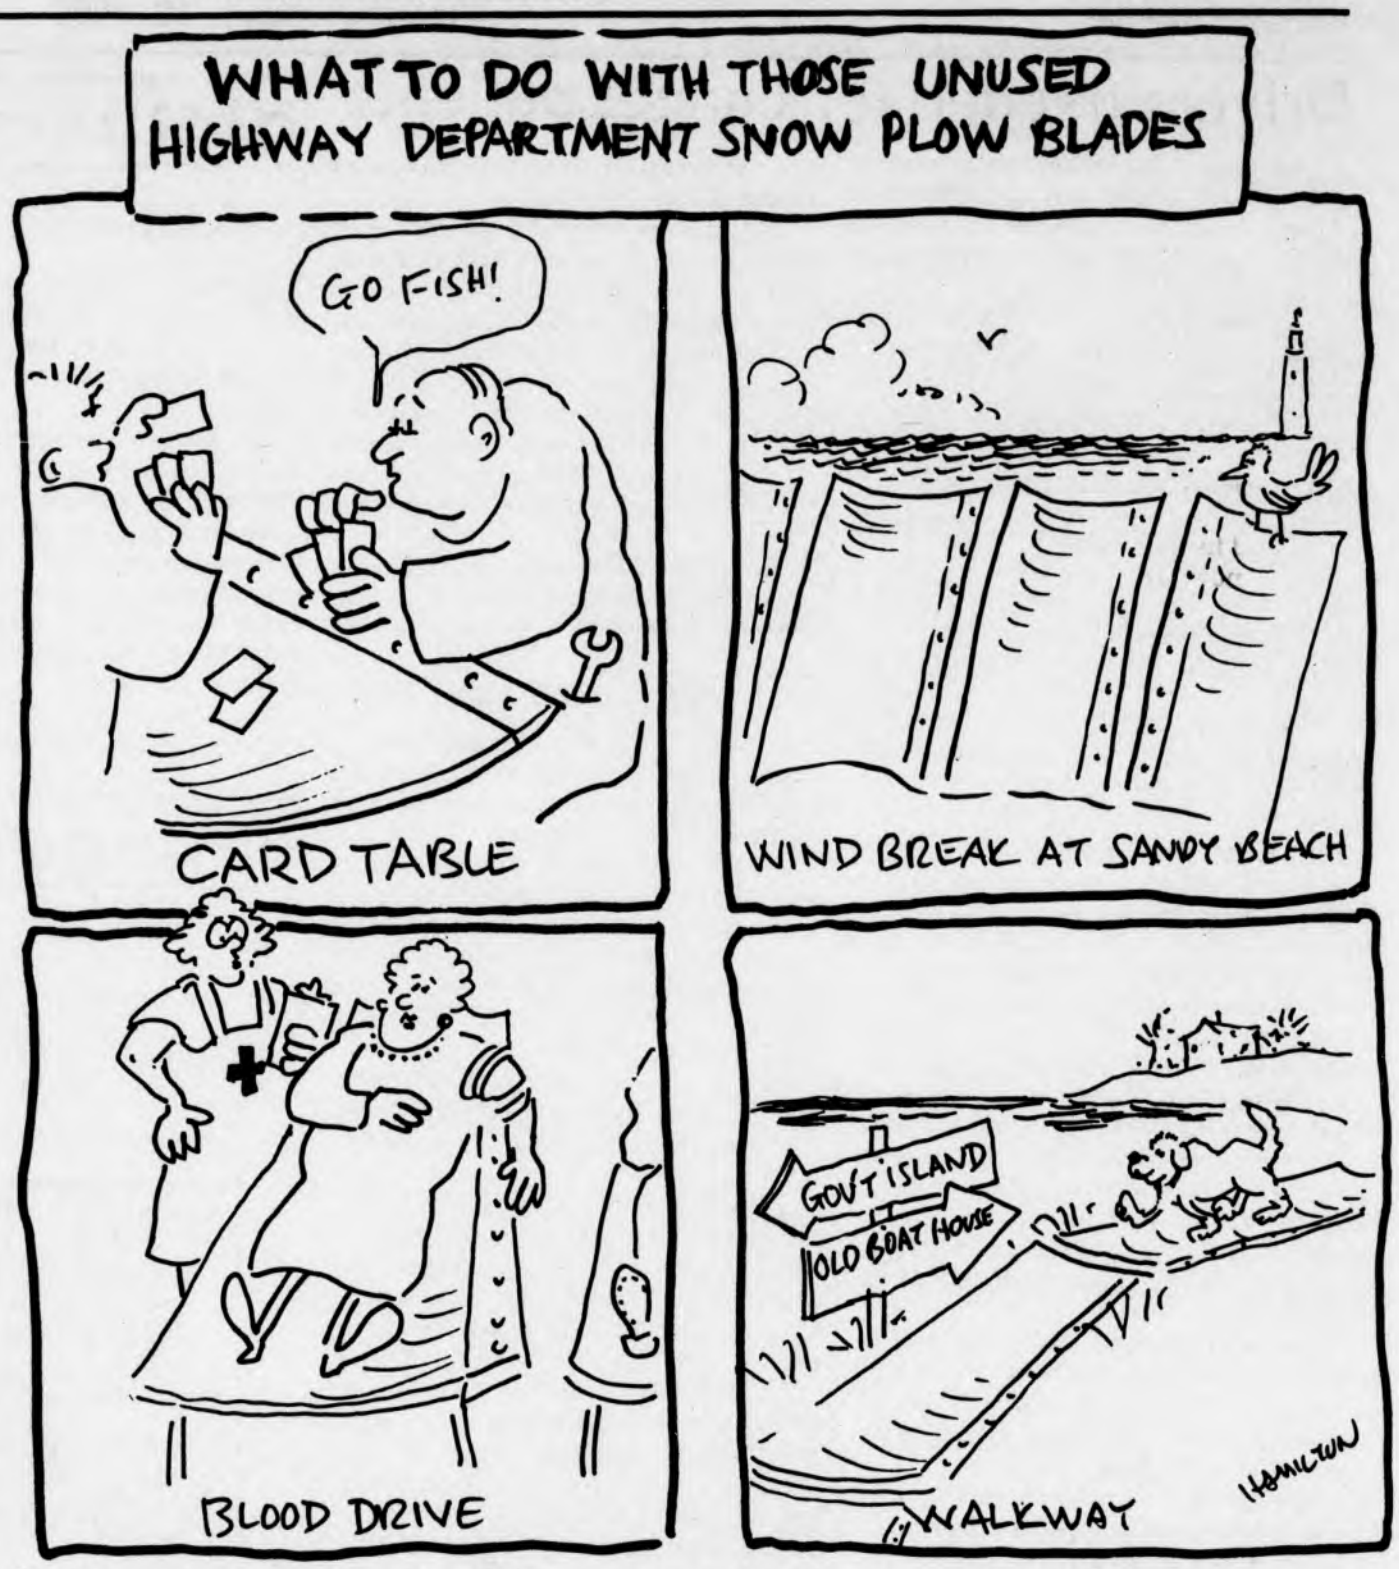
News stringer wanted

If you can string words together and have an interest in town government — then news reporting might be for you. The Cohasset Mariner seeks a part-time news reporter to cover one and sometimes two government committee meetings a week. Call Mary Ford at 749-0031, Thursday or Friday if interested.



Adjustment staffer needed, council says

By Connie Afshar
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset High School Council held its last two meetings of 1994, Nov. 15 and Dec. 6. As usual, the Council discussed a wide range of interesting issues which impact high school students.

Topics discussed during the November meeting included the school's Code of Conduct, dress codes, the impact on the Jr./Sr. High School of the proposed town-wide school restructuring and discussion of a possible new attendance policy in conjunction with the revamped vacation schedule approved by the school committee. This Council continued discussion over the role of community service in a student's education and possible changes in the Jr./Sr. High exam schedule.

Dec. 6, CHS students actively involved in community service joined the Council to talk about the role of the program. They gave an excellent presentation on volunteer work currently being done by members of the student body. They described some of the many activities undertaken by the CVS program and the Project Piano update

Thanks to the generosity of supporters both in Cohasset and out of town, contributions to Project Piano are now well over the half-way mark, reaching towards the $7,500 goal. The baby grand piano will be housed in the auditorium of the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School and will be available for all school functions and community productions.

"I've been overwhelmed by the response," said Ann Whiteley, coordinator of the project, "particularly during the holiday season when I realize budgets are tight. I've appreciated how many people have encouraged me in a non-financial way as well. It's a pleasure to be involved in this project."

The target date for completion of fundraising is Feb. 14 in order to secure the price. As well as contributions of $50 for many of the keys, donations for the following have already been provided: bench — $200, lid — $200, music holder — $150, three legs at $100 each and two of three pedals at $250 each. A contribution of $50 will secure a key but Whiteley would like to assure the community that a donation of any amount will be gratefully acknowledged.

Checks made payable to Project Piano may be mailed to Ann Whiteley, 35 Pond St., Cohasset. All donations are tax-deductible.

Band coverage was great

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Deer Hill School Music Parents' Association, I would like to extend a sincere thank you to Alan Chapman and Mary Ford of the Cohasset Mariner newspaper for their superb coverage of the Deer Hill School Band as they prepared for their holiday concert.

The interest shown by the Cohasset Mariner toward the Deer Hill Band is appreciated by all.

McDonald may seek to regain senate seat in '96

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

Brian McDonald, who lost his state senate seat by a narrow margin to Republican Bob Hedlund last November, is not leaving public life and may even run for the senate seat again in 1996.

"I've been at this too long," he told The Cohasset Mariner in his first lengthy interview since the election. "I intend to be very active in politics on the South Shore and in Weymouth."

Right now, he says he isn't sure whether he will make a fourth run for the Plymouth-Norfolk senate seat. He lost in 1990, won in 1992, lost again in 1994.

"I don't know," he said. "I'm certainly going to look at it. The margin of the loss was only four tenths of a percentage point."

McDonald says he feels that Independents and dissident Democrats ganged up with Republicans in an opposition campaign that was "orchestrated" in a political conspiracy led by an old opponent, former State Rep. Bob Ambler.

"I don't think it's a secret at all that Bob Ambler holds me responsible for him having lost in 1990 and I think it was political payback time," he says.

The opposition, he says, did "a very creative job" of exploiting his separation from his wife, Libby, and "turning it into something that wasn't." He and Libby are in the midst of an "amicable divorce."

"You can't fight that sort of thing," he says.

But one thing is sure. McDonald is not about to give up his long fight for the restoration of commuter service on the Greenbush line.

"I'll remain active with the Back on Track people and see if we can move this project along," he says/

Following is the text of McDonald's interview with The Mariner:

Brian McDonald

The Cohasset Mariner — What are you going to do now? Are you through with politics?

McDonald — No. I've been at this too long. I've been involved in politics since 1969. I don't intend to pull away from it at all. I intend to be very active in politics on the South Shore and in Weymouth.

The Cohasset Mariner — What are you going to do for a living?

McDonald — I don't have anything definite yet. I'm talking to a couple of people. Nothing to be made public yet. I'm not concerned. I'm viable. Economically, I'll do fine.

The Cohasset Mariner — Will you be running for the senate in two years?

McDonald — I don't know. I'm certainly going to look at it. The margin of the loss was four tenths of a percentage point, I believe. 408 votes out of 70,000 cast. So I'm certainly going to look at it. I think that in the two years I was in the senate I was able to represent the district well and effectively. The needs of the district were always my top priority.

The Cohasset Mariner — Are you examining any other offices?

McDonald — Not really. But you never know. I've been involved in politics a long time. I believe I've been constructive and positive and had a good influence on the town of Weymouth when I served locally and on the South Shore when I represented the district. So I'm not going to rule out any office.

The Cohasset Mariner — Why do you feel you lost?

McDonald — I think I can make up an endless list of contributing factors as to what could have caused 210 people to vote for me as opposed to Bob Hedlund. The leadership battle obviously was a major factor. The Democratic primary in Weymouth was a major factor. That [illegible] way the business operates.

As you know, Libby and I are separated and we're going through an amicable divorce. We've been separated now for two years. How do I communicate that to the general public? Do I take out a newspaper ad? What do you do?

The Cohasset Mariner — How do you counteract Howie Carr, huh?

McDonald — Yeah. My enemies in Weymouth did a very creative job of taking a situation between Libby and myself — we both get along and respect each other very well — and turning it into something that wasn't. You can't fight that sort of thing. I see and talk to Libby almost every day. The most important thing to she and I is that Colin has two loving, caring parents. He's my top priority and always will be. We had prepared a press release two years ago and never put it out. We said 'Why do that?' That personal situation had some impact on things as well. Libby was very supportive. She had a lawn sign and a bumper sticker. We get along great. Just we, as two adults, reached a decision in terms of what was best for each other, individually.

The Cohasset Mariner — How much of a factor was Forsythe?

McDonald — It's difficult to prove but I think the whole thing was orchestrated; it was all part of the grand scheme of things all the way down the line, the Democratic primary opponent, the independent opponent, and obviously the Republican effort was there working together for a long period of time. They threw everything at me that they had and they didn't beat me in Weymouth. The commuter rail issue cost me a lot in Hingham and Scituate and in Cohasset, the a certain degree. So I feel good about how things went in Weymouth considering everything but the kitchen sink was thrown at me. We waged a very competitive campaign.

The Cohasset Mariner — Is there anyone leader of the conspiracy that you can name?

McDonald — I don't think you have to back very far in Weymouth politics to know that I had a very competitive race with a longtime office holder in the town of Weymouth and I don't think it's a secret at all that that Bob Ambler holds me responsible for him having lost in 1990 and I think and I think it was political payback time. Again, I understand the business and that's all well and good. I can certainly say that during my time as a local official and state senator, I never did anything that I didn't believe was in the best interests of the people of this district and in terms of what I was able to do in my first two years in the senate — not to disparage my successor. I wish him all the luck in the world in the interests of the district — I don't think he'll be able to match my record in terms of bringing home state resources which we have had an inability to do for a long, long time. Interestingly enough, 10 days or two weeks after the election, the Patriot Ledger does a story on how come the South Shore doesn't have legislative clout. Possibly if they had done that story a week before election I wouldn't have lost. It's true. You need to have clout to get things done and I just happened to be fortunate enough to be in position to have some influence within that body. Fifty million dollars for commuter rail, the tunnel into Hingham. I still get croaked in Hingham and commuter rail was a major reason why. Would I be better off taking the $50 million and spreading it around the town that I was going to do good in? Possibly. But I wanted to do everything I could commuter rail. I got $3 1/2 million in dredging money for the towns in this district. We haven't seen dredging money in Weymouth in nearly 20 years. I got over a half million dollars for the town of Weymouth alone. I got $100,000 in the transportation bond bill to try to improve Route 18, which is a horror show. I got $100,000 to look at safety improvements to Route 228 in Hingham. Frank Hynes has been successful for 10 years getting language and funding on the House side of the budget for an off-ramp on Route 139. It's never made it through the Senate. Well, I got it through the Senate to provide access and help solve a horrible traffic situation at the intersection of 139 and the off-ramp.

The Cohasset Mariner — What single accomplishment are you most proud during your term in the Senate?

McDonald — I was involved in so many things, it's hard to pick one thing out. I took a lot of heat for chairing the Ethics Committee, while not holding any meetings. It was impossible to communicate with the electorate that the Ethics Committee is an internal investigatory, disciplinary committee that meets when a person is brought up on charges. There was no one brought up on charges so we didn't have any meetings. I had talked earlier on that I wanted to put some teeth in the Ethics Commission as part of ethics reform legislation. That commission and the campaign laws have been strengthened and I was part of that.

It permitted me to participate fully . . . I probably worked harder than other senators who just chaired their committees and virtually don't go to other committee hearings. I went to my Transportation Committee hearings. I went to my Commerce & Labor Committee hearings. I went to my Taxation Committee hearings and my Local Affairs Committee hearings. When I was named to chair the Insurance Committee, I took a very pro-consumer approach. I know it was argued that I was in the tank. I was taking all sorts of special interest money. If anybody thinks that I could be brought for a $120 donation to a fund raiser, that's ludicrous. But as chair I took some very positive, strong steps for pro-consumer legislation.

In terms of local aid, when I went there very few legislators, at least senators, came with a recent history of service at the local level. I came virtually right out of the Selectmen's office and into the State Senate. I brought a real perspective about local government and I argued vociferously in Democratic caucuses and with leadership about the need for increased local aid and the need to provide MWRA rate relief. Local aid and MWRA rate relief, I'm proud to say we were able to make some major progress in both of those areas.

The Cohasset Mariner — Is there anything left undone that would would like to remain involved in?

McDonald — I'm deeply committed to the restoration of the Greenbush line. I think the people who are opposing it were for the most part direct abutters. By and large, they almost want to kill it altogether. I never thought I'd be able to get $50 million in state-funding for the tunnel under Hingham but when the Selectmen of Hingham and the Citizens Advisory Committee unanimously voted to support a short tunnel under Hingham, I thought it was encumbent on me to use my position as vice chairman of the Transportation Committee to do what I could to deliver on that. The restoration of commuter rail has obviously cause political problems for me in Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate where there has been some opposition developing.

The Cohasset Mariner — Will you be actively working for the restoration of commuter rail?

McDonald — I'll remain active with the Back on Track people and see if we can move this project along. The voters of the South Shore overwhelmingly support it twice. The town of Hingham narrowly defeated it the last time it was before them. That was in 1991. The talk of commuter boats from Hingham to Boston make sense nine months out of that have been created by the conversion of large homes attract buyers who want a unique condominium property, rather than a large complex, Villani said.

The real estate agents also noted the continued attraction to the Fair Oaks subdivision off Sohier Street.

Ford of Hallmark 100 has tracked this development since it was first built in 1970. At that time, the homes at Fair Oaks were offered at $70,000. Over the next 13 years, the houses increased in value to $160,000.

However, during the real estate boom of the mid-1980s, the prices increased 150 per cent, Ford said, passing the $400,000. Over the next five years, with an overall economic downturn, the prices of homes at Fair Oaks moderated to $318,000.

Now, the prices there are on the upswing again. Ford said those houses are valued at $360,000 and are likely to reach the 1987 levels within the next two years.

Bell said many buyers like the neighborhood atmosphere of the Fair Oaks subdivision. There are not many subdivisions in town, which adds to the continued attraction.

She also noted that, as in Hingham, there is much pent-up demand for houselots for new construction. However there is little availability in Cohasset, which can add to the attraction of the town.

Ford said he is regularly contacted by people interested in houselots.

He also noted that there continues to be interest, particularly among "empty nesters," for detached single family homes such as 100 Pond Street and Wheelwright Farm

All local real estate agents contacted this week said there is no shortage of buyers. All say the present low inventory is probably the only reason there has not been more activity in the real estate market. They expect that with growing confidence in the economy, there is the potential for a strong market in the spring and summer.

a bid of $14,500; Diamond Environmental Associates of Newton bid $15,000; and Hoyle, Tanner & Associates, Inc. of Boston bid $13,000.

Officials from the three firms under consideration said they would seek public input and meet with town officials to get an idea about what the issues and concerns are and seek mitigation opportunities. All also said they had expertise specific to railroads and major public works transportation projects.

Camp, Dresser & McKee has worked with the town for more than 10 years analyzing EIRs on the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill.

Other bidders included Atlantic Designs Inc. of North Dartmouth at $30,000 and Gantes, Leighton & Assoc. of Providence, RI, at $42,500.

Selectmen took the matter under advisement and will make a decision within about two weeks, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said.

hours during the Jingle Bell Walk held before Christmas was denied by the selectmen's office.

"The town common is a public place and everyone should have a say about it," Church said.

So within a day, she had 60 signatures on a citizens' petition article for town meeting.

Selectman Jane Goedecke mentioned the article at this week's board meeting. She said that several people mentioned to her this week how beautiful the single lighted tree was and that it would be "really bad" to have both.

Church said Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon sent them a letter saying one tree was all that was going to have lights.

"If the town says no, fine," Church says. "But sometimes a few people who don't want things rule for all.

"I couldn't believe we couldn't have lights for just a couple of hours. But they said 'No Way.' It was that open and closed."

Selectmen voted to light a new evergreen which was planted on the Common this year. Last year, a cut tree was brought in and decorated with lights.

Social Awareness Club. The Council was told the voluntary CVS program currently has 61 members whose activities have included the Jane Doe Walkathon for Battered Women, volunteering for Rosie's Place, participation in the SHARE program, the annual food drive for Wellspring in Hull and more.

Principal Meg Gallagher also presented various service learning options to the council. The students and Council discussed the merits of voluntary versus mandatory community service programs at CHS and the general consensus was in favor of keeping the existing voluntary status. However, it was decided that in order to be as successful as possible, volunteerism should be encouraged in the schools from a very young age. It was also determined there should be a paid staff person in place at CHS to oversee community service activities.

At the December meeting, the need for a full-time adjustment counselor at the high school was discussed. Information gleaned from surrounding school districts which have adjustment counselors, as well as interviews with mental health professionals, have reinforced the Council's goal of hiring a full-time adjustment counselor for the Jr./Sr. High.

The next meeting of the Council is at 7 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 17 in the high school library. The CHS Council is committed to enhancing communications between the high school, school committee, parents, students and the community at large. Council meetings are open to the public.

the year. They don't make sense during the winter months. To make a commuter transit system work it has to run every day on time. Commuter boats won't work when you have 15 or 20-foot seas. You can't be delivering people into Boston or they'll be very green by the time they get there.

The Cohasset Mariner — Billy Bulger as Senate president figured prominently in the campaign. Would you have voted for him last week?

McDonald — I was up there last week I certainly would have. The Senate president was very good to me and to the district. That would have weighed in my decision.

New library exhibit

Kimberlee Alemian's, "Interior/Exterior Perceptions", a collection of oil paintings, will be on display at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library through March 8. The collection features many distinct views of Martha's Vineyard. Along with lighthouses and beach walks, there are familiar intersections in Edgartown. The core of the collection features inviting, color-rich interiors Alemian paints in a style reminiscent of Fairfield Porter.

A Cohasset resident, Alemian is presently executive assistant to the director at Boston University School For the Arts. She has exhibited in galleries on Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket, at the Milton Art Museum, in Boston, for the Dance Umbrella Benefit, and the Helen Bumpus Gallery in Duxbury. Prior to assuming her current post, Aleminan was an associate professor at Boston University. Ms. Alemian is a South Shore Art Center Gallery artist.

Story hour begins again Thursday and Friday at 10 a.m. Children must be 3-1/2 years of age. Call 383-1348 to register your child.

The Friends of the Library wish to thank all who have contributed to the annual membership drive. Your contributions are invaluable to your library.

Blues/Jazz band to play

Susan Tedeschi and her "Best of Boston" band will light up the Chart House from 8 p.m. to 12 a.m., Friday, March 3 at the PSO's annual Silent Auction.

Tickets are available for $20 and cover admission, light hors d'oeuvres, finger desserts and gratuity.

For information, call Kate Abbruzzese at 383-9317, Ed Connolly at 383-1248 or Ellen Sanchez at 383-6911. The Chart House will be closed for dinner.

Nursery school sign-ups

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School will be accepting applications for the 1995-96 school year, beginning Tuesday, Jan. 17 through Jan. 24, at the nursery school and community center office.

The school's board of directors recently determined that nursery school registration will be based on a lottery system. Completed applications must be returned to the SSCC by Tuesday, Jan. 24.

Parents registering a child in the program for three-year-olds should enclose a copy of the child's birth certificate to ensure proper placement in the program.

All applications should include a $75 registration fee, which includes family membership in the SSCC for the school year. Checks will be returned for children placed on the waiting list.

The school offers three levels of programs to meet the needs of three- to five-year-olds. Programs run from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and from 12:30 to 3 p.m.

For further information call the school's director, Lynne Sheridan, at 383-0036. The school welcomes parental observation and is licensed by the Massachusetts Office for Children.

After-school recreation

The Recreation Commission will be holding after-school programs at the Deer Hill School from Jan. 23 through March 17, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

They include team games/sports on Mondays (ages 4 and 5); hoop games/skills on Tuesdays (grades 4-6); low-organized games on Wednesdays (ages 4 and 5) and arts and crafts on Fridays (ages 5-8).

The Cohasset School Department conducts an after-school day-care program at the Deer Hill School until 6 p.m. each school day. If day-care is needed prior to, or following, recreation programs, registration may be made on an hourly-rate basis. Registration forms are available at the Deer Hill and Osgood school offices.

Osgood children enrolled in the day-care program at the Deer Hill School will be bused to Deer Hill at the conclusion of the Osgood school day at 2:50 p.m.

The registration deadline for the after-school recreation programs is Jan. 18. Classes run for seven weeks unless school is cancelled due to inclement weather.

The cost for a three-day program is $60/1 child, 2nd child/$30, 3rd child/$15. The fee for a two-day program is $45/1 child, 2nd child/$23, 3rd child/$12. For a one-day program the cost is $28/1 child, 2nd child/$15 and 3rd child/$9.

Sixth grade Christmas play

The sixth grade team presented a Christmas play, "A Cause for Mrs. Claus," on Dec. 21 and 22 in the Deer Hill cafeteria. In the play Mrs. Claus, who gets tired of taking care of Santa and the elves, decides to look for a job.

The play featured eight exciting songs. Mrs. Cisneros' class had all the speaking parts and Mrs. Magnussen's and Mr. Becker's classes joined in the singing. Daniel Trowers and Jacqui Dupre starred as Santa and Mrs. Claus. All who attended enjoyed the show.

Play premiers at CHS

Jan. 13 Cohasset will host the first full produc[illegible] of a play by a talented young Boston area writer when the Cohasset drama workshop presents the premiere of "Newton's Second Law," by Sam Forman. Along with Forman's play, the drama workshop will open the evening with a hilarious new comedy, "I Hate Mothers."

Forman will be in the audience Friday night and will participate in a discussion of the play following the performance. He received word just this week that "Newton's Second Law" has been accepted for publication by The Dramatic Publishing Company. Forman is a seventeen-year-old senior at the Noble and Grenough School in Dedham. He lives in Newton.

The play focuses upon Newton, a teenager attempting to deal with the universal problem of personal relationships with the opposite sex. During the course of the play he becomes involved with Honey, a prim preppy; Maggie, a sensitive artist; Krissy, whom he characterizes as too nice; and Nora, a free-spirit who brings Newton his first feeling of mutuality.

"Newton's Second Law" was given a workshop production last summer at the Choate Rosemary Hall Summer Theatre School as part of the Discovery '94 under the direction of Cohasset's Ron Emmons, who has also directed the drama workshop's full production of the work. Emmons first read the work last April when it was one of hundreds of scripts submitted for consideration.

"It was by far the best script I read, and I immediately knew that I wanted to be able to work on it. Only two plays were selected, and Newton was one of them," Emmons said. "This meant that the playwright would spend three weeks in rehearsal with me and the cast of theatre school students editing, refining and polishing the work. I'm always a little uneasy about the process because some playwrights seem to believe that they are divinely inspired and reject any suggestions from the director and cast.

"What a pleasure it was to have Sam to work with. He was open to all reasonable suggestions and finished the summer with an even stronger play. We had never s[illegible]ted a playwright-in-residence as young as Sam before, but I'm certainly glad we did. I knew from the start that this one would definitely find a publisher, and I'm honored that Sam has given us the chance to perform it even before it is in print. I'm certain there will be many more productions in the months and years ahead," Emmons says.

In the drama workshop performance of "Newton's Second Law" the title character will be played by Kevin O'Donnell, a senior who last performed in the lead role in "Godspell." Kevin was recently honored as one of the top four high school performers in the state and awarded a Boston Globe/Massachusetts High School Drama Guild scholarship. Another cast member of "Godspell," senior Mary Ellen Rayment, will play Krissy. Mary Ellen was also honored by the Drama Guild and given honorable mention as one of the top 10 performers in their scholarship competition. Also returning from the cast of "Godspell" are freshman Alex Creighton as Honey, senior Ann Dane as Nora and senior Amy Silvia as Maggie. Newton's best friend will be played by senior Nick Welz, who last appeared as Sky Masterson in Guys and Dolls and earlier performed the role of Judas/John in "Godspell."

The curtain-raiser for the evening will be "I Hate Mothers" by James Rayfield. It is a chance for Mary Ellen Rayment to explain what it is like to have to play the mother over and over again in high school plays.

"Last year at Cohasset Mary Ellen suffered this fate twice," Emmons says, "so I had to give her the opportunity to poke fun at the process. She has the chance to talk directly about this to the audience as she drifts in and out of a production of an especially bad play called 'Petunias' that is being overacted around her. The hard part was convincing the performers that I wanted them to overplay their roles in "Petunias.' They made me promise I would let the audience know that it's okay to laugh."

The other performers joining Mary Ellen are the afore-mentioned Kevin O'Donnell and a new face on the Cohasset stage, Kelly Tufts, a freshman.

Tickets for the Friday night show will cost $4 and will be sold only at the door Friday, Jan. 13. Performance time is 8 p.m. Come and meet Sam Forman and join the Cohasset drama workshop in an evening of humorous self-revelation and exaggeration.

DHS survey results ready

William Orman, acting principal of Deer Hill School, has announced that the poll taken on each question in the School Council's Survey of Deer Hill has been compiled and is available for review by parents.

Copies of the 22-page report of bar graphs, grading and written comments by parents are available for review at the Deer Hill library, the school's front office and the Paul Pratt Library. Every Deer Hill teacher has a copy as well. The reports may be borrowed for home review and then returned.

The grade given for each subject reflects the average of grades given by participating parents. The first part of the review process involves parental input about likes and dislikes, concerns and suggestions, which will provide the basis for planning and changes by the Deer Hill School Council.

Gymnasts establish school record

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

If there was one meet this season Cohasset gymnastics coach Ruthann Ardizzoni would love to bottle it would undoubtedly be the Skippers' record-setting victory over Duxbury on Monday night.

And seeing that the undefeated (7-0) Skippers were scheduled to meet All-Star Renee George and the rest of the talented Hanover High squad on Jan. 11, Ardizzoni had the prime time to pop the cork.

Cohasset's team total of 124.6 against the Green Dragons is the best ever recorded in the history of the school's 19-year gymnastics program.

The Skippers also recorded the highest event total as a team in every event for the season. Ardizzoni believes that too may be a school record as well.

If there was any doubt before as to the best squad in the South Shore League it should be erased now. Not Hanover and not even Scituate can boast such impressive credentials.

Cohasset is rolling along. The only two factors that could allow another team to defeat them is if the Skippers completely fall apart (doubtful) or if their top performers sustain season-ending injuries (unlikely).

"I'd like a carbon copy of that (Duxbury) meet against Hanover," Ardizzoni said with a laugh on Wednesday morning. "Then we'd be all set."

Several of the gymnasts set season bests in the 124.6—108.1 romp over Duxbury.

Erica Hettstrom showed the form that made her the league's best gymnast last winter by nailing a season-best 31.5 in the all around and a personal best (7.9) on the bars. Both were good for first place. Hettstrom rounded out her evening with a fine 8.2 floor routine, good for second behind her younger sister Tara (8.3).

Tara took second to Erica in the all around (30.4) and scored double third-place finishes on the bar (7.1) and beam (8.0).

Megan Pratt took three seconds with a personal best on the bars (7.5), a season-best on the beam (8.1) and a tie for second with Erica on the floor routine (8.2).

Jodi Colwill's season-best on the beam (8.2) garnered her first place and she vaulted to a 7.9, second-place finish.

Kristen Reynolds won the vault in 8.0 and the quartet of captain Tafana Fiore, Carolyn Pratt, Lauren Genovese and Kerri Dwyer all contributed to the new record.

Ardizzoni predicted a close meet against Hanover and reminded her gymnasts to stay calm beforehand. "I told them to relax and be confident," she said. "This meet does mean the world to us.

"We hit a 124 last year but it was at the end of the year so we're ahead of that pace this season."

Strike a pose

Late surge lifts Skippers over Hanover

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset Skippers met the Hanover Indians Friday night after a strong 10-point victory over Abington Tuesday.

Cohasset's Jerome Marion started the game with a steal, but Cohasset couldn't capitalize. Then Marion had another steal and co-captain Joe "Brow" Slotnick put the Skippers on the board. Brow then had a monstrous rejection against a driving offender. Marion pick-pocketed another Hanover dribbler and dished to Jim "Beezer" Magner for the layup. Two Hanover buckets tied the score at 4-4.

Slotnick (17 points) popped a trey and Marion grabbed his third steal of the night. Marion's steal triggered a fast break and a Pete Bishop layup. Brow picked up four more points to bring the score to 13-4. Junior forward Jarred Hardwick snagged his first points of the contest with a nifty low-post move.

Sophomore Ryan Bishop put the brakes on a 5-0 Hanover run with a basket from six feet out. Marion stuck a turn-around jumper to give Cohasset a 19-16 lead with two minutes left in the half. Hardwick hit a pull-up jumper and a Slotnick free throw made the half-time score 22-18.

Hanover jumped out to a fast start in the second half with a quick three-pointer and a layup. But Pete Bishop put back an offensive rebound and the visitors were once again in the lead. The teams traded baskets, with Donovan, Bryant

The '94-'95 high school basketball and hockey seasons are underway and some trends are emerging.

*Several new boys' hoop coaches have blended in just fine to their new surroundings.

Paul Wholey made the jump from Norwell to Marshfield and has worked well with the young team.

John Willis is now the Norwell coach after working the last few years as a top assistant. Willis led the Clippers to an impressive victory in the Eddie Amaral Holiday Tournament with wins over Rockland and Hanover.

And Ged Phelan has taken the step from Marshfield assistant to Hingham head coach. Phelan led the Harbormen to several early wins and is looking to equal the HHS football renaissance this year.

A coaching change is a way to add some life to a team and these three are perfect examples.

*The circle of life goes on at Silver Lake.

The last three years, the boys' hoop team, under veteran coach Dick Arieta, was OCL champs led by standouts players like Steve McAuliffe and Mike Flynn.

However, graduation has hurt the Lakers and this year the team is winless as it approaches the mid-way point of the season.

Peaks and valleys happen to everyone from the Los Angeles Lakers to the Silver Lake Lakers. But with patience and continued sound coaching from Arieta, it should be just a matter of time before things turn around.

*A top hockey goalie can make all the difference.

Just like in soccer, a strong goaltender can carry a hockey team.

Hanover's Tom Noble carried Catholic Memorial to four Super Eight titles before graduating last year. He now sees action between the pipes for top Division I school Boston University and is considered one of the best goalies to come out of the state since Tom Barasso.

However, this year several South Shore area high schools, which traditionally make the state tourney and compete for the league title, are getting bombed in some games thanks to less than Noble-like goaltending.

All any hockey coach can ask for is to have the goalie make all the stops he should make and come up with a few that he shouldn't.

But when shots go in from beyond the blue line or from tough angles, coaches lose hair, patience and victories.

Goal is a thankless position. Opponents fire speeding rubber pucks at you for an hour straight and even if you stop four straight breakaways, one cheap goal will ruin your night.

Stay with it all you future goalies and remember to protect the five-hole.

*The Barao's of Norwell High are the real deal on the basketball court.

and Bishop leading the way, until tough defense got Cohasset the ball back. Brow banked a jumper but the Indians' Jim McDonough answered with a runner.

Cohasset point guard Tom Allen's quick hands got him a steal and a breakaway hoop. On the next possession, Cohasset's point guard knocked down a three to put Cohasset ahead 34-31.

The Skippers never looked back.

Slotnick's second shot block of the game set up a foul shot. Hanover responded with a three-pointer, but CHS answered with Hardwick sinking two free throws. McDonough hit a layup, but Bryant converted a three-point play and Cohasset had a 40-38 edge. Brow's loose-ball rebound and Allen's crisp passing got the ball to Magner, who hit a three. Bryant's hustle got Pete Bishop the ball and a free throw.

But Hanover's Jon Peacock hit a three with two minutes left to bring the Indians to within three points. Brow's turnaround jumper, four Hardwick free throws and two more points for Slotnick made it 52-43.

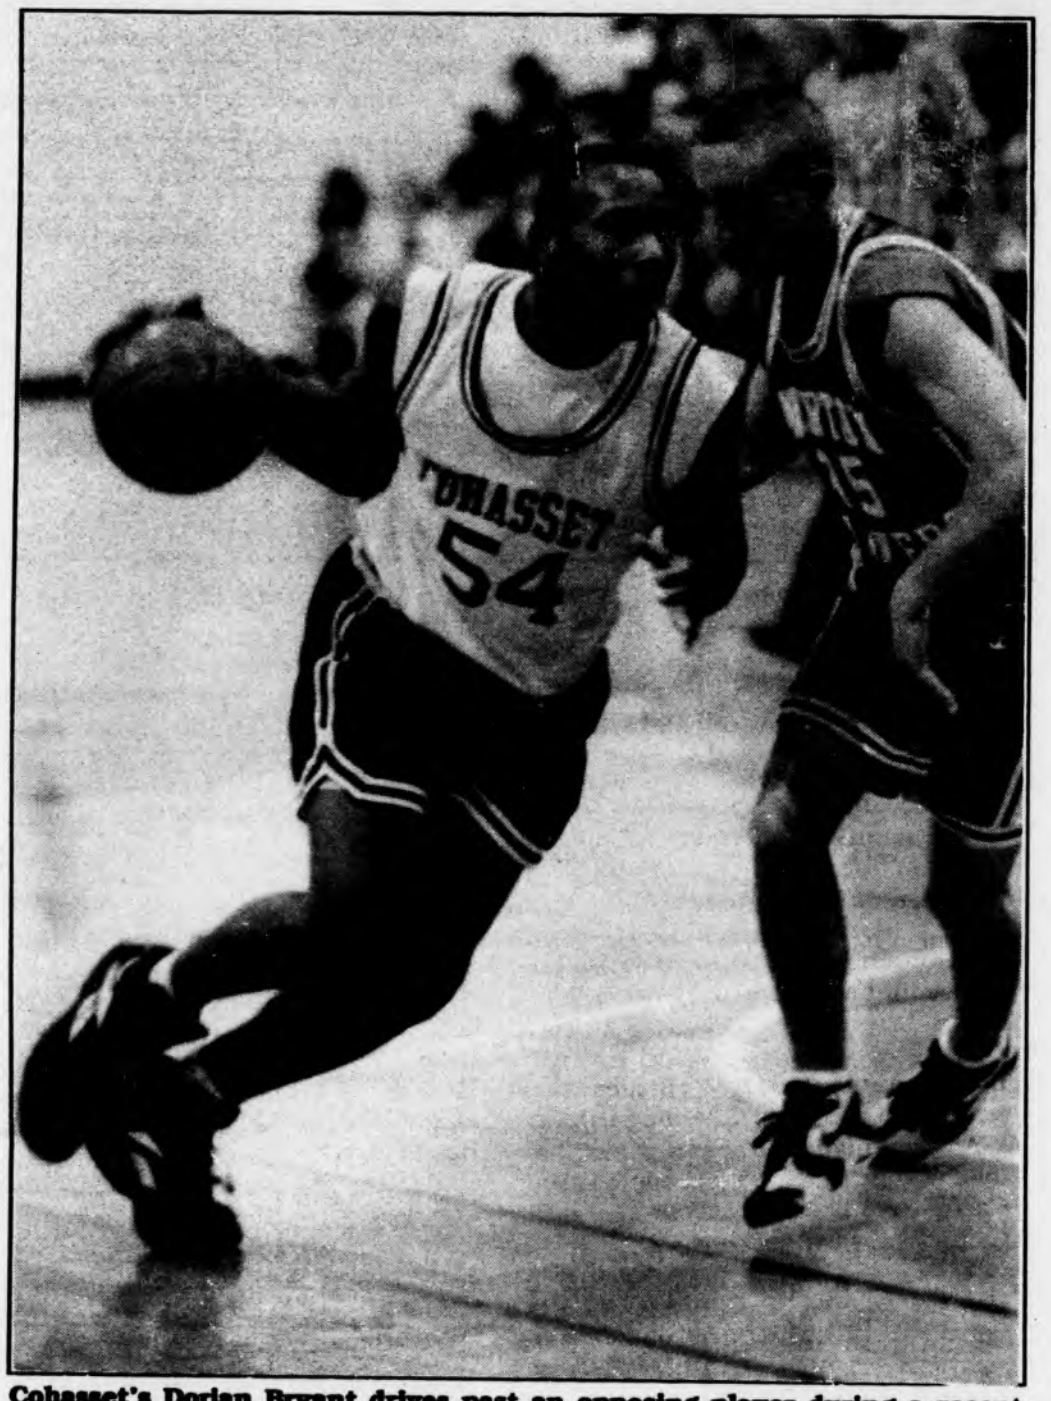
Cohasset's Andy Fitzsimmons laid it in on a fast break to ice the victory for the Skippers.

"They did a good job," said Slotnick. "We could have executed a little bit better. At the end of the game we stepped up and did a good job."

Head coach Ford was particularly impressed by the performance of Marion.

"Jerome stepped up tonight," Ford said. "Every kid's going to get a start and Jerome really answered the call tonight. Here's a kid who hasn't gotten a lot of playing time up until tonight but he stepped up and played great defense and sparked us.

"Our next game's against Hull, always scrappy, always tough. They've won their first two league games this year. We're gonna be ready for Hull. It's always a good rivalry."



Cohasset's Dorian Bryant drives past an opposing player during a recent game. The Skippers added to their South Shore League undefeated run with Friday night's win over Hanover.

Marion brings out the best in teammate

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

If Cohasset basketball player Jerome Marion doesn't play another minute this season, he'll still have the respect of his teammates and his coach.

Marion's performance in Cohasset's game against Hanover showed that he's not only an excellent player, but he's also willing to sacrifice.

His gutsy dives on the floor were rewarded with three steals and the hearts of the fans. In his back-up point guard spot, Marion helps the team not only in the games, but also in practice.

Head Coach Ron Ford gave Marion credit for making the team hustle more.

"Jerome makes a lot of people on the team better," Ford said. "When somebody's dogging it in practice, Jerome kills 'em. His work ethic, especially in practice, is top shelf. He works so hard in practice, he forces everyone else to give 110 percent too."

Ford described Marion "as a real leader, especially during this game" (Cohasset's 54-43 win against Hanover).

Marion's good-natured chiding of his teammates helps keep the team loose and the atmosphere less tense.

While defense seems to be his forte, Marion's passing in the Hanover game ignited several fast breaks and set up numerous key baskets. He also becomes a second coach while he's taking a breather, tipping off teammates as to what type of defense to set up in and what to keep an eye out for.

During football season, Marion started in Cohasset's stellar backfield and helped run the Skippers to their best record in years.

Marion's athletic versatility and desire have made him an important part of the Cohasset varsity. And there's no sign that he's letting up.

JV hoopsters shine as bright as big brother squad

By Jim O'Sullivan

Cohasset's junior varsity boys' basketball squad lives in the shadow of the thriving varsity. But one can hardly ignore the team's last second 59-57 win at Hanover last Friday.

The game started with Hanover jumping out to a 5-0 lead. But a layup by junior Bret MacQuarrie put the Skippers on the board. A three-pointer by sophomore Burke Davis made the score 7-5. A steal and a jumper by forward J. L. Williams set up his first points of the night. Sophomore Matt Belson converted a three-point play to bring the Skippers to within three. Davis sank a jumper after a Brian Kilroy assist. Kilroy's rebound on the next play ignited a fastbreak that was finished with Joe Magner sinking a three-pointer to tie the score.

Belson's low-post moves and Magner's fadeaway put Cohasset ahead by two after a Hanover bucket. A Hanover run at the end of the half made the halftime score 28-20, in favor of the home team.

Matt Connelly's off-balance leaner and Mike Dunphy's layup off of a steal brought CHS to within four points. Davis and Dunphy hit consecutive layups to tie the score. A 6-0 Hanover run was met by the Skippers when Magner had a hoop from the lane, Davis drained his second trey of the game and Kilroy sank a free throw.

Kilroy then ripped down an offensive rebound and put it back to give Cohasset a 36-34 lead and Dunphy knocked down a jumper from 16 feet.

Williams layed it in off the glass and tore down a rebound to set up his next bucket, which made the score 42-39 in favor of the visitors.

Belson and Williams each had offensive putbacks and Dunphy's jumper with one minute left tied the game at 53. Hanover scored with 30 seconds left. MacQuarrie banked a three with 6.2 seconds left to give the Skippers a one-point lead, 56-55. Hanover sank two free throws with 4.1 seconds remaining.

Davis inbounded the ball to Dunphy from half court. Davis sprinted off a MacQuarrie pick, took the pass from Dunphy and launched an off-balance jumper from about 20 feet that hit nothing but net to give Cohasset the win.

Not all the excitement comes from the parent club.

Lady hoopsters slowed by injuries

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Injuries and sickness? Don't waste your breath explaining to Cohasset girls basketball coach Cori Hughes they're both a thorn in the side when it comes to leading a high school team through a tough South Shore League schedule.

Hughes has experienced the two evils first-hand in what has become a walking-wounded team. Of the seven seniors on the team, 2-3 have been out in every game so far.

Where do the injuries begin? Pick a player. For starters, co-captain Liz Corcoran has been plagued with a knee injury that could shelve her for the rest of the season. Then Catie Campbell sustained a concussion, putting her on the bench for a spell. Megan Rhodes is still not 100 percent after spraining an ankle.

And as though Cohasset wasn't having enough problems, co-captain Kate Carroll has been unable to play a full game all season because of a lingering sickness.

In Friday's 52-33 win over Hanover, Carroll had a strong first half with six points and eight steals. But Carroll was so weak she had to sit out the second half and watch as the Skippers put Hanover away for good to up their record to 2-6 on the season.

Hughes said without Carroll on the court there is a tremendous void in leadership and skill for Cohasset.

"She's the leader of this team and we're missing a lot without her," she said. "People have been stepping up and playing but it's not the same because the leadership qualities are missing.

What's especially frustrating about the injuries that have beset the team is the fact that this turmoil comes after the Skippers put together their best season in years during the '93-94 campaign. Cohasset broke a frustrating losing streak by racking up four victories.

Hughes was confident the team would have an even better record this season, though she still believes the Skippers can be in tournament contention if enough players heal in time for a big second half.

"I really believed this was going to be a great year for us," she said. "We can still make the tournament but we have to have everybody back."

With the injured on the sidelines, Hughes has had no choice but to turn to All-Star Erin Murphy and ask her to play practically the entire 32 minutes of every game.

And don't think Hughes underestimates what Murphy has meant to this team all season.

"The burden of this whole team has been thrust on her shoulders," Hughes said. "It's overwhelming how much she has to play."

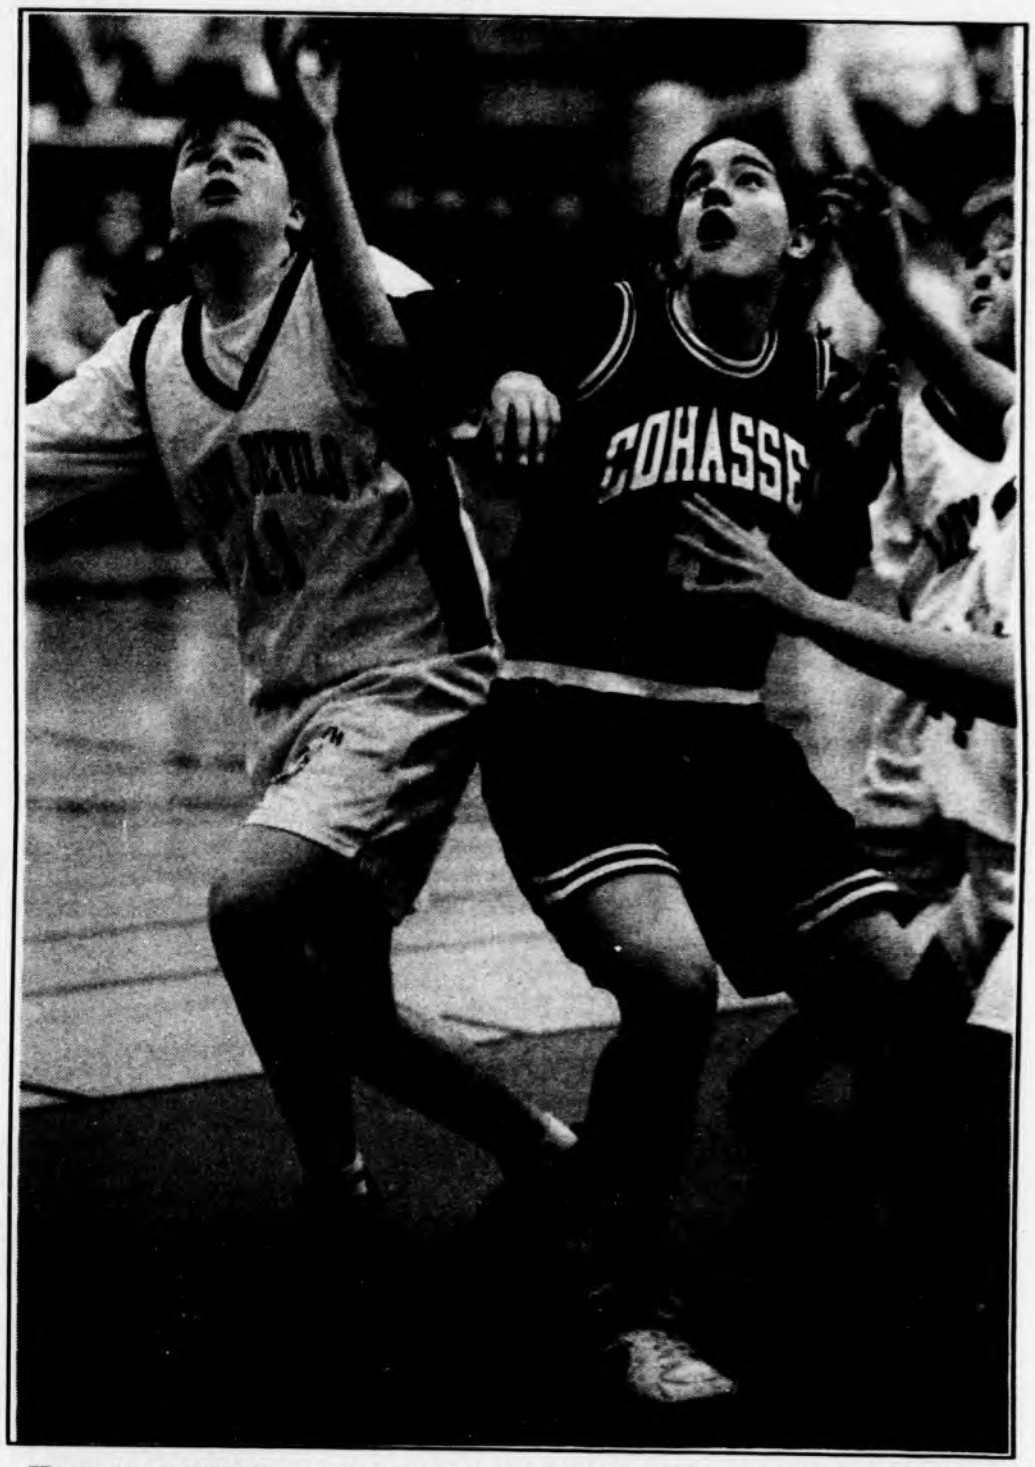
Murphy, who has been averaging eight points a game, led Cohasset with 13 points in the Skippers' win over Hanover. Rhodes, sore ankle and all, scored 10 points of her own, as did Adrienne DeVaughn. DeVaughn's real impact was felt on the boards where she pulled down a season-high 18.

The one bright spot that has emerged from the injuries is the play of Campbell. Only a sophomore, Hughes never projected her as a starter at the beginning of the season but now can't imagine replacing her, even with the team at top strength.

"They'd have to really prove themselves," Hughes said.

Campbell has averaged nine points a game and has combined her scoring with great performances on defense. And they just keep improving.

Improvement. For Hughes that's a close second on the list to fielding a healthy team at this point.



Hooper Caitlin Connolly (44) gets in position for a rebound for the injury-racked Cohasset High team. The Skippers registered their second win of the season with last Friday's decision over Hanover.

Wrestlers look to South Shore League schedule

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Next to perennial state champion Carver, Cohasset High's wrestling team has nailed down the second-place position in the South Shore League for several years.

That streak should come to a halt this season.

Teams such as Norwell and Scituate are fielding their best squads in years.

"They're the strongest they've been in five years," Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney said. "Very tough."

The Skippers (3-3) have some genuine individual talent that should suit them well when the South Sectionals show up on the schedule. Beyond the individuals there is a flock of potentially strong eighth-graders who still need some seasoning before competing at the varsity level.

But Sweeney says you'd be hard-pressed to find a better group of junior high wrestlers anywhere in the SSL. In the strictly junior high tourney they competed in during vacation, every one of Sweeney's young grapplers placed.

He is hoping they'll stick with the program at Cohasset and let nature and hard work take care of the rest.

"The good ones are ahead of a lot of freshmen and even some sophomores," Sweeney said. "Next year they're going to be close. It's amazing the progress they've made already.

On the varsity front, four Skipper wrestlers placed in the top six of the Marshfield Holiday Tournament. Ryan Freeman continued his domination of the 130-pound division, copping first place and winning every one of his matches in the toughest weight class of the meet.

Freshman Tucker Gledhill continued wrestling well, battling to a fourth-place finish at 103 pounds. Kevin Duffy took sixth at 125 pounds and heavyweight Larry Adams dropped the second-seeded wrestler in the quarterfinals before winding up sixth.

Freeman was handed his first defeat of the season at the Whitman-Hanson Wrestling Tournament but Sweeney decided beforehand the senior All-Star would be better off moving up to the 135-pound division rather than roll through 130.

Freeman won his preliminary matches but found himself trailing 2-1 with 30 seconds left in the finals. He chose to give up three points and go for the pin but wasn't able to land the victory. He wound up on the short end of a 5-1 decision. Despite the loss, Freeman's record stands at a scintillating 15-1 on the year.

The Skippers now begin the SSL portion of their schedule. Sweeney knows this is the critical part of the season for the team.

"The league meets always mean a little more," he said. "We have to win most of these to stay at .500."

Bucyk to appear at Pastimes

Former Boston Bruins' captain and Hall of Famer John Bucyk will be on hand at Pastimes Sports Cards for a free autograph signing on Saturday, January 14, from 12-2 p.m. Each person will receive one free autograph from Bucyk, but additional autographs can be purchased. Pastimes is located on Route 3A in Cohasset next to MaryLou's News. For more information call 383-2273.

Slotnick aims for team goals

By Jim O'Sullivan
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset co-captain Joe Slotnick doesn't like to lose. In fact, the senior forward, often called "Brow," dislikes losing so much he has made a habit of avoiding it. Besides being a regular visitor to the honor roll, Slotnick has led the Skippers to an undefeated league record and will play first singles for the tennis team this spring.

"The season started out really well," Slotnick said. "We have high expectations. In the beginning of the games, we struggle trying to become the team we want to be. The holiday tournament was a turning point in our season; we learned how good and bad we could be. We learned a lot of things that had to be dealt with."

When questioned about his season as an individual player, Slotnick deflected the questions to focus on the team.

"As long as we're winning, after games I have no regrets," Slotnick explained. "It's fine. I'll get my stats. That'll come. But what matters is that we win. Things take care of themselves."

Asked about his goals for the rest of the season, "Brow" wasted no time in answering.

"The main thing is that I wanted to go undefeated. When Bryan Edwards and those guys were here, they went 25-0. That's not reachable now. (Cohasset lost twice in a holiday tournament against Division I teams.) It'd be nice to sensations, Meg and Amy, are both in the top five in scoring in the South Shore League and have led the Lady Clippers to a 6-1 record and first place.

Both Meg and Amy, who stand 5'8", have the ability to get the defensive rebound among the trees in the paint, dribble the ball downcourt and make the dish-off pass, the jumper or the finishing lay-up.

If their play continues, the Lady Clippers may find themselves with another SSL title and two all-scholastics named Barao.

*The song remains the same for the Cohasset boys' hoop team and the Hingham High hockey team.

The class of the South Shore for the past few years, both the Skippers and the Harbormen are in first place in the their leagues.

However, CHS coach Ron Ford and HHS coach Garrett Reagan are focused on post-season success.

Ford scheduled his team for a Holiday hoop tournament against Division I powerhouses Brockton and Cambridge for more experience and Reagan had his team face OCL top teams Falmouth and Barnstable over the break.

If the two coaches were only concerned with winning, they would have played a couple non-league softies to pad their win totals. But both teams are looking at the state tourney and beyond and are going about it in the right way.

*Scituate High School has three hoop superstars walking it's halls.

For the boys' team, point guard Seamus Reedy and forward Chris Brown are both among the league's leading scorers and can just about do anything they want when they have the ball. Cohasset may have a deeper team, but Reedy and Brown could be the Wild Cards in the state tourney.

For the girls' team, there is 6' center Laura McGlynn. When she is on her game and shooting well, she is unstoppable.

Just ask the Norwell High team. In an early season match McGlynn hit for a career high 32 points and totally took the Barao twins out of their inside game. It was Norwell's only loss as McGlynn was hitting shots from the parking lot.

But, start hitting a few hoops and opposing teams will take notice. Since then, McGlynn has seen special zones and double-team defenses that have been stifling. However, I wouldn't want to be the coach that has to beat a Lady Sailor team with a hot McGlynn. That would be a tough task.

There are only two real questions surrounding this year's baseball hall of fame voting by the sports writers across the country. Will Phillies' third-baseman Mike Schmidt surpass the highest induction percentage ever, that of Tom Seaver's 98.2 percent?

The second has a more local flavor. Jim Rice is on the ballot for the first time and many believe Yaz's successor in left field will be snubbed because he was never popular with the sports writers who vote for the hall's candidates.

The Globe's Nick Cafado took a random poll of writers and only four of 13 voted for Rice. That's an alarmingly low number for a player who cracked 382 homeruns in his career and batted in well over 1,000 runs.

Rice's numbers are far superior to players already in the hall, which only leads one to believe if he doesn't get in on the first try it will be because the writers were never fond of "Jim Ed."

The feeling here is so what.

Rice's snubbing, if that's what transpires, shows that the voting system is a popularity contest. There are exceptions. The writers would have looked foolish if they even attempted to snub Steve Carlton, the great Phillies' pitcher. He shunned the press completely but his phenomenal statistics did all Carlton's speaking for him.

The writers now have the opportunity to get back at Rice for those years he declined interviews, was curse to reporters or just ignored them completely.

Again, so what. Reporters supposedly learn to become thick skinned as time goes on and they fine-tune their craft. But even more importantly they also have to rise above their personal opinions of athletes and give them their just rewards if they so deserve.

And Rice has more than earned the honor of baseball immortality in Cooperstown.

I doubt he'll get in on the first ballot and that's a shame.

go into the tournament without a league loss."

Head coach Ron Ford had nothing but praise for Cohasset's star forward.

"Joey has an incredible work ethic," Ford said. "He works so hard to make his game better. Here's a guy who's not a great athlete but who's made himself a great basketball player. He's always been the leader of this group. I think that those are his two best qualities; his work ethic and his leadership ability.

"Joey's really the complete package. He does it all. I mean, he really works at his academics, he's made himself into an excellent ball player, and he's still a nice kid."

Amateur Gardeners meet

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet on Jan. 17 at 1 p.m. at the Lighthouse Keepers House. Phyllis Peck, a well-known lecturer on gardening, will direct a workshop on miniature landscaping.

Tea, coffee and refreshments will be served. Mary Edmonds and Betty Madden will be the hostesses. For further information call 383-1507.

VFW winners are listed

The Cohasset Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146 has announced the winners of their savings bond raffle. The winners were drawn on Dec. 20 and include: Marie Shea of Scituate ($500 bond), Russell Smith of Cohasset ($100 bond) and Albert Sullivan of Scituate ($50 bond).

The VFW thanks everyone who helped make their raffle a success.

Join the Junior Voices

Junior Voices, for children in grades three through seven, will host a "Bring a Friend Day" Jan. 17 from 3:30 to 5 p.m. at the House of Prayer Lutheran Church in Hingham.

At 3:30 p.m. there will be refreshments and singing, followed by a special demonstration class for friends of Junior Voices. The event is free. Please call 749-6561 by Jan. 14 if you plan to come or intend to bring a friend.

Registration for the second semester is due on Jan. 24 for both new and returning members. The first regular class of the semester will be held on that day from 4 to 5:15 p.m. For further information call 749-6561.

The second semester will include visits to or from two other children's choirs, a harp performance and choralographed songs from "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat."

COA hosts HMO forum

The Cohasset Council on Aging will host a forum on health maintenance organizations for seniors on Wednesday, Jan. 18, from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Cohasset Senior Center, 3 North Main Street. HMO's are an option available to seniors that work in conjunction with Medicare.

The following HMO's have been invited to attend: Pilgrim Health Care, Tufts Associated Health Plan, US Healthcare, Harvard Community Health Plan and HMO Blue.

For reservations call 383-9116. Space is limited.

Robert O'Byck, Medicare beneficiary education specialist for Blue Cross/Blue Shield, will meet with seniors on Wednesday, Feb. 1, at 10 a.m. at the Cohasset Senior Center.

He will discuss changes for Medicare 1995 and Medigap reform. The annual open enrollment period will be held in February and March.

Father/daughter dance set

The Cohasset Girl Scouts will hold their annual father/daughter event on Sunday, Jan. 22, from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

Girl Scouts and their fathers are invited to attend this year's dance, which will feature the "oldies but goodies" music of Scott Straughn.

Dress is casual, and the girls and their fathers may be daring and dress in '50s-style clothes if they wish.

The cost is $5 per couple and $2 for each additional girl. For further information or to make reservations, call your troop leader.

Drama workshop offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department is sponsoring a Drama Workshop for children ages 7 to 12 on Saturday mornings from 9 to 10:30 a.m., beginning Jan. 21.

The class will meet at the Cohasset Town Hall and will be taught by Grace Deveney. The fee is $24 per student for the entire six-week session.

The class will be offered again in the spring. Children will put on a skit for parents to show what they have learned.

To register call the Recreation Office at 383-6791. Non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis.

Highway billboard honors CHS graduate's life

Although Stephen Carroll never had the chance to meet Oronde Khary Allie — he realized the young man had an impact on those who knew him.

So Carroll decided to make sure that the METCO student and 1992 Cohasset High graduate, who was tragically gunned down in Atlanta last November, didn't become just another statistic.

"I had the idea of doing something in his memory," said Carroll, a 1988 CHS graduate. "People die and nothing is done about it.

"In college there's usually an alumni situation, but that's not the case with high school."

After reading about Allie's death, Carroll, a real estate representative with Stoneham-based Ackerley Outdoor Advertising a subsidiary of Ackerley Communications, decided to use his connections to look into having a billboard painted to honor the 20-year-old college student's life.

Carroll got the okay to go ahead with the project and the results of his efforts are a 14-foot high, 48-foot long billboard

Like winter, flu season may strike soon

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

The annual influenza virus has been slow in reaching the area, according to Cohasset Health Officer Dr. Joseph Godzik.

The influenza virus spreads from west to east, so this part of the country is the last to be hit, he said.

The state Department of Public Health has recorded four confirmed cases in Massachusetts so far this year.

Dr. Susan Lett, director of the division of epidemiology and communicable diseases said Tuesday the state is off to a slow start.

February is customarily the peak flu month.

This year's influenza vaccine has been formulated combat Type A Shangdong, Type A Texas, and Type B Panama strains of the virus.

Dr. Godzik said the state reformulates the vaccine "based on what's going around."

If undiagnosed, influenza can be mistaken for a bad cold. It is the sudden onset of headache, fever, bodyaches, and cough that will distinguish the flu from the common cold, which may show signs days in advance, Lett said.

Cohasset schools report no unusual number of absences.

School Nurse Carol Ciciotte reports some students with sore throats but no other symptoms that would indicate flu.

Both Godzik and Ciciotte note that so far, Cohasset has been spared an outbreak of pertussis, more commonly known as whooping cough. Cases have been reported in Braintree, Milton, Hanover, Pembroke, and Weymouth. The Hingham public health nurse said Tuesday she has recently been notified of one case her town.

The state department of public health has advised towns to be aware of a possible outbreak of the disease.

Dr. Godzik said the increase could be attributable to "waning immunity." The inoculations children receive as infants do not provide life-long immunity, but serve to protect babies and young children until their immune systems mature.

Pertussis is the "P" in the DPT vaccine that is first administered to infants as part of the inoculation for diphtheria and tetanus. Infants customarily receive three doses of the DPT vaccine by the age of six months, with a booster shot at age 2, and another prior to entering school.

Lett said Tuesday there are regularly 400 cases of

Bill for 'T' on table, official says

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

While an anti-train faction rallies around the slogan of Train=Taxes, a local state representative said that public transportation assessments may not be affected if rail service is restored to the Old Colony Greenbush line.

State Rep. Frank Hynes (D-Marshfield), who is a member of a special commission on MBTA financing, said there is great concern that the present financing system of the MBTA doesn't work and that current assessments are inequitable.

Community assessments account for about $150 million toward the MBTA's $750 million operating budget, said Hynes, who believes the state should pick up the tab for all communities within the district.

Hynes explained that when the MBTA was established in 1964, it included a district of 79 towns and cities and about 23 of them would pay assessments but get no direct T service. Since then commuter rail service has connected 54 additional towns to service, but because they are not within the original district, these towns do not pay assessments.

"Thirty-one years later we have a growing additional concern that service is provided directly through chartered service, commuter rail and buses to 54 communities that are not paying for it," said Hynes, who estimates about 70 percent of the state's population has access to MBTA service which should become a statewide rather than regional transit system.

A 1974 law designed to encourage development of the T's commuter rail service, does not allow new communities to be assessed for new service, Hynes said.

Communities have the problem of having their revenues capped by Proposition 2-1/2 and cannot afford to have their assessments increase.

According to Hynes, any effect that Greenbush rail

Large budget deficit looms

As department heads and committee chairmen take the hot seat in front of the selectmen and advisory board to present their budget requests for next year — a sizeable deficit picture is emerging, town officials say.

Advisory Board Chairman Nan Roth told selectmen this week "we are awestruck at the numbers we see coming."

Both selectmen and advisory members will meet jointly at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 2 to go over the projections. Roth said that her board may have to revisit every budget in town to see what can be trimmed.

In a memo to selectmen and advisors this week, Town Accountant Michael Buckley projected a $3/4 million deficit in operating expenses for FY'96 which begins July 1, if all budget requests are approved. His projections don't include warrant articles. The biggest jump is in the preliminary school budget which is up more than eight percent.

By state law, the town can only raise its tax levy limit by 2-1/2 percent over the prior year without an override. The town last passed an override for operating expenses in 1992 when voters opted to raise their taxes by $377,416.

It is not clear at this point of the budget discussions how big the override request will be this year.

Cohasset's week

Town receives AAA award

The American Automobile Association recently announced that Cohasset earned a "Pedestrian Safety Citation" in the 55th annual AAA Pedestrian Protection Program, designed to stimulate community concern and involvement in pedestrian safety.

Cohasset has earned the award three times in previous years. This year's winners were selected from among more than 2,280 cities nationwide who participated in the competition. Cohasset was recognized for seven years' achievement. The town first entered the program in 1981.

Cohasset has instituted a vigorous radar enforcement and speed education program as well as pedestrian and bicycle safety programs. The winners were chosen by an independent panel of traffic safety experts from all over the country.

Nomination papers ready

Nomination papers for the town election on Saturday, April 1, are available at the Town Clerk's office through Thursday, Feb. 9, until 7 p.m. that evening.

All nomination papers should be submitted to the registrars of voters for certification of names and addresses on or before Monday, Feb. 13, until 5 p.m.

Open seats include two positions for three years for selectmen; one position for three years for assessor; two positions for three years on the school committee; three positions for three years as trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; one position for three years and one posiiton for one year on the Board of Health; one position for three years for water commissioner; one position for five years for sewer commissioner; one position for five years on the planning board, one position for five years on the recreation commission and one position for five years on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Fifty signatures are needed to have a name placed on a ballot. Campaign forms must be filled out.

As of Wednesday, Jan. 18, Selectman Merle S. Brown, 546 Beechwood St.; Sewer Commissioner Henry A. Rattenbury, 7 Briarwood Lane; Assessor Ross Rosano, 170 N. Main Street; planning board member John F. O'Toole, 55 Linden Dr.; and health board member Thomas Cook, 281 King St. had taken out nomination papers and are seeking re-election.

Sarah P. Pease, 3 Sankey Rd. has taken out papers for a seat on the board of library trustees and Water Commissioner Robert Kasameyer, 17 Pond St., who was appointed to fill the unexpired term of former water commissioner Ron Goodwin who resigned last summer, has taken out nomination papers to run for the seat.

December police report

In his December status report, Police Chief Brian Noonan said the police department made 16 arrests last month including eight for minors in possession of alcohol; two for operating under the influence; three on outstanding warrants; one for operating after license suspension and two under protective custody. He said there were three breaking and enterings last month, one at the high school, one at a business, and one at a residence.

Cambridge firm preferred

In a majority vote selectmen appointed the Cambridge Environmental firm, Camp, Dresser & McKee, one of three firms submitting bids at or below $15,000, to analyze the Environmental Impact Report on the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad.

Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby cast the dissenting vote. She said she preferred Hoyle, Tanner & Associates, Inc. of Boston.

Selectman Peter Pratt voted reluctantly for Camp, Dresser & McKee which for years has acted as the town's consultant commenting on EIRs on the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill.

"I was hoping one of the others would come through with equal or exceeding experience but I'm sorry to say I didn't see the same level of grasping the issue with the other firms," he said.

Last week selectmen interviewed representatives from three companies which submitted bids at or below the $15,000 town meeting appropriated to hire a consultant to comment on the study. The other firm considered was Diamond Environmental Associates of Newton.

Wilson is appointed

Jack Wilson, 6 Woodland Dr., will replace David Punch on the Council on Aging. Wilson also serves on the advisory council for South Shore Elder Services. Punch stepped down from the Council because he moved out of town.

New plan for power outages aired at Edison powwow

By Sarah Cook
Mariner correspondent

The power may be back and the candles extinguished, but tempers continued to flare and questions began to fly at a Tuesday meeting with Eastern Edison Officials and the Cohasset Board of Selectmen. The meeting was called to discuss the problematic response and slow restoration of power to Cohasset after last month's Christmas Eve northeaster.

Eastern Edison Official Mark Mahoney acknowledged that despite what the utility company thought was adequate preparation for the storm, the company's "response was inadequate." Officials cited inaccurate weather forecasts and a breakdown in the internal and external communication mechanisms of the utility's "Storm Plan," as large contributors to the delayed restoration of power.

A Cohasset resident without power for almost 48 hours concluded, "they can dump the plan because it just didn't work!"

Mahoney emphasized Eastern Edison's dependence on customer calls stating "customers are our best source of information." The company undoubtedly received the customer calls vital to its restoration response as the utility's 41 phone lines were jammed for extended periods of time, he said.

The first power outages of the storm were reported at 7:30 p.m. on Friday Dec. 23. Although main power lines were restored within two hours, restoration crews were not actually on site in Cohasset until Saturday afternoon. After numerous phone calls from town officials, lights in the critical area of Cohasset center finally began to twinkle again at 6:15 p.m. on Saturday, Christmas Eve.

But that was not the case in other areas of town.

The O'Tooles of Linden Drive reported at this week's meeting that their power was not restored until Monday night (Dec. 26) despite numerous calls to Eastern Edison. Ironically, Eastern Edison officials claimed that a truck was dispatched to Linden Drive on two separate occasions, and on both occasions reported that no problem was found.

The complaints continued as Selectman Jane Goedecke made reference to a letter a resident had written, reporting a live wire in their backyard that was not attended to for two days and numerous residents claimed to have driven around town and not seen a single Eastern Edison service truck.

Although a barrage of phone calls eventually met with successful restoration of power to the center of Cohasset, Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan referred to the number of phone calls that Cohasset town officials made to have power restored as "unnecessary efforts." Sullivan repeatedly stressed the need for improved communication between Eastern Edison and Cohasset during times of power failure.

Sullivan recommended establishing an Eastern Edison representative to be stationed in Cohasset to act as a contact person channeling information between Eastern Edison and the community during power outages.

Selectman Goedecke emphasized the importance of establishing such a representative and pointed out that the police and fire departments, using the taxpayer's money, should not be required to act as a clearing-house for Eastern Edison due to the inaccessibility of the utility's own phone lines.

Also established was the need for Eastern Edison to work with a representative from Cohasset in establishing priority areas for the restoration of power. Situations such as individuals requiring electricity for means of life support must be identified and selectmen and Eastern Edison must be made aware of these special needs.

In concluding the meeting, Sullivan, said: "I don't see that any organized thought has gone on to ensure that this does not happen again."

Selectman Peter Pratt asked that Eastern Edison present a written response detailing information relevant to the restoration of power after the recent storm event and providing recommendations for future improvement.

Eastern Edison President John Carney, said Eastern Edison is "prepared to spend quality time to address each and every issue."

Cohasset selectmen and Eastern Edison Officials will meet again to discuss further solutions in two to three weeks time.

Drunk driving alleged

Patrolman Jeffrey Treanor arrested Frederick B. Laidlaw, age 45, 508A Beechwood St., Cohasset at 1:18 a.m., Jan. 15, and charged him with operating under the influence (alcohol), operating without a license on his possession and failure to stop for a stop sign. Laidlaw was arraigned on the charges in Quincy District Court, Jan. 17 with a further court date set for Feb. 10.

At 9:49 p.m., Jan. 15, Patrolman David Cogill arrested Michael T. Peluso, age 26,12 Wayside Rd., Westborough and charged him with OUI alcohol (second or subsequent offense), having no license in his possession and speeding. Peluso was arraigned on the charges in Quincy District Court Jan. 17 with a further court date slated for Feb. 16.

School budget needs are here to stay

By Thomas De Santes
Mariner correspondent

During the school committee meeting last week, Supt. Stephen Hart unveiled a FY'96 request 8.2 percent higher than this year's school budget.

Hart said the requests from principals and department heads cover necessities and will keep education consistent with this year.

"No one was adding extra provisions thinking they might get approved. Everyone is asking for what they need," Hart said.

Advisory Committee liaison to the school committee Deborah Cook said the 8.2 percent jump will not sit well with her fellow board members. Cook made it clear that the advisory committee would have a problem with a four-percent increase let alone 8.2 percent. She urged Hart and the school committee to do what they could to reduce the increase and warned that there would be "massive overrides as a result."

Hart said salaries are up 3.9 percent, new positions amount to a 2.7 percent increase, one percent of the increase is in technology, .5 percent in additional costs like testing, special needs and contracted services, and .1 percent in utilities. He also mentioned the decreases in areas because of early retirements.

"Up to five percent of these increases is to maintain the level of service to students, like the addition of a fourth grade teacher to keep classroom size the same and the addition of a new bus driver to keep schedules consistent," he said.

School committee member Jim Kirk said the board must prioritize.

"When reviewing the budget in future meetings, the committee will have to categorize increases in terms of necessities and improvements," he said.

Hart also noted that because of new state demands under the Education Reform Act, each student will have to pend 990 hours in core subjects like English, math, social studies, science, foreign languages and the arts in 1996, putting more strains on the FY'97 school budget. This may require lengthening the school day which will mean increased staffing. Hart suggested cutting requests this year will only make next year's budget that more difficult.

Science program reported

With the classroom education becoming more integrated with practical studies, Cohasset's Natural Science Program reported on its progress and future plans to the school committe last week.

With the help of the Audubon Society and the South Shore Natural Science Center, the Osgood School has an outdoor classroom for students. The Osgood nature trail has successfully become a science lab for students learning about nature and the environment.

Designated areas on the trail have been set up for different grade levels to observe. Through interdisciplinary study, students are able to observe their findings, record and analyze what they see. whether it be integrating the data into a math lesson through word problems or a language lesson through a journal, students are combing field studies with traditional lessons. According to instructors, students are listing the trips to the trail as their favorite field trips. They also noted that the Osgood trail is fortunate to have a vernal pool for third graders to observe. This environmentally protected natural pool is site to many specific species providing endless opportunity for learning.

It is hoped that through grant money the Natural Science Program will be extended to the Deer Hill School which also has a vernal pool on its trail.

Hart's performance noted

The school committee submitted its evaluation of Supt. Stephen Hart, Jan. 12. The evaluation is based on about 40 responsibilities in seven different categories on a scale of 1-9. The areas included community relationships, relationship with the school committee, staff and personnel relationships, educational leadership, business and finance, and personal qualities.

Hart received an overall rating of 7.6 which falls well within the highest range labeled commendable. School committee members wrote a narrative on Hart's accomplishments of the school system's goals for the '93-'94 school year.

It was a consensus that opportunities exist for Hart in several areas such as, making the evaluation system truly a developmental process for the staff and using the new system for a frank assessment of staff performance. Also they believed he could be unifying the staff and community regarding the philosophy of professional development, and responding to the Education Reform Act using the process to help Cohasset make a quantum leap forward in both breadth and depth in the education preparation of its students.

Hart was also commended in several areas such as leading Cohasset's evolution toward newer technologies for education, focusing the School Committee's attention on the important aspect of reform, and interpreting the often confusing array of regulations and initiatives. They commended his handling of the Early Retirement Program in a creative way, and his knowledge about a myriad of educational and regulatory issues, handling them comprehensively and creatively.

cohasset's week

Step raises approved

Selectmen approved a step rate increase this week for Harbormaster Shawn Kelly whose salary will be $14.20 per hour up from $13.46. The raise is effective Feb. 11.

Jane Henderson, senior billing clerk at the fire department, will get a raise effective Feb. 3 from $9.70 to $10.19 per hour, selectmen said.

Baird's resignation accepted

Selectmen accepted the resignation of long-time board of health member William Baird this week. They will hold a joint meeting with the board of health within two weeks to appoint a temporary member to fill Baird's seat until the town election April 1. Baird wanted to stay on the board until town meeting but election rules necessitated he resign immediately so the seat could appear on the ballot. However, the board of health and selectmen could decide to appoint Baird as the temporary member until the town election. Selectmen said anyone wishing to serve as an interim member of the health board should submit an application to their office by Wednesday, Jan. 25.

Five members needed

Health board member Alix White told selectmen this week that it's the consensus of the board of health that it needs five members.

She said the work load and paper work due to state Title V regulations regarding septic systems, ongoing work with issues surrounding Cohasset Heights Landfill and the recycling transfer facility (RTF) have made the health board's scope "huge."

"When someone comes before us with a $20,000 to $30,000 septic system approval, we owe it a quality review," she said.

White said more members would enable the health board to improve communications by having liaisons to other town boards

She said the resignation of long-time member William Baird "brought the issue to a head."

Selectmen will leave a space on the town meeting warrant for a possible article asking for a by-law change for the health board to increase from three to five members. They plan to discuss the issue more in depth at their meeting Monday (Jan. 23).

Source of odor unknown

Selectmen are perplexed by a foul odor in town hall that is particularly evident in the downstairs ladies room.

Executive secretary Gregory Doyon said the plumbing will be rechecked and holes may have to be drilled into the walls to find the source of the odor which smells like a dead animal.

The odor isn't affected by the weather, selectmen said.

Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby said the odor was definitely organic in nature.

Flu season may strike soon

whooping cough in the state each year.

"This is nothing new," she added.

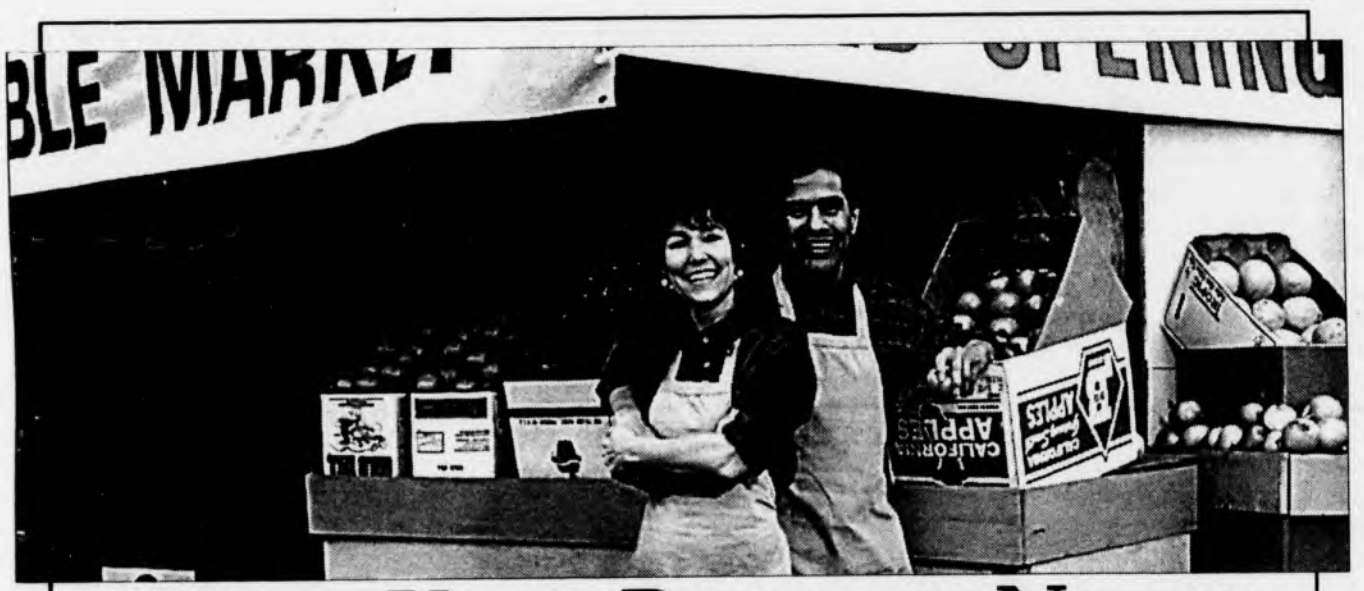
However, over the last 10 years, there has been a greater incidence of pertussis among the older adolescent and young adult populations, she said. It can be mistaken for chronic bronchitis at these age levels, since the disease is less severe. Booster shots of the currently available vaccine administered to this age group are not recommended due to increased instances of side effects, Lett explained.

Her department expects to begin testing a pertussis booster vaccine within the next five years that can be administered to teenagers and adults.

Although the illness itself is less severe in adolescents and adults, it is important to vaccinate infants to offer protection until they are older, she added.

Dr. Godzik said people are regularly exposed to low levels of pertussis and, as a result, have their immunity boosted by this natural exposure.

In a young child, pertussis can be suspected if a he or she has spasms of coughing, with difficulty in catching a breath, and with a distinctive "whoop" when the child inhales, Godzik said. In an adult, it can be any kind of cough, particularly if it persists for a period of weeks. If pertussis is suspected, a test can be administered for confirmation.



WHEN YOUR BUSINESS NEEDS THE MONEY, NOT THE HASSLE.

SmartLine℠ Rockland Trust's short-term, flexible line of credit for small businesses with big ideas.

with Allie's picture, name and the words: A True Role Model 1974-1994. The billboard stands off the Southeast Expressway near Neponset where an estimated 170,000 cars a day pass by.

"Lou Nickinello was all for it," Carroll recalled about his boss, who is a former state representative from Natick.

Carroll met with Allie's father, Samuel, who gave permission to use his son's picture.

"Mr. Allie and I brainstormed back 'n forth for 10 minutes about what it should say," Carroll said. "We came up with 'a true role model' and Mr. Allie said 'that's great, it's right to the point'."

The billboard, which is hand painted in 4 ft.-by-14 ft. wooden sections, is put up with a crane.

It went up Dec. 30 and will stay at the Neponset location for about a month and then be rotated to another spot, whatever is available, Carroll explained.

The painting on the billboard will last about three to four months depending on the weather, he said.

Allie, 20, died after being shot twice Nov. 30 during an apparent robbery in Atlanta where he was a student at Morehouse College.

A METCO student, originally from Roxbury, Allie began attending Cohasset schools in the first grade.

At Morehouse College, he majored in computer science and engineering and was a chapter vice president of the N.A.A.C.P. He dreamed of opening his own computer store in Boston.

Atlanta police arrested Jason Berry, 21, a former Morris Brown College student and charged him with Allie's murder.

At CHS, Allie was a member of the football and track teams as well as the Chess Club and Debating Team. He was an outstanding student who was known for his optimistic personality and interest in audio visual arts.

Mr. Allie said the billboard is a fitting tribute to his son.

"We think it's a good thing for young people to get a chance to see the billboard and get the idea of what is required of them in life.

"Life is helping people, my son did that. He did not take the attitude that 'I can't do it.' If there was something that needed to be done, he'd give it a try," Mr. Allie said.

"It is a positive thing to show someone who has tried — to honor him in that way is very nice."

Ackerley, which leases the land where its billboards stand, donates 15 percent of its billboard space to nonprofit organizations. It also uses space when available for in-house messages such as relaying the dangers of driving drunk, Carroll explained. Recently, Ackerley honored the memory of the former Congressman and Speaker of the House of Representatives, the late Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, Jr. with a billboard.

Bake sale okay'ed

At their meeting this week, selectmen approved the request of the Carriage House Nursery School to use the town hall foyer for a bake sale during the April 1 town elections.

Budgets are discussed

The wire department submitted a proposed $58,002 FY'96 budget with no increase over this year's level. In fact, the budget is down slightly, because there are 52.2 weeks this year and only 52 next, department head Stephen Wigmore said, so the salary line item drops slightly to compensate.

The Council on Aging is asking for $57,016 for next year up slightly over this year's budget, COA member Joseph Buckley told selectmen. He explained the COA needs about $405 for maintenance plan and toner for a photocopier donated by the Second Congregational Church.

The Conservation Commission will pay for its part-time agent next year with $8,876 it has accumulated in permitting fees collected over the past several years. To pay for the position in subsequent years, the town may look at examining the current fee structure, selectmen said.

"We're covered the next 12 months. After that if the town decides we need continued professional services, then we can discuss how to pay for it," Conservation Commission Chairman Ronnie McMorris said.

The conservation commission's FY'96 budget proposal is $25,585 which includes an increase in the hours of the conservation clerk and increases for postage and office supplies.

by Sallyann Chatterton

Let's begin this week by telling all that Michael Figueiredo made the dean's list at UMass/Dartmouth. All are so proud of him and his grand efforts (his grade point average was 3.786), we just had to spread the news!

That's awesome Mike, keep it up!

Last Friday, the 13th, was certainly a special day, that's the day that Larry ("Pop") Fone turned 90 years young! Now, here's the rest of the story — Pop's son, Ken, decided to throw him a small dinner party at the restaurant of his choice, with anything he wanted on the menu. His response to Ken was that he would much prefer one of Carmine's fish dinners from the Strawberry Parfait. That tells you how great that dinner must be, a true tribute to the Parfait and Carmine, don't you think?

Anyway, hope your day was a happy one, Pop, and that your dinner was especially good!

Speaking of birthdays, happy belated greetings go to Margo Aikens. Margo celebrated her big 50 Jan. 9, certainly reason to celebrate! Hope you had fun and got tons of goodies.

Roll out the red carpet for Kim Maynard the next time you see her, she is really a V.I.P. now! Kim has just been made the manager of Cohasset Harbor Travel, located at Cushing Plaza. It sure is nice to see good hard-working people get what they deserve! If you need travel planning, give her a call.

Hats off to Kristin Grassey! Kristin made the dean's list at Wake Forest, where she is a sophomore. That's great going, Kristin.

Congratulations to Amy and Amelia-Catherine Butman! These two remarkable, young and talented ladies have been chosen to dance in "Hits from Broadway." Both sisters will have a solo, three classes, and do a duo with each other in an old classic, "Sisters." Next time you see their parents Bruce and Georgine Butman around town you'll know why their smiling!

Had a nice chat with Florence Jerome last week, she was telling me all about the delightful display that she and her neighbors got together on Christmas night. All the folks from 248-271 Beechwood St. got their luminaries out and lined the street with them. All said it was spectacular to see, and Florence gave me a brief history of them. It is a "simple way to spread the light of Christmas, lights symbolize a new beginning. Children like to think of them as rainbow lights for Santa's reindeer."

What a great idea, wouldn't it be nice to see it throughout the town next year? Just a white waxed bag with a candle in it — and they lasted for three to four hours! Let's remember that!

Hugh Morgan, you know, Captain Morgan of Bus #2, asked that we include a thank-you for him — he said that there were so many people, parents and students, who were so thoughtful on Christmas. This was the best way he could think of to thank one and all. It meant so much to him!

Have you gotten this month's edition of Boston Magazine yet? Cohasset's own Kurt Hochkeppel has his picture in it as an Elvis impersonator. It's a good one, check it out on page 18.

Don't forget that PB&J will be at the Second Congregational Church Saturday (1/21) at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $5, then you get to hear a very talented trio that specializes in wonderful harmonies, well-written original songs and tasty treatments of folk favorites. It promises to be a fun night!

'Susan Smith syndrome'

The excuse machinery has already begun to churn, but this time it has a more anxious tenor. Even before prosecutors announced that they would seek the death penalty for accused double-murderer Susan Smith, the defense had begun making noises about Smith's alleged history of childhood abuse. Now she is said to be "lost in an ocean of grief and guilt."

One is reminded of the apocryphal tale of the man who killed both his parents and subsequently threw himself upon the mercy of the court because he was an orphan. Today that anecdote could describe any number of criminal defendants who, upon being caught, suddenly recall various tales of victimhood or sundry psychological disorders.

It could be argued that anyone who consciously schemed to drown her own children is self-evidently deranged. And Susan Smith's defense team will likely be able to find a compliant psychologist to testify that she should be found not guilty by reason of insanity. Perhaps someday "Susan Smith syndrome" will become an everyday term to absolve the practitioners of infanticide. But a nation whose justice system is run by psychologists will not be a nation where it is safe to walk the streets. Or where babies will sleep safely in their cribs.

Opponents of capital punishment argue that it is cruel, inhumane and can lead to the death of an innocent person. Well, Susan Smith has already confessed to murdering her children, which leaves us with the questions of cruel and inhumane. Imagine for a moment that you are explaining the eventual outcome of the Smith case to a child. The child's age we shall fix at between 6 and 8 years — old enough to understand the basic terms of the issue, but sufficiently young to remain unfamiliar with the peculiar notions of justice that we have witnessed in recent years. In short, the Smith case will go a long way toward shaping our hypothetical child's perceptions of American justice.

The child asks: "What's going to happen to that lady who killed her babies?"

Based upon one possible outcome, you say: "That lady is going to be remanded to a facility where trained professionals will observe her behavior closely over a period of time. The people on the jury felt that she'd had some unhappy things happen to her when she was a child, and also she might not have known exactly what she was doing when she drowned her sons."

The child is likely to be confused, and all sorts of fundamental questions are liable to arise: why don't bad people get punished? Who will protect me from bad people? Does this make my Mommy more likely to dunk me in the lake? This outcome paints a bleak and terrifying picture of the world for a child in the formative years: a world without rules, without responsibility, without accountability. A world that our own increasingly resembles.

Based upon the second outcome, you say: "The jury decided that that woman had to die because there are certain things that our society believes in, and there are certain unspeakable acts that we will not tolerate, and we want to make sure that no Mommy ever does to her children what that bad lady did to hers."

Granted, our justice system should not be founded upon painting a benevolent picture of the world for preadolescents, any more than it should be held hostage by the shibboleths of the therapeutic class. The problem is that the child's perception of justice is, in fact, everyone's perception of justice, before it is warped by the cynicism that comes from watching the Tonya/Bobbitt/O.J./Susan Smith sideshows. Adults already know that bad people get away with terrible things all the time.

The second objection would probably come from those who shun the language of judgmentalism, the willingness to assign standards of good and bad, right and wrong — the crowd that tolerates all but intolerance. But in their zeal to "understand" criminals, they have unwittingly created a society that is decidedly less civilized and humane. How cruel and unusual is the increasingly random mayhem that is recorded in the newspaper every day, to the point where it has become nothing more than the background music of our lawless society.

One is hesitant to use any single criminal defendant's case as an opportunity to "send a message" about our society's notions of justice, but if we do not want future generations to regard our justice system the way a vast majority of adults already do (to wit, that it is a farce), then a child-killer like Susan Smith might not be a bad place to start.

Boats are reliable rail alternative

To the Editor:

I was surprised to see Brian McDonald criticize the boat service as an alternative to the proposed train. (Cohasset Mariner, January 12, 1995, interview). His comments clearly indicate that he is poorly informed about the commuter boat. His statements that the boat service does not make sense during the winter months and that the boats do not run every day on time are just plain false.

I used to take the MBTA service from Quincy and have now taken the boat for about eight years and I can assure Mr. McDonald that the boat service is far more reliable than the train ever was, especially during the winter.

The boat runs just as well in the snows of winter as it does on the finest days of summer. Furthermore, there is always a seat. While Mr. McDonald may have a point when he says that the boat would be uncomfortable during high seas, the boat route, in fact, runs through protected waters. As a result I have never experienced uncomfortable seas, much less been delivered green to my destination. I did, however, arrive at my MBTA destination furious at the poor service many times.

It is understandable that, since the proponents of the train are selling an inferior service, they will go to any lengths to attack the competition. But they ought to stick to the facts. Clearly, the train is a terribly expensive boondoggle that is sure to cost a multiple of the hopeful figures being used to see the project. For a small fraction of that amount, the boat service could be substantially upgraded with a proper terminal at both ends, paved and expanded parking, even faster boats, and connecting bus service at both ends. After this money has been spent, then we would be in a better position to assess whether we even need the train. Currently, Cohasset and the South Shore have a superb commute. Let's improve what we have rather than waste money on unnecessary pork.

By the way I am not a direct abutter and live almost a mile from the tracks.

Matthew Allen will be missed

To the Editor:

I was extremely saddened to learn of the passing of Matthew Allen, a service employee of the Stop & Shop Supermarket in Cohasset for the past 32 years.

On the surface, one may not think this to be of much significance but I would suggest he was really a part of a Cohasset business success story. Matt was initially employed when the first Stop & Shop opened in the Woolworth Plaza back in the 1960s. In the years that followed, Matt witnessed the closing of the A&P market, a major remodel of the old Stop & Shop and the ultimate relocation and opening of the present Super Stop & Shop.

Over the course of his many years of service, Matt was called upon to perform many of the unpleasant chores dictated by the fast moving supermarket business. In fact, those less desirable jobs ultimately became his regular duties for many, many years. He always did his job without complaint and remained a polite, true gentleman at all times.

Throughout those many years of service his biggest asset was the quiet ability to get along with customers, often addressing each person by name. He also knew how each person wanted their groceries packed and cheerfully placed their purchases in their cars with a heartfelt "thank you." At times, it seemed as if Matt knew everyone in Cohasset, male, female, young and old. Matt personified the "personal touch" so sorely lacking in most businesses today.

Although unable to attend Matt's final arrangements due to business considerations, I feel this note to be very much in order.

As I drive by the Super Stop & Shop on Route 3A, I will always feel the cornerstones of that building to be invisibly engraved "Matt Allen."

The return of Bob Hedlund to the Senate

Views self as liberal on civil liberties, conservative on spending

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

Bob Hedlund was sworn into a second term in the State Senate from the Plymouth-Norfolk District Jan. 3 after two years of voter-enforced retirement, and he thinks he'll be a better legislator for it.

"Having won my first time around with no political background and losing in '92 has given me a good grasp of both extremes," he said. "I think I'm a lot wiser from both of those experiences.

"I think we'll have some success in advancing some of the projects down here on the South Shore that have been languishing."

But, as a financially conservative Republican, Hedlund has not changed that much in his philosophical outlook an legislation.

"On civil liberties, I've been perceived a liberal," he said "On economic issues, I would definitely be considered a conservative."

Hedlund, still fresh from winning his old seat back from Brian McDonald, made these points in the interview:

- Greenbush. "We have to do something about mass transportation options here on the South Shore, but I just don't think Greenbush is the best bang for a buck."
- Local aid. "During my two years in office, I was willing to make a lot of tough votes where I thought we could cut back because I wanted to preserve local aid. I still have that position."
- Welfare. "I am advocating, not the elimination of our general relief program, but taking away the welfare magnet status that Massachusetts had and still has. I would support the governor's efforts at reform."

State Sen. Bob Hedlund

The following is the tape-recorded text of the interview with Hedlund:

T.H. — The campaign is over now. Are you going to continue the libel suit?

Hedlund — Obviously, it's something that's totally separate from the political realm. All I've got to say for that, as a businessman I had ups and downs, some real good times and some real tough times. I've had some business problems. I was advised to back away from my responsibilities but to come out of it with my reputation intact. I worked very hard for five years to meet my obligations not only with the federal government, where you don't have any choice, but with the contractors and vendors who worked with me. They were very, very understanding and gave me a lot of leeway to work through it. After struggling the way I did for so long to open up my mail and see that kind of information put forth about me that wasn't true and had nothing to do with the political side of it . . .

T.H. — Brian has issued a statement of regret for some of the things he said during the campaign. Do you feel the same way?

Hedlund — I did not do some of those things that certain people who had a dislike of Brian suggested I do. That I make reference the Howie Carr article, for instance. We never did that. I didn't get into his personal stuff. The only thing that I regret was that, the Sunday before the election, I got up at 2 in the morning and got out this negative piece just before the election. We did a lot of things to counter the personal misinformation that was put forth. At 2 in the morning a press release went out rebutting what he said and we said that despite the fact that people have urged me to pull out Brian's domestic problems I chose not to. I didn't mean to give him that shot. I wish I hadn't.

T.H. — Why do you feel you won the election? Is there any one issue that did it for you?

Hedlund — When you're talking such a small margin of victory, I don't think you can point to any one thing. It was a combination of things. I think Brian's estimate that I saw in a newspaper was somewhat accurate. I think his support of Bulger hurt him. His support of the grad tax hurt him. I think that I was able to differentiate (between us) on welfare reform, which is definitely a big issue for people. Those are three biggies. And his reliance on PAC money. That certainly hurt him. He was perceived as a reformer in past years, then all of a sudden he became part of the system.

T.H. — For the benefit of those who don't remember you, where do you fit on the Republican scale? Right wing? Moderate?

Hedlund — You would have to specify what area of government you're talking about to put a label on me. I've been overall a consistent libertarian. On civil liberties I've been perceived a liberal. On economic issues I would definitely be considered a conservative. I was a real, hard-core free market libertarian in the two years I was in office on economic issues and spending issues.

T.H. — Are you going to go through any indoctrination like the last time?

Hedlund — The interesting thing is we only have four new faces coming to the Senate this year. Or, in my case, an old, new face. And two of those members are coming from the House and one is coming from city government so you don't have any of the real novices you had in 1990. I don't know what they've got in store for indoctrination, but it won't be on the level that we had in years past.

T.H. — How many Republicans are in the Senate now?

Hedlund — We're up to 10. When I was in (before), we had 15.

T.H. — That doesn't sustain a veto, does it?

Hedlund — No.

T.H. — There are so few Republicans in the Senate, what can you do in terms of accomplishing what you want to do?

Hedlund — In terms of local projects, I'll obviously have the luxury of working with folks with whom I've had a relationship in the past, whom I can work with, whether it be the secretary of transportation or the governor himself. I think that's positive for the district.

In terms of overall ideological kinds of issues, there are other factors at work. You have a small number of Republicans, but you also have a block of Democrats who want to see changes on such issues as welfare. You should be able to put together a coalition to advance welfare reform. The governor certainly has somewhat of a mandate, having carried 71 percent of the vote. He made welfare reform one of the vanguard issues of his campaign. So I think we will see some parts of the Weld agenda, holding the line on taxes, welfare reform and such.

T.H. — How do you stand on the following issues? Greenbush?

Hedlund — I'm not someone who is comfortable with Greenbush. It's not something I can endorse. I recognize we have to do something about mass transportation options here on the South Shore, but I just don't think Greenbush is the best bang for a buck. That's going to be first on my plate. I'm hoping to meet with Secretary Kerasiotes even before I'm sworn in on Jan. 3 to be brought up to speed on that issues.

T.H. — Billy Bulger? You told me once you were willing to jump the aisle to vote against him.

Hedlund — Yeah. I think that 18 years as the longest serving Senate president in state history is long enough. I would like to see a change. But if we don't have the votes to bring about a change, I don't suspect I'll have any trouble working with him. I had a decent relationship with him before. We got along fine. We just have policy differences in terms of how the body of the Senate should operate.

T.H. — Local aid. What can you do about it?

Hedlund — I think I was a stronger advocate of local aid than Brian was, and I'll tell you why. He was a local official. I understand that he understands the importance of local aid and what it's meant to the communities and how communities suffered under the Dukakis budget deficits that we had at the time local aid was slashed.

During my two years in office, I was willing to stand up and make a lot of tough votes in areas of the budget where I thought we could cut back because I wanted to preserve local aid. I still have that position. I would prefer to see money come back to the local communities to be disbursed rather than as state mandates to be foisted upon us. I still will advocate for increased local aid at the expense of other programs here in the state that I don't think are cost-effective. As evidence of my advocacy for local aid, I was put on the Mass Municipal Advisory Board back in my tenure in 1991-92 because of my outspokenness on this issue.

T.H. — There's always a temptation on the part of the Legislature to tinker with Proposition 2 1/2. How do you feel 2 1/2 has worked? Do you think it needs some changes?

Hedlund — I don't think there are any changes needed. I understand some of the constraints, but overall it's benefitted this state quite well. It played a role in an economic turn-around back in the '80s. It has served us well.

T.H. — Welfare?

Hedlund — We look at other states . . . Michigan, for instance, eliminated their general relief program completely. I was advocating not the elimination of our general relief program but taking away the welfare magnet status that Massachusetts had and still has. I would support the governor's efforts at reform, but I think we need to go further. We need to make the clothing allowance a voucher system. There is tremendous abuse in that program. Able-bodied college students, convicts, illegal aliens, I would like to see off the welfare rolls completely. That's something we have to focus on. There were strides made towards that, but obviously, as we've seen from recent news reports, there's holes in that. I want to see a system whereby new residents who arrive Massachusetts would derive the same benefits from the state they came from for the first 12 months. That would take away that magnet syndrome that I talked about.

T.H. — The death penalty?

Hedlund — If that comes up I will support it.

T.H. — Any other crime measures you'd like to see implemented?

Hedlund — California has just gone through a complete prison reform effort. They've taken away the weights from the prisons. I'd like to see a system in place where prisoners can get their frustrations and energy expended by working on worthwhile programs that would benefit the community rather than a health club atmosphere in the prisons. We've been talking about court reform for years and years in this state. Something has to be done because of the flow of cases in the court system is backlogged and has to be addressed.

T.H. — Quite a bit was made during the campaign about PACs. What would you like to see done about campaign contributions and finances?

Hedlund — I'm more concerned with lobbyist contributions. A case can be made for PACs. It's individuals contributing to a PAC and that PAC then makes a disbursement to a candidate. There's a little bit of an arms length

Trial boat service from Scituate is ferry possible

By Rob Rogers
Mariner staff

State and local officials are planning a 45-day trial run of a commuter boat from Scituate to Boston as part of a proposal to expand ferry service along the Massachusetts coast.

That demonstration has been delayed, however, by the fact that the boat ferry advocates hoped to use has been sold, and that another vessel may not be available until June.

State Senator and transportation committee member Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) says that the state's plans to increase floating transportation alternatives on the South Shore will take place whether or not the proposed restoration of the Old Colony Railroad's Greenbush line proceeds as planned.

"The state is actually moving on two fronts with boats right now," Hedlund said. "The first is that they are forging ahead on a statewide commuter boat transportation system along the coast, which will involve the designation of four terminal locations, at least two of which will be on the South Shore. That project has already gone beyond policy determination — we are already studying the best locations for ferry ports, and hope to have something in place within four years. I'm really enthusiastic about it."

Hedlund added that the new South Shore ferry terminals could conceivably be located in areas already strongly associated with maritime transportation.

"I'd like, of course, for the locations they choose to be within my district," Hedlund said. "I'd like to see the Hingham boat terminal enhanced and made more attractive. I've also talked with Weymouth selectmen about building a commuter terminal in the Fore River area. There, they already have a rich natural waterway, as well as vacant land that could be readily developed."

'...This is a test, and only a test. It's something that definitely needs to be looked at. We don't know what we'll find out from the whole process until we do it.'

— Scituate Selectmen Chairman Joseph Norton

Although Scituate might not be the most likely site for an eventual MBTA pier, Hedlund sees the coming 45-day trial run as his "second front" in ferry development — an important step in determining the future of water transportation and Scituate's commuter needs.

"I have been working along with the selectmen in Scituate to develop this project, following the one-day trial run of a catamaran from Scituate Harbor to Boston Harbor on Dec. 10," Hedlund said. "At the time, some skeptics said we would need to test the ferry over an extended period of time in order to find out whether it would really work for Scituate. So, we put this 45-day trial run together.

"Right now, the T is researching the logistics of the trial," Hedlund continued. "We were hoping to have everything in place by early February. But the boat we had hoped to use — the catamaran used for the initial trial — has been sold to a company in Florida. We're in negotiation with the boat builder right now, and hopefully, another boat will be available by the first of June. Of course, since this is a state project, the MBTA would need to satisfy all Chapter 91 public bid requirements before assigning a contract to any one boat company."

The 92-foot catamaran Friendship IV carried 149 passengers on a 90-minute journey from Scituate to Boston Harbor and back Dec. 10. The journey was sponsored by Scituate selectmen and members of the anti-rail Coastal Coalition, who have advocated ferry transportation as an alternative to restoration of the Greenbush line.

Neither the town nor the state will pay for the principal costs of running the experimental ferry, Hedlund said. That funding will come from private investors, who are hoping to make a going concern of the project.

"Scituate won't be involved at all with the expenses," Hedlund said. "A group of private South Shore folks there. There is no arms length with the role that lobbyists play.

I would like to see a ban on lobbyist contributions period. It would take some of that undue influence that many candidates talk about out of the system. That's not a condemnation of lobbyists. A legislator relies on lobbyists for information to hear that side of the argument. But when you inject money into the process it taints it a little bit.

T.H. — What committees would you like to be on?

Hedlund — There's a lot I'd like to be on.

T.H. — What do you expect?

Hedlund — I don't know yet. I haven't had a conversation yet with leadership about committee assignments yet.

T.H. — What were you on before?

Hedlund — I was very fortunate in 1990. David Locke and Bulger were very good to me. Three quarters of the committee assignments I requested I received. I was on taxation, commerce & labor, public service and public safety. It was a great time to be on those committees because on taxation we got a lot of reforms through. We were very active committees but I'd like to reshuffle the deck a little bit.

T.H. — You sound as though you would like the Taxation Committee again.

Hedlund — No. No. There are some other committees which would be more of a benefit to the South Shore that I'd like to get on.

T.H. — Like transportation?

Hedlund — That could be one, yeah.

T.H. — You don't want to talk about that, do you?

Hedlund — I don't want to jinx myself. I was lucky in 1990. It's going to be a little tougher this time to get what I want because there are so few new Republicans going in that there aren't going to be a lot of open committee slots. I'm going to have to jockey for what I want.

T.H. — It's been two years since you were in the Senate. Both you and the Legislature have changed. What can we expect differently from you?

Hedlund — Unfortunately, the Legislature has not changed too dramatically. In terms of myself, certainly having won my first time around and the success that I had with no political background and losing in '92 has given me a good grasp of both extremes. I think I'm a lot wiser from both of those experiences and probably will enable me be a lot better legislator than I was in '91 and '92. Your first term is always a learning term. I suspect we're going to be a much better legislator.

T.H. — Much better in what way?

Hedlund — I think we'll have some success in advancing some of the projects down here on the South Shore that have been languishing.

T.H. — For instance?

Hedlund — First and foremost, transportation, which is an all-encompassing category, obviously. But then there are a lot of smaller projects. The 3A bridge between Marshfield and Scituate. The Fore River reconstruction. The Route 139 off-ramp and the safety concerns of people who use that ramp. When I say transportation I'm talking about boats and trains or proposed trains. We've got Abigail Adams State Park in Weymouth. That's in the pipeline. Projects that were started down in Hull during my tenure on the MDC, which hopefully I'll be around for completion.

Bill for 'T' on table, official says

restoration would have on local assessments is speculation at this point, but Hynes said he wants the state pay for assessments.

"If you want a system that's fair and equitable, it doesn't make sense any longer to require a certain number of communities to be assessed, ignoring the fact that other communities are not," Hynes said.

"My study shows the only fair and equitable way is to have the MBTA pick up the costs," said Hynes, who noted that from 1982-88 the state did pick up the costs of the 23 communities who had no service but were assessed.

Cohasset selectmen raised the issue of how the town's assessment might be affected by Greenbush rail while interviewing environmental consulting firms last week. Cohasset is hiring a consultant to help the town comment on the MBTA's Environmental Impact Report on transportation alternatives.

This state reimbursement ended for the most part in 1989, said Hynes who now wants the state to cover all 79 communities.

The main problem with Hynes strategy is that the MBTA may not be able to afford to do so. Hynes said that about 37 percent of the MBTA's operating budget is debt service and the state has long viewed the T as a budget buster.

"Hopefully the commission will wrestle with that and come up with suggestions to achieve that objective," he said, adding "it's a conundrum, a puzzle and the parts don't fit easily. The commission was created to bring intelligent information to a table and see if some consensus can be developed."

Hynes spoke with MBTA General Manager John Haley, who maintained that there will be a decision on Greenbush restoration by June 1, and that the MBTA remains committed to the project.

According to Julie Vitek a spokesperson in the MBTA's Public Affairs Office, Cohasset is a part of the district and will pay $153,000 in assessments in fiscal year 1995.

The only MBTA service in Cohasset is the Ride, a shuttle van for the elderly and individuals with disabilities but about 170 Cohasset residents take the Hingham Commuter Boat each day, Vitek said.

"The idea is that communities will share costs and form a regional transportation district through which all towns benefit and share in subsidizing," she added.

who have asked me not to reveal their names wants to take the risk and make the investment. What they want is a guaranteed average of 92 bodies riding the ferry, at a cost of about $4.50 to $5 per head. The state would subsidize about 22 tickets.

"They're hoping for a deal with the T similar to arrangements the T has with other carriers, where the state would pay for marketing and other peripheral costs, and the main costs would be met by the investors," Hedlund said. "The only thing the town of Scituate will have to worry about is whether there is parking space available during the demonstration."

Parking, indeed, remains perhaps the most significant variable in determining the viability of a commuter boat in Scituate. Hedlund had hoped that the 45-day ferry demonstration would take place during the winter and early spring, when parking at the town-owned Cole Parkway might be available. But space would still be especially tight for curious commuters hoping to borrow the spots traditionally reserved for Scituate Harbor shoppers during the summer months.

"I really wouldn't know how it might affect the merchants, until I had some idea of what the number of commuters would be like," said Scituate Federal Savings Bank president Joseph Hayes. "If we have an excess number of parking spaces, then having the additional people coming into the harbor could be a good thing. If we don't have excess spaces, we may have a problem. We have a parking problem in town the way things are now. People looking for spaces close to the town pier would present the greatest problem of all."

Scituate selectmen chairman Joseph Norton believes that the town can overcome all obstacles toward making the ferry's trial run a success.

"The whole boat option has been a topic of discussion for less than a month," Norton said. "I'm mystified that people have already thrown up so many objections to trial boat service, when the Greenbush line was studied for 10 years before anyone brought up any problems with it. We'll find places for people to park. We may even ask commuters to be dropped off at the pier in the morning, to make parking less of a problem.

"A lot of the details in this proposal have not been worked out," Norton added. "We have no idea what the ridership of such a boat would be like. We'll have to find a suitable spot to store the boat, so that the fishing fleet won't be disrupted. We'll have to make do with things as best we can. This is a test, and only a test. It's something that definitely needs to be looked at. We don't know what we'll find out from the whole process until we do it."

Town census was mailed

The 1995 Cohasset town census was mailed to each household early in January.

Compliance with state requirements provides proof of residence to protect voting rights, veteran's bonuses, housing for the elderly and related benefits as well as providing information for selection of jurors.

Returning the census does not register residents as voters, but failure to do so may result in the voter's name being removed from the voting list. If a person wishes to remain a voter in Cohasset, his or her name should not be removed from the census.

Mail-in registration forms are available at the library and post office. As of January, 1995, registration will be available at the Registry of Motor Vehicles and other state agencies.

Dog forms will be enclosed with the census mailing. Licenses are due in January and are valid through Dec. 31,. 1995. Numbers will be issued on a first-come, first-served basis.

PSO volunteers needed

The Cohasset Parent School Organization is looking for three volunteers to serve on the nominating committee.The committee will oversee the elections for school council representatives and nominate candidates for open positions on the 1995-96 executive board. The committee will meet about six times, beginning in February and ending in April.

Serving on the nominating committee does not preclude volunteering for a position on the board or running for a school council position. Please call Ruth Wilcox (383-1827) if interested.

DHS survey results ready

William Orman, acting principal of Deer Hill School, has announced that the poll taken on each question in the School Council's Survey of Deer Hill has been compiled and is available for review by parents.

Copies of the 22-page report of bar graphs, grading and written comments by parents are available for review at the Deer Hill library, the school's front office and the Paul Pratt Library. Every Deer Hill teacher has a copy as well. The reports may be borrowed for home review and then returned.

The grade given for each subject reflects the average of grades given by participating parents. The first part of the review process involves parental input about likes and dislikes, concerns and suggestions, which will provide the basis for planning and changes by the Deer Hill School Council.

Open House at Derby

Derby Academy in Hingham invites parents to an Open House on Tuesday, Jan. 24, in the school library, beginning at 9 a.m. The snowdate is Thursday, Jan. 26.

The focus of this year's Open House is grades four through seven, but parents interested in other grades are welcome to attend. Headmaster Edward Foley and Jay Sadlon, admissions director, will be on hand to talk with parents. Visitors may tour the campus and observe classes.

Derby Academy is an independent day school for boys an girls in pre-kindergarten through grade 9. Currently 245 students from South Shore communities are enrolled at Derby.

For further information or to reserve a place at the Open House, call the school office at 749-0746. The registration deadline for first-round applications is Feb. 1.

Ms. Hurley also serves as a member of the Student Council which shows a recognition of her leadership abilities by her peers.

In my class, Modern World History, Ms. Hurley has consistently presented quality work, focused during class and has added to the classroom environment by being a leader during cooperative learning projects keeping students in her group on task.

When one sees that in addition to Ms. Hurley's participation and leadership, she has also gained recognition by earning a place on the 1st quarter Honor Roll, I believe that support is evident for her nomination as Student of the Month.

After-school recreation

The Recreation Commission will be holding after-school programs at the Deer Hill School from Jan. 23 through March 17, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

They include team games/sports on Mondays (ages 4 and 5); hoop games/skills on Tuesdays (grades 4-6); low-organized games on Wednesdays (ages 4 and 5) and arts and crafts on Fridays (ages 5-8).

The Cohasset School Department conducts an after-school day-care program at the Deer Hill School until 6 p.m. each school day. If day-care is needed prior to, or following, recreation programs, registration may be made on an hourly-rate basis. Registration forms are available at the Deer Hill and Osgood school offices.

Osgood children enrolled in the day-care program at the Deer Hill School will be bused to Deer Hill at the conclusion of the Osgood school day at 2:50 p.m.

The registration deadline for the after-school recreation programs is Jan. 18. Classes run for seven weeks unless school is cancelled due to inclement weather.

The cost for a three-day program is $60/1 child, 2nd child/$30, 3rd child/$15. The fee for a two-day program is $45/1 child, 2nd child/$23, 3rd child/$12. For a one-day program the cost is $28/1 child, 2nd child/$15 and 3rd child/$9.

Service Corps launched

By Ed Leonard
Special to the Mariner

The faculty of Deer Hill School is pleased to introduce a new service opportunity for students, the Deer Hill Service Corps. Twenty-four sixth-grade students were selected for this group by their homeroom teacher in consultation with other staff members.

In order to participate in this group, students need to demonstrate good citizenship, responsible behavior, good communication skills and academic success. There will be three service periods during the year. New students will be selected for each new service period and some students will be replaced.

Students selected for the Deer Hill Service Corps will have responsibilities around the school. For example, they will assist Mr. Sweeney during fourth-grade gym classes, help Mrs. Murphy in the library, assist Mrs. Meade in the office, assist Mrs. Berman in the Art room or help Ms. Banda in the Pre-School program.

This is the first year of this new program and the staff members are very pleased with the students' efforts. Congratulations to the first group of Corps members:

Mrs. Cisneros's Homeroom: Sarah Motley, Craig Davis, Ary Afshar, Ben Bixby, Julia Lovallo and Tim Grassey.

Mrs. Magnussen's Homeroom: Emily Coyne, Maggie O'Connor, Leslie Thornton, Dan Duffy, Sarah Kidder, Alex Dedes.

Mr. Becker's Homeroom: Justin Langham, Kate Henderson, Lydia Guild, John Crowley-Buck, Morgan Hurley and Clara Sceery.

Mr. Shultz's Homeroom: Ashley Ulmer, Ashley van Hartesvett, Doug O'Brien, Erik Shea, Taylor Strecker and Mike Kennedy.

Sixth graders in Mrs. Magnussen's class made these pouches to hold amulets, which are small objects or charms that prehistoric people carried to guide and protect them against evil.

What's an amulet?

The sixth-graders in Mrs. Magnussen's class know it is a small object or charm that prehistoric people carried to guide and protect them against evil. The amulet was contained in a pouch or sack that was worn around their necks.

The students' assignment was to construct their own pouch or sack using raw materials that would have been available at that time. Construction materials could be plant fibers, leather or fur that were hand-woven or stitched by hand. Each student presented his/her project to the class explaining what materials were used and what technology was employed to build the pouch. For good luck, students placed their own amulets inside their pouches.

Gill/Leonard parenting course

By Diana N. Kinch
Special to the Mariner

A seven-part workshop was offered to Cohasset parents and community members called "Raising A Healthy Child" by Michael Gill, Ed. D. Health Ed. Coordinator of the Cohasset Public Schools and Ed Leonard, M. Ed., Adjustment Counselor at Deer Hill and Osgood Schools.

The class was presented in two components: Health and Parenting. Michael Gill's insight from his daily work with Cohasset High School students, gave a comprehensive view of what goes on with teenagers, not only from his own perspective but also from the viewpoint of their peers. Ed Leonard's portion of the class focused on the parenting component, identifying several behaviors and giving specific strategies for dealing with them.

Of the 15 to 20 people participating in the class, some are parents of high school teenagers. Their feedback was helpful to the others who are just experiencing the beginning of the adolescent process. Since there are few forums for parents to talk with one another about the shared tensions and stresses of the adolescent years, questions about bolstering and maintaining, self-esteem during the most confused stages of ones life, sexual behavior, drugs, alcohol, violence in the media, promoting gender respect, eating disorders and puberty are often unanswered.

"Dr. Michael Gill and Mr. Ed Leonard led thought-provoking discussions, and the sharing of ideas among parents was wonderful. The textbook Parenting Teenagers, is an excellent guide, filled with positive ways to communicate with teens," said Terese D'Urso who participated in the course.

What we learned from being in class together is that the job of parenting does not get easier, but it helps to have a sense of humor to put the latest upheaval in perspective. For all adults and teenagers it takes a lot of practice to understand and cooperate with each other to choose the right path. This course offers one way to help us get on track.

The Parenting Course concluded in the first week of December with a majority of the adults anxious to repeat such a positive and helpful experience. The facilitators have assured us of the intention to offer it again in the fall.

Hoopsters overpower Hull, 88-56

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset's varsity squad met up with Hull last Tuesday night for the team's first game this year. Cohasset romped, crushing Hull by a score of 88-56.

"Downtown" Jeremiah Stevenson (a season high 11 points) started the game with a layup and point guard Tom Allen followed with one of his own. Hull tied the game at four but Joe Slotnick popped a three-pointer and the Skippers never looked back. Two Hull free throws later and Stevenson nailed the first of his treys. Stevenson sank another three and Cohasset had a 13-8 lead.

Dorian Bryant knocked down two free throws and Pete Bishop's pass to Stevenson set up his third three-pointer of the game.

Strong passing by Bryant to Allen led the point guard to drain his first three of the night. On the next play, Allen shot his second trey of the contest.

Two Jarrod Hardwick baskets and strong offensive rebounding by Slotnick and Bishop, a Bish put-back, and Jim Magner three-pointer made the score 33-12.

Bishop had two more offensive putbacks and Matt Pierce drove hard to the hoop for his first points of the night. He would pick up nine before the game was over. Hardwick laid it in after a length-of-the-court pass from Bryant. Hardwick stuck two free throws and a pull-up jumper to make the score 45-20.

Cohasset's Jerome Marion hit a free throw and Hardwick sank another pull-up for his 12th point of the game. Two buckets by Bryant after offensive rebounds made Cohasset's lead 52-24. Marion's three-pointer from 22 feet closed

Having a bad hair day?

If you are, don't try out for the Hanover High boys' basketball team.

Last week, "Hair-Gate" hit the newspapers and was the talk of high school sports fans on the South Shore.

For those unfamiliar, the father of a Hanover High student claimed his son was cut from the team by coach Ron Garrison because his hair was too long.

Garrison said his roster decision was based on ability and not hair length.

However, HHS Supt. Kenneth Johnson, concerned about a possible discrimination suit, ordered the player back on the varsity. Garrison refused to follow the order and was suspended from coaching.

He then filed a suit against the administration to get his job back.

Eventually cooler heads prevailed in Brockton Superior Court as Garrison was reinstated as coach and the player was given a spot on the roster. (It turned out the student, who played last year at HHS but tried out late for this year's team due to an injury, decided not to suit up for Garrison and the Indians after all.)

However, during the whole "Hair-Gate" controversy it came out in the Herald that there is a dress code at Hanover High for the boys' basketball team that includes hair length.

First things first on "Hair-Gate." I played basketball at Hanover High for three years and don't remember a dress code or any rule about hair length.

The only thing our coach (the late Eddie Amaral, who Garrison played for as well,) asked us of was to try and wear a tie on the day of the game. Some did, some didn't, but no one was benched or booted from the team if they didn't have one on.

I also don't remember anyone complaining too much about the length of our hair during my junior season when the Hanover hoop team won the South Shore League title with a 20-0 regular season record. (By the way, I rode the bench the whole season and periodically waved a towel like M.L. Carr.)

Besides, if you really want to see high school athletes with long and funky hairstyles, go watch a boys' soccer game. Today's soccer players have pony tails, rats tails, shaved heads, Mohawks and even long flowing locks that reach their shoulders. You couldn't have a dress code for soccer players even if you tried.

Two more things about hair and basketball.

Bill Walton used to play in the NBA with a ponytail and full beard. And when he led the Portland Trailblazers to the NBA title in '77, he looked like a Dead Head. Nobody seemed to care in Portland.

And in the late 50s, NBA administrators tried to ban facial hair after Celtic Bill Russell grew a goatee.

Russell ignored the league administrators, kept the goatee and won 11 World Championships in 13 years, including eight straight. Red Auerbach

Bryant is the 'Rock' to hoop success

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

Perhaps the best way to describe Skippers' basketball player Dorian Bryant is to mention his surplus of nicknames.

'Darifucius,' 'Darius,' 'Darian,' and 'The Bruiser' were just some of those discussed. But perhaps the best name to tag on this four-year varsity starter would be 'Rock.'

Bryant's talent was demonstrated well in a recent game against Carver. His stats were 16 points and 17 rebounds, a season high. His presence in the paint gives Cohasset a potent weapon on the boards and on defense.

Bryant has started numerous fastbreaks for the Skippers this season by grabbing a rebound and heaving an outlet pass up the floor, usually right on target. His goal for the season was to "take more charges." While this helps stop the other team, it also excites the Skippers and exemplifies his dedication to winning.

"We have to increase our intensity win, but also keep it on an even keel to go as far as we can," Bryant said.

"I'm happy with how the team played against Hull and hope we can continue at this level."

Bryant brings his talent to the football field in the fall, as tight end. He became Cohasset's clutch player in third down situations, always coming up with a leaping, finger-tip grab for the first down. He's debating whether to play lacrosse or track this spring.

"Dorian has been a four-year varsity starter for us," head coach Ron Ford said. "He's our best defensive player, definitely a kid who works very hard, gets dirty, and is willing to take charge.

"He works very hard at the parts of the game that most people do not appreciate. He doesn't get the credit that's due to him. He does a lot of the dirty work for me."

If Dorian Bryant continues to grab the rebounds, play defense and take charge as he's been doing, there's no doubt that he will have earned the nickname 'Rock.'

Three-sport star Dorian Bryant concentrates on a free throw attempt during a Cohasset High basketball game. Bryant is still undecided what sport he'll pursue this coming spring.

'Fairy-tale season' suits Sweeney just fine

Pinocchio had Jimminy Cricket watching out for his well-being. The ever-present Tinkerbell was never far from Peter Pan. And of course, the Fonz came between Richie Cunningham and harms way.

The Cohasset High wrestling team, too, must have its own guardian angel watching over it. Considering the fact the Skippers are above the .500 mark with five eighth-graders in the starting lineup, their season has been nothing short of a complete surprise.

An All-Star in more than gymnastics

Sophomore Jodi Colwill has priorities beyond helping lead Skippers to SSL title

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Just how popular is sophomore gymnast Jodi Colwill with the group of 5- to 7-year-olds she teaches the sports' basic fundamentals to at the South Shore Community Center?

How do marriage proposals from two 6-year-old boys, smitten with the personable 15-year-old sound? One of them went so far to prove his sincerity by actually presenting Colwill with a plastic engagement ring.

Colwill was flattered by the true confessions of the young Romeos. It's that type of fun and honesty from the novice gymnasts that makes teaching them all the more rewarding for Colwill.

"I love it when the little kids like you," she said. "They're so cute."

Colwill believes it would be easier coaching the younger kids than...well, her own team, herself included.

"They're not really scared to to things," Colwill said, then added with a laugh, "When you ask them to do something they don't whine like we do."

Ruthann Ardizzoni, the head gymnastics coach for the undefeated high school squad, and long-time coach at the center, says Colwill is one of the most popular high school gymnasts with the young kids.

"The kids really like her a lot," said Ardizzoni, who herself has coached Colwill since she first took up gymnastics as a 7-year-old. "When she's not there they always ask where she is.

"We had some boys in the class who had a crush on Jodi. The boys can be really funny like that."

Colwill started taking gymnastics lessons as pure recreation, but the more she improved, the hungrier she became in wanting to excel at the sport. Once she reached Level 5 and the moves became more difficult, Colwill was all the more determined to improve to the point where she could perform them.

She hasn't looked back since.

"I think I continued with gymnastics because I wanted to get better and better," Colwill said. "And I'm still trying to do that."

A South Shore League All-Star on the beam in '93-94, Colwill saved her best performance in the event for the all-league meet where she graced the 4-inch wide surface for an 8.3.

A member of the varsity squad since the seventh grade, Colwill has already set personal bests this season in the all-around (29.5) and vault (8.05).

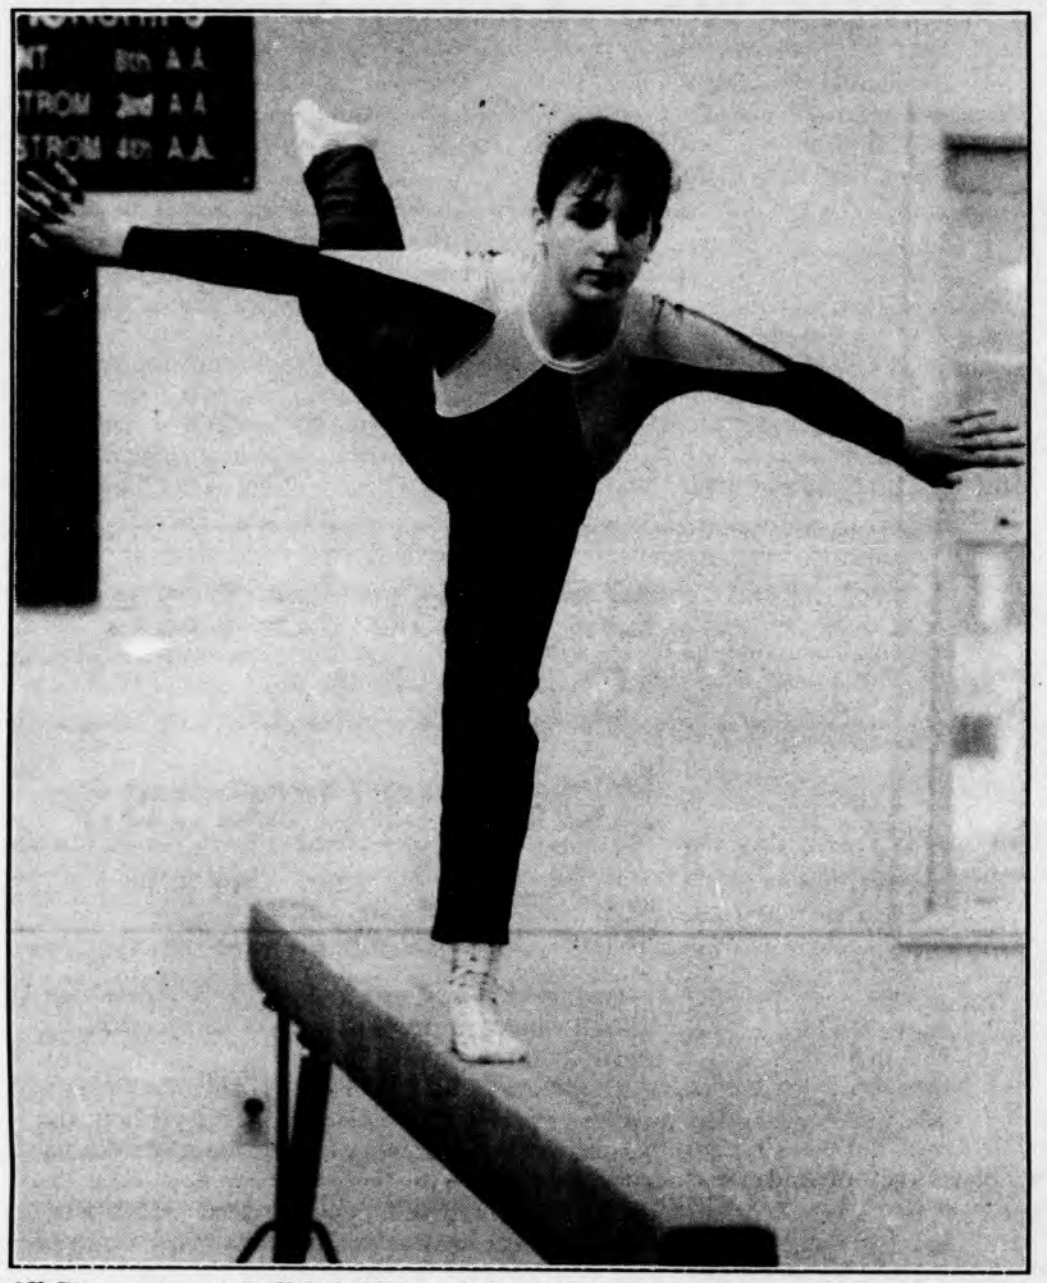
What makes the marks all the more significant is the fact that Colwill improved on her best performances after losing five weeks of training due to an injury that brought her training to a screeching halt.

Colwill pulled ligaments and sustained a severely sprained ankle when she was working out on the vault. When she was finally able to begin practicing again, Colwill found it difficult to work as hard as she hoped on the beam, vault and bars because of the pressure it put on her ankle.

Colwill was also very much aware of the possibility of suffering another injury. "I was scared to do things because I didn't want to reinjure it and miss the entire season."

"It's real encouraging because now I know without an injury I can go higher," Colwill said. "The judges have been fair but they've been scoring low."

Now, with her ankle almost 100 percent, Colwill is itching to get on with the season in the hopes of improving her scores even more. The main priority is winning the SSL title outright, rather than sharing it with Scituate as the Skippers did last year.



All-Star gymnast Jodi Colwill is a picture of concentration as she works on her balance beam routine. Colwill would like to continue coaching beginner gymnasts as well as volunteer to help the needy.

Ardizzoni agrees that Colwill's best performances are still in front of her. "I believe the second half of the season will be stronger for her," she said. "She has improved tremendously over the last two years."

Ardizzoni says Colwill is starting to pick up speed on her vault approach and has become more aggressive in attacking the event.

And with Colwill, there is no wasted time in the gym. A two-hour training session is just that: Two hours of training.

"Jodi utilizes her time well in the gym," Ardizzoni said. "You never see her fooling around. She's always working. Those are the virtues of a good gymnast."

As the only coach she has ever had, Colwill trusts the training program Ardizzoni has mapped out for her and the payoff she'll receive if she follows it right along.

And having a coach for the duration Colwill has had Ardizzoni inevitably brings with it a degree of friendship and mutual admiration.

"I think it's an advantage because I'm friends with her," Colwill said. "She knows my ability and what we can do."

The Skippers are now prepping for their second meet against the co-champs of a year ago.

Cohasset has beaten the Sailors once this year already. The attitude heading into the meet was far different than it was Colwill's freshman year when the Skippers were the up-and-coming team taking on the defending champions.

"We worked really hard and went in psyched," Colwill said of this season's first meet against Scituate. We didn't watch them warm up and I think they were in awe at how much better we got."

Colwill admits the team wasn't at its best the second time around but doubts that'll be the case for round two on January 25.

"I think we were all stressed out," Colwill said. "There was a lot of pressure. I don't think it'll be like that this year though. (This season) we were worried about Hanover because we heard they were really good. But we concentrated on what we needed to do."

This year's win over Scituate marked a big turning point for Colwill. The 8.05 she scored in winning the vault was the first time she had ever broken the 8.0 barrier. Her only loss through the Hanover meet was when the Indians' Renee George edged Colwill, 8.0 to 7.9.

"All last year I was consistently hitting 7.9," Colwill recalled. "Then I hit the 8.05 against Scituate and 8.0 against Carver."

Colwill has always performed well on the vault. She has the distinction of being the first gymnast from the community center to ever score a 9.0 in any event when she vaulted her way into the record books on November 8, 1992.

It was also an inkling of what Colwill could do in a pressure situation.

Needing an 8.0 to move from Level 5 up to 6, Colwill nailed her vault at a meet on Cape Cod.

Colwill's mother, Eileen, enjoys attending Jodi's meets and watching her daughter perform. Unlike many other gymnasts' parents, Mrs. Colwill has never been one to calculate the running score of her daughter while sitting in the stands.

"I just want her to do her best," Mrs. Colwill said. "I like watching her doing the vault because she looks like a locomotive plowing down to the ramp."

She paused for a moment and then said with a laugh, "A graceful locomotive."

As hard as Colwill works out on her skills throughout the year, she finds the time to donate time — beyond teaching children — to other worthwhile pursuits.

A member of the high school's Community Volunteer Service program, Colwill has fed the homeless, as well as abuse victims, at Rosie's Place in Boston.

The experience has opened up Colwill's eyes as to just how different suburban life in Cohasset is from Boston.

"It makes me happy because a lot of them have young kids and you can help them by giving them a hot meal," Colwill said. "It makes you appreciate what you have."

Through the time she has put in helping the needy, Colwill has developed several friendships with the needy. She talks at length with them, holds their babies in her arms, and has become a friend to many.

"It's nice," Colwill said simply.

This year Colwill intends to sacrifice spending Christmas Eve with her family to cook and serve a holiday meal to what she believes will be a large turnout at Rosie's.

"I think on Christmas Eve I'll be able to help a lot more people," Colwill said.

Her selflessness and dedication are more impressive than any vault score Colwill will ever record.

If her 6-year-old admirers knew that, she'd be getting diamond rings.

head coach Torin Sweeney, "but if we finish the season above .500 it'll be a fairy-tale season."

The Skippers are holding strong at 5-4 after coming away with two wins in their last three meets.

Heavyweight Larry Adams' victory against Norwell clinched Cohasset's 42-30 win over the Clippers. The Skippers also defeated Tri-County (56-15) before losing a lopsided meet to Foxboro (59-12).

Eighth-graders Bob Morgan and Luke Caldwell had a fine week for the younger grapplers, winning two matches each, both on pins. Ryan Freeman and Kevin Duffy were victorious in all three meets while Tucker Gledhill and Justin Buckley had two wins each.

John Whitehouse had a milestone week by winning his first varsity match ever.

The Skippers are now prepping for Saturday's fourth-annual Cohasset Wrestling Tournament which begins at 10 a.m., with the finals kicking off at 6:30 p.m.

Sweeney calls the popular meet a "mini sectional" because of there are just three teams within the section that don't compete. Nine teams are expected to be ready to hit the mats come Saturday.

"This is one of the bigger area tournaments," Sweeney said. "It's a big day for us and it brings a lot of excitement to the program. It's a fun thing."

And more than likely, the team's version of Tinkerbell will be alongside the Skippers in some form or another.

Skipper icemen win two

By Carol Riley
Special to the Mariner

Last Saturday night, to the cheers of a record crowd of parents, alumni and local hockey fans at Pilgrim arena, the Cohasset varsity hockey team whipped Norwell, 5-1. Outstanding goaltending by Kyle Bunstein (37 saves), aided the win. Scoring for Cohasset were Chris McKenna (two goals), co-captains Pat Reynolds and Nevin Bunstein, and Mike Shields.

Caitlin Donovan capably made her varsity debut against Norwell.

In a dramatic 8-0 shutout Monday night, goaltender Kevin McKenna held off the South Boston Knights. Goals were scored by Jeff Tosi (two), Mike Shields (two), Brendan Kinchla, Chris McKenna, Kevin Smith and defenseman Anthony Wigmore. In the final period, rookies Nate Cotter, Billy Good, Ryan Hubley, Pat Ridge, Jay Whorisky, Ben Ketchum and Teddy Goff looked sharp.

Cohasset's record improved to 2-7-1. Look for another win Saturday at Pilgrim Arena at 3 p.m. versus Hull.

never raised a peep about the beard.

As for coach Garrison, he has to prepare his team to play in a very competitive South Shore League this year.

There are other things he should be worrying about (Cohasset's deep line-up and Scituate's one-two punch of Chris Brown and Seamus Reedy pop to mind) instead of someone's hair.

My advice to Garrison and other high school coaches: Prepare the team for the games, work them hard in practice and try your best to win.

If you start worrying about hair styles and dress codes, you are not a coach, you are a fashion consultant.

If you want to be Mister Blackwell go ahead. Your team may look the prettiest, but it won't win that much.

However, the issue of interference from the administration is something that cannot be glossed over in this whole "Hair-Gate" thing.

High school coaching is low paying and often unrewarding.

A coach needs administrative support, especially during the selection of the team.

Tough decisions have to be made and players get cut. And many parents become annoyed because their son or daughter did not make the varsity.

(On more than one occasion I've had conversations with parents who have offered wild theories about high school roster decisions that would have made Oliver Stone's head spin.)

If an administration believes in someone and their ability to coach, they should let that person take care of basketball matters. Coaches should coach and administrators should...well, they should do whatever they do.

But if in the administration's view, a coach is making roster and playing time decisions based on factors beside basketball ability, then they have the right to step in and correct the situation.

Johnson felt this way and acted accordingly. Garrison did not agree with him and it was see you in the criminal court and not on the basketball court.

Now, it turns out that everything is all hunky-dory at Hanover High with Garrison back in the saddle again.

There may be more to this story, but in the end, like a bad hair cut, this whole thing will soon be forgotten.

But in the meantime, get some gel, a comb and some cool sneakers if you want to be a high school basketball hero.

Bishop opened the second half for Cohasset with a bucket after a Stevenson pass. Slotnick hit two pull-up jumpers and Bryant drove strong to the hoop for a pair. Magner nailed a trey and Allen went to the hoop for two. Pierce converted a three-point play and hit two more free throws to make Cohasset's lead 73-42.

Hardwick finger rolled the ball through the twine and Marion sank another three-pointer, Cohasset's ninth of the game.

The Skippers' Andy Fitzsimmons hit from six feet and Ryan Bishop knocked down two free throws to give them each their first points of the game. Marion and Bishop hit a free throw each to give CHS a 84-56 edge.

Pierce took the inbound pass from Fitzsimmons to the hoop for a basketball and Cohasset's Dave Nothnagle's two free throws mercifully ended the game for Hull.

The 'Caring Fund' — new concept in community service

Thanks to Craig Muir, there's a new source of home health care for needy people living on the South Shore. It's called "The Caring Fund." Created and developed by Muir, The Caring Fund, which stands for Community Agents Recommitted In Neighborhood Giving, provides free home care services to needy South Shore residents who lack the resources to pay for these services.

A lifelong resident of Cohasset, Muir entered the home health care field because he felt a strong personal commitment to elder care.

"I believe I have a calling to take care of the elderly and the needy," Muir said. "As I grew up and went to school, I saw my parents' friends and relatives wrestling with health care problems. They had few choices. It was then I realized I wanted to help improve the lives of seniors here in Cohasset and all over the South Shore."

In 1993, Craig started Fidelity Home Health Services, a Cohasset-based home health care organization dedicated to providing patient-focused health care services, ranging from companions and homemakers to certified home health aides, for seniors in the comfort and familiarity of their own homes.

"Working with health care professionals in every field, as well as family members, I feel privileged to be part of a great team that instinctively helps the patient heal," Muir said. "We laugh, we cry with these people. We got to know the total person — physically, mentally, and spiritually. It's not just another diagnosis. These people have paid their dues and deserve some preferential treatment within their own homes — providing the individual independence and dignity he or she never wants to lose. I want Fidelity Home Health Services to be known for sustaining connections rather than forcing separations."

Unfortunately, throughout the South Shore, there exists a large population who cannot pay for and, therefore, in many cases, don't receive desperately needed home care services. They have used up the Medicare benefit hours allocated to them or do not qualify for Medicaid benefits. Muir calls these people the ones who "slip between the cracks within our Health Care System." Recognizing this alarming reality, Muir created The Caring Fund, which provides a reservoir of caregivers who can be allocated to perform a variety of specialized home health services designed to improve the quality of life for these needy, in the privacy and dignity of their homes.

Craig Muir

To get the fund off the ground, Muir has donated 50 hours of free caregiving services to help the needy. To add to these hours, Muir will add one hour of free caregiving to The Caring Fund for every 10 hours of private pay service Fidelity Home Health Services has referred to it by members of the community. For example, when Fidelity receives 100 hours of business referrals, 10 hours will be added to the "caregiver pool."

At the end of each month, a Board of Trustees, comprised of individuals aware of local needs, will meet to determine where The Caring Fund's free caregiving pool would best be served. When these particular needs are determined, The Caring Fund will make available the caregivers to provide those free hours. The primary beneficiaries of these free hours of home health care will be the local Visiting Nurse Associations.

Muir has a strong compassion for the VNA's.

"These organizations are 110 percent dedicated to helping those in need of care within their individual communities. If I were not in the home care business, I would never have learned about the level of quality and compassion each VNA provides to those in need of their services. I feel privileged to be able to help them in my own little way through The Caring Fund," Muir said.

Referring individuals to Fidelity's private pay services will be the primary source of The Caring Fund's success. The more hours of business Fidelity has referred to it, the more hours The Caring Fund, and therefore the needy, will receive. Fidelity is the leading provider in specialized private pay health and related services to patients and families in their homes. The company offers a full range of health care and social services including certified home health aides, homemakers, and companions. These services are available from three hours a day to 24 hours a day. Additional services could include assistance with insurance forms, assistance with paying bills and related financial matters, and various forms of chore work — any of which can overwhelm the elderly, the convalescing or the disabled.

Community service drives Craig Muir. In addition to his work on behalf of the elderly and needy through The Caring Fund, Muir is a director of the South Shore Community Center, treasurer and director of Cohasset Youth Resources, chairman of The Second Congregational Church's Finance Committee, and a board member of Cohasset's Drug and Alcohol Committee.

A Cohasset native, Craig attended Cohasset Public Schools and then attended Boston University where he received a BS in Business Administration and an MBA. He lives in Cohasset with his wife, Jean, and three children.

Sail thru '90s with Cabaret

Rehearsals are well underway for the 105 cast members of "Sailing Thru the '90s," Cabaret '95. Under the direction of Milburn Amy, production coordinator for the J.H. Cargill Producing Organization, producers of Cabaret '95, this year's cast is comprised of singers, dancers and performers from 27 different communities. Cabaret '95 will be performed Jan. 26, 27 and 28 at the Hingham Armory. Curtain time is 8 p.m. Tickets for Cabaret '95 are $10 for the Thursday, Jan. 26, performance and $17.50 for the Friday and Saturday, Jan. 27 and 28 performances, and may be purchased at the Hingham Community Center Monday through Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. on a first come, first served basis. For more information, call the Hingham Community Center, 70 South Main Street, Hingham, 749-9786.

Blues/Jazz band to play

Susan Tedeschi and her "Best of Boston" band will light up the Chart House from 8 p.m. to 12 a.m., Friday, March 3 at the PSO's annual Silent Auction.

Tickets are available for $20 and cover admission, light hors d'oeuvres, finger desserts and gratuity.

Straits Pond is topic

Cohasset residents are invited to a presentation by former students of Hull Environmental Corps on Straits Pond at 10 a.m., Saturday, Jan. 21 at the Hull Senior Center, 197 Samoset Avenue.

Teen center opens Feb. 4

After normal construction delays postponed a targeted opening date in December for the town's new Teen Center, volunteers and tradespeople went to work to complete all of the necessary improvements. The center's organizers are expecting its Feb. 4 opening to be a success.

The Teen Center will be open on Feb. 4 from 7 to 11 p.m. and on Feb. 5 from noon to 4 p.m.

The organizers of the facility, which will be under the supervision of a paid staff, have been working closely with a core group of enthusiastic seventh- and eighth-graders.

Funds to meet operating costs, estimated at $1,000 per month, are greatly needed. Every donation of $10 makes it possible to keep the center open for an hour. Tax-deductible donations may be sent to Cohasset Youth Resources, Inc., 15 Border St., Cohasset 02025.

Concert at St. Stephen's

As part of its recital series, St. Stephen's Church will present a concert, "Music for a Great Occasion," on Sunday, Jan. 22, at 3 p.m. The program will feature trumpet player Richard Waddell, organist Fredrick Guzasky and soprano Suzanne McInness.

Baroque and 20th-century pieces for wedding or ceremonial use will be featured. A free-will offering will be taken and a reception will follow the program.

St. Stephen's, located at 16 Highland Ave., is handicapped accessible, with parking available in the village lot. For further information call 383-1083.

Hats are on display

The costume and textile committee of the Cohasset Historical Society has mounted a small portion of their hat collection in a window of the former Cohasset Village Pharmacy.

Along with the hats of the Society, the other window contains loans form friends of the Society.

Safe Homes workshop

The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee will host a parents workshop for 1994-95 "Safe Homes" families. Parents should attend to pick up their Safe Homes directories which will be available during the workshop.

The workshop, which is at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Jan. 23 at Cohasset High School, will enable parents through open discussion to better utilize the networking capabilities that are provided by the Safe Homes Program.

Order those super subs

The Appalachia Service Project is making and selling submarine sandwiches, chili and Greek salads for Jan. 29 Super Bowl Sunday gatherings.

Order forms are available at all local churches or by calling 383-9325 to place an order. Sub assortments include turkey, roast beef, chicken salad and Italian cold cuts. Chili will be sold by the pint. The Greek salad comes with pita bread. Orders must be received by Wednesday, Jan. 25.

All items cost $4 each and can be picked up on Jan. 29 between 2 and 4 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church. Free delivery is available between 3 and 5 p.m.

This project is a fundraiser to help support the Appalachia Service Project's home repair mission in Virginia this June.

Cohasset Savings' village branch to close

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

Shawmut National Corporation said it plans to sell the Cohasset Savings Bank building at 13 Elm Street in Cohasset Village.

Shawmut vice president Paul Burg said Tuesday he is "in the process of selling" the building, along with other Cohasset Savings' holdings at 60-68 South Main Street and 392-400 Gannett Road in North Scituate.

Burg said he has contacted several local Realtors to seek "price opinions" on the properties, but "there are no sales pending and no offers have been received."

Inter-board Shaws plaza brouhaha suppressed

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

In his fight to stop a local shopping plaza from expanding into a residential zone, Planning Board member Robert Sturdy took his case to selectmen and came away empty handed this week.

Sturdy asked for $1,000 for a special counsel to file an appeal of the zoning board's recent decision to award a special permit to Shaw's Supermarket Inc. to extend Cushing Plaza 200 feet into a residential zone.

But selectmen, taking the advice of Town Counsel Richard Henderson who

State is susceptible to earthquakes, experts say

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

After surviving the devastating Kobe earthquake, Motoko and Gordon Deane are glad to be safe at home in Cohasset.

But are they?

Massachusetts has had 316 recorded earthquakes and is due for a big one soon, said Program Manager John Smith of the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA).

According to Smith, the New England area and Boston in particular is susceptible to earthquakes and it is Massachusetts, not California that has the oldest records of earthquakes in the United States.

Records show that there have been more than 1,200 quakes in the five New England states in the last 400 years (most of them 3's and 4's on the Richter scale) and Smith said a big one, hits the area every 200-300 years.

The Richter magnitude scale developed by geologist Charles F. Richter in 1935 measures the intensity of earthquakes. Smith said that with each number on the scale the magnitude of an earthquake grows exponentially. For example, Smith said that a 6.0 is 32 times stronger than a 5.0.

The last major quake in Massachusetts hit Cape Ann in 1755 with what modern seismologists estimate to be about a the magnitude of about 6.0. The epicenter of the earthquake was just off the Gloucester coast and records show that it did considerable damage to the Boston area.

Smith said "there are thousands of fault lines below us and all of them are old and inactive."

"No one can predict when, where or how big an earthquake will be," he said, adding that in this area, "scientists say it's not if but when it's going to happen and we're very concerned."

Cohasset's week

Burning season opens

The 1995 Open Burning Season in Cohasset, which began on Jan. 15, will continue through April 30. Permits are issued on a daily basis, between 9:30 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. Residents should call the Fire Department business line (383-0616) on the day they wish to conduct burning.

Residents requesting permits will be required to supply the name of the person supervising the fire, the address where the burning will take place and the type of materials to be burned.

Burning must take place between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on land close to the place where the material to be burned was generated, and must be done at a location more than 75 feet from any building. Burning of leaves, grass, hay and stumps is prohibited. A complete set of rules is available at Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm Street.

Permits may be suspended at any time by the Fire Department due to environmental conditions or noncompliance with the open burning rules. A water hose, tools and constant supervision of an active fire are strongly recommended.

State opinion is sought

The town will ask the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) for an opinion on whether vegetation at Straits Pond off Jerusalem Road can be cleared.

A group of residents would like the growth cut and a lawn restored there but the conservation commission said that would violate the Wetlands Protection Act because Straits Pond is an area of "critical environmental concern.". The conservation commission suggested the area could be cleaned up and possibly a walkway cleared through the site.

But selectmen were not sold on the value of leaving the area overgrown.

"If it's just grass growing, I don't have a problem with that," Selectman Martha Gjesteby said about allowing a lawn there.

"A lot of citizens would like to see the grass returned there," she said.

Conservation Commission Chairman Ronnie McMorris said that the growth promotes wildlife habitat.

Selectman Merle Brown suggested the DEP be contacted for an opinion. He was also concerned that cutting a walkway through the site to the pond could end up being "a mud strip."

McMorris agreed that seeking another opinion was in order.

"Let's see the DEP's position, we're open to looking at other options in the future if its permitted by the state," McMorris said.

Resignation is accepted

Cheryl a. Cipolla, 546 Jerusalem Road, has stepped down from the personnel committee. Selectmen accepted her resignation with regret this week.

"She was an excellent committee member," Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby said.

Annual Festival gets nod

Selectmen gave permission for the Festival on the Common organizers to use the Town Common June 16, 17 & 18 for the 40th annual art festival which includes Harborfest activities. The Festival will be conducted from 3 to 9 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Saturday and noon to 6 p.m., Sunday, Myers said. She added that Harborfest and Art Festival organizers would be working jointly in obtaining various permits this year.

"For example, we'll be meeting with the police chief both at once," she said.

Zoning board budget

Selectmen approved $1,000 in clerical services for the zoning board for FY'96. The board's $3310 budget is the same as last year's except for money requested for clerical help to index records and enter data into the data base. Once this is accomplished, and the [illegible] is up to date, the upkeep can be done easily by the building inspector's secretary, the zoning board said.

Fees for 33 decision processed by the board in 1994 amount to $3300, members said.

Legal bill is approved

Selectmen approved payment of $10,697.59 to Goodwin, Procter & Hoar for professional services regarding the town's sewer plant. Money for the sewer department's legal bills was appropriated through the 1994 annual town meeting. The balance left in the account for this year is $8,072.12.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

PRICE OR VALUE

QUESTION: Does a low price tag on a house mean it is "automatically" a good buy?

ANSWER: Price is not the only financial consideration – it is not even the MOST important one. If property is "cheap," there must be a reason. Bargain hunters seldom do well in real estate because they dwell too much on price and not enough on VALUE.

Value is determined by construction, age, zoning, physical condition, comparable prices, income potential (for investment property) and, most importantly, location. Only after value is determined can you make an intelligent judgment as to the fairness of the price.

Town officials get lesson in Open Meeting Law

By Sarah Cook
Mariner correspondent

A Jan. 18 seminar on the Open Meeting Law, hosted by Cohasset selectmen and paneled by Robert Delahunt and Robert Cosgrove of Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt's Office, helped educate numerous Cohasset town officials on the requirements of the state law.

The seminar was prompted by confusion over the lack of posting of a recent budget "workshop" which was to be attended by the selectmen, department heads, and the advisory board.

Robert Delahunt explained that a verbal exchange regarding a public issue within the jurisdiction of a "governmental body" — defined as boards, commissions, committees and subcommittees — must occur among a simple majority of that body in order for the Open Meeting Law to apply.

Notice of the time, date, and location of the meeting must be filed and publicly posted at least 48 hours prior to the meeting (with the exception of emergency situations).

Cosgrove detailed the specific circumstances under which a board may go into executive session and he explained that when a complaint regarding a violation of the Open Meeting Law is found to be valid by the District Attorney's Office the remedy imposed ranges from: "you violated the law, please don't do it again" to "you violated the law and boy did you screw up. Do it again, and do it right," he said.

Both Delahunt and Cosgrove acknowledged that the law is vague and emphasized the importance of the spirit of the law and the purpose that it serves in allowing the public access to governmental business.

"Go into it with the attitude that you are going to try to follow the spirit of the law and 99.9% of the time you will be successful," Cosgrove said.

Conservation Commission members posed a hypothetical situation in which a quorum of the Conservation Commission was to deliberate over the delineation of wetlands on private property. Cosgrove explained that site inspections represent an exception under the Open Meeting Law.

Cosgrove cautioned town officials about conducting governmental business over the phone in what he referred to as "serial conversations."

He explained that such phone calls in which official A speaks with official B, who then speaks with official C, resulting in the deliberation of a public issue by a simple majority, are a violation of the Open Meeting Law.

Numerous officials expressed concern that should every discussion amongst officials be posted then astronomical amounts of time would be dedicated to public notices as opposed to actually conducting business.

One commented that nobody would be able to get in the front door of Town Hall due to a blockade of meeting announcements.

"Where do we draw the line?" Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan asked.

"Draw the line conservatively and with common sense," Cosgrove replied. "There is no question that any time you enact the kinds of rules in the Open Meeting Law that there are all kinds of inconveniences created for people."

Cosgrove noted the irony in the State Legislature creating the Open Meeting Law.

"State Legislature hasn't seen fit to apply the Open Meeting Law to themselves," he said.

Town census was mailed

The 1995 Cohasset town census was mailed to each household early in January.

Compliance with state requirements provides proof of residence to protect voting rights, veteran's bonuses, housing for the elderly and related benefits as well as providing information for selection of jurors.

Returning the census does not register residents as voters, but failure to do so may result in the voter's name being removed from the voting list. If a person wishes to remain a voter in Cohasset, his or her name should not be removed from the census.

Mail-in registration forms are available at the library and post office. As of January, 1995, registration will be available at the Registry of Motor Vehicles and other state agencies.

Dog forms will be enclosed with the census mailing. Licenses are due in January and are valid through Dec. 31, 1995. Numbers will be issued on a first-come, first-served basis.

December fire report

Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln said the fire department responded to 178 incidents in December including: four structure fires; one outdoor fire; three motor vehicle accidents, nine assistance calls, and 38 medical calls. Firefighters also conducted 18 investigations and 31 inspections, Lincoln said in addition to miscellaneous incidents.

The Hearing Center

Have You Heard?

by Nancy Allonen-Allie, M.S., CCC-A
Licensed-Certified Audiologist

TAKING DIRECTION

A directional microphone is a feature that offers great potential to hearing instrument wearers. As its name implies, a directional microphone is better able to pick up sound coming from the direction forward of the listener than from the back or side. This offers the obvious benefit of emphasizing the speech of people who engage in face-to-face conversations over competing sounds that come from other directions. Research has provided ample evidence that hearing instrument users understand speech better with a directional hearing instrument than with one that is omnidirectional (equally sensitive to sound from all directions). All that is necessary is for users to choose this useful option when it is available.

If you would like more information on the directional microphone, please call us at THE HEARING CENTER. We will be happy to answer any questions that you may have. We are a flexible walk-in clinic that has been helping this community towards better hearing since 1972. We are dedicated to improving and restoring the quality of life for individuals with hearing impairments. Please call us at 1-800-339-9316. Our offices are conveniently located at 306 Washington St. (Rte. 53), Norwell, and 470 Southern Artery (Rte. 3-A), Quincy. We carry a complete line of auditory Assistive Learning devices (ALDs) and accessories, including closed-caption television decoders, telephone amplifiers, infrared listening systems, television headset devices and more.

P.S. Once only available on behind-the-ear instruments, directional microphones are now showing up on some in-the-ear instruments.

More staff needed at Osgood

By Alison B. Shyer
Mariner correspondent

With less than a month until its 1995-6 budget is to be presented to the advisory board — the school committee met Tuesday (Jan. 24) to focus on the projected operating costs for the Osgood School.

Principal Linda Whitney presented the school's budget with a proposed increase from last year of about $105,000, or 8 percent.

One of the proposed expenditures to come into question, and at about $35,000 the costliest, was the hiring of additional staff for the elementary school.

The school hopes to hire a part-time health aide and two full-time aides.

The health aide would fill in when the school nurse is absent while the nurse would remain on call for more serious medical problems.

Funding is also sought for the hiring of a full-time attendant for two students with behavioral disorders who are now under the care of one aide. Committee member Ralph Kidder questioned the necessity for a $14,000-a-year aide for one student. He suggested separating the two students and dividing the aide's time between the two but Whitney insisted that the children's disruptions posed a threat to the education of the rest of the students.

Another full-time aide will be hired for a student with Down's Syndrome, as mandated by the state.

If the proposal is passed, the Osgood School will have five aides, three of whom would provide one-on-one guidance.

According to state law, all students must be provided with the least restrictive learning environment possible. If it is determined that the child requires a special program, the town must cover all costs incurred.

Another formidable increase in the Osgood budget was the proposed purchase of $8,800 worth of text books for the first grade, an increase of about $4,000. Whitney explained that the existing textbooks did not meet the cross-disciplinary standards that the school has adopted, according to the guidelines of the NCTE (National Council of Teachers of English.) Under the new system, the language arts program for the first graders will focus on the integration of reading, writing, and literary themes, as well as phonetics. The students are also currently working with two to three student sharing a textbook, she said.

The Osgood budget also included a $5,000 increase for the purchase of four Macintosh computers.

Committee secretary Jim Kirk, who cautioned against liberal projection of next year's fiscal outlays, pointed out the committee was comparing projected and not actual figures and urged that the numbers in the budgets be examined more practically than theoretically.

"A hundred dollars isn't a lot for an individual line item, but if they accumulate, you're talking about a substantial amount of money.," he said.

Advisory Committee liaison Deborah Cook pleaded with the committee to "make it harder" for each item to go through. She said that not it was not only this year that the town would be facing large overrides, but that the next couple of years would likely bring "huge" expenses for such necessities as town sewers, water and the landfill.

"We've got a tough road to hoe," she said.

The school committee will meet twice a week until it votes on the budget and presents it to the town advisory board and then to the town. As proposed, the total school budget is at an 8.2 percent increase.

Town meeting can reject the bottom-line budget, which makes up about 50 percent of the town's total budget, but there is no line-item veto as there is with other budgets.

Chairman Nancy Sandell rejects the idea that it will come to that.

"It is always our goal to come to an agreement," she said.

The committee will meet at 8 p.m. tonight(Jan. 26) to review the budget for the Deer Hill School.

Cohasseters experience earthquake first-hand

Imagine having nearly the entire population of Cohasset wiped out in about 20 seconds.

If you can, you'll understand the devastation of the Kobe earthquake. The death toll now exceeds 5,000 with more than 100 still missing and 300,000 left homeless.

"I don't think Americans can begin to realize what it's like," said Cohasset resident Mokoto Deane, who was shaken awake by last week's violent earthquake which registered 7.2 on the Richter scale.

Deane, who grew up in Kobe, returned there with her husband to visit her ailing mother and was staying at the Sheraton Hotel on Rokko Island, a small man-made island just off Kobe.

"We were sound asleep and all of a sudden it started to rumble," said Deane, "it went on and on forever."

An armoire and a T.V. came crashing down on the bed while the hotel seemed to swing back and forth like a pendulum, Deane said. Amazingly the Deanes were not injured in the quake and they spent the next three days huddled with about 200 other guests on the hotel's lower floors as dozens of after shocks continued to shake the island.

Still, with food, water and generators providing electricity, the Deanes were lucky to be where they were.

"If you had to be there, we were probably as well taken care of as anyone," she said.

But as they headed for the airport at Osaka, a one hour trip that took eight hours, Deane had a chance to see first hand the unbelievable destruction caused by the quake.

"Houses and apartment buildings collapsed and the highway fell over," she said, adding "it was just like seeing pictures of World War II. It was devastating."

Deane was especially eager to get home to see her two daughters, Kristen and Lindsay. Both attend Hingham's Derby Academy and were staying with friends while their parents were away.

Deane, who said she has been through quakes in Tokyo and her husband has experienced some in southern California, said there was nothing that could compare to this.

Deane's husband Gordon said living through the earthquake "makes you see things differently." While on business in Rhode Island this week he said while no one else noticed anything, he was immediately distracted when a truck rumbled by and shook the building.

After surviving last week's devastating earthquake in Kobe, Japan Motoko Deane relaxes at home in Cohasset, with daughters, Lindsay 8, Kristen 10, Daisy the poodle, and her husband Gordon.

And as residents and relief workers try to rebuild from the rubble, things will be look different to those in Kobe, Japan for quite some time.

Kobe, Deane pointed out, is located in Japan's industrial corridor and is very important to its commerce.

"This will have an affect on Japan's economy for a long time to come," said Deane, who was critical of Japan's response to the tragedy.

Part of the reason that the response was not better, was that no one expected a big earthquake to hit Kobe, Deane said, adding "they expected it to happen in Tokyo."

Deane's mother died last Wednesday and she is not relishing the idea of returning there to help settle the estate.

"Just the thought of having to be there again is frightening," she said, adding, "maybe I could handle it all by fax."

State is susceptible to earthquakes

Smith said Massachusetts is "in terrible shape to be confronted with a big earthquake," especially Boston where so much of the city has been built on fill.

'It was just like seeing pictures of World War II. It was devastating.'

— Mokoto Deane

In many respects, Smith said Massachusetts is very similar to Kobe and is even more vulnerable should a big quake hit.

The poor condition of the soil, the coastal location and the density of population in the area are just a few of the similarities, and Smith pointed out that New England also has a building inventory working against it.

"We have a ton of unreinforced masonry," said Smith, adding "it's an old part of the country and we have old buildings. When a big one hits, we'll have more structural damage than California has had; California has already shaken all of its old stuff down."

Concerned with the kind of damage an earthquake like the Cape Ann quake could cause, Smith said the MEMA did a study and current documentation shows that in a similar quake we could expect between 400 and 500 deaths, 1500 serious injuries and about $10 billion in damage, and that only covers Boston.

Smith pointed out that earthquakes don't follow town boundaries and that due to local bedrock which is cold and hard and carries seismic waves more efficiently than the softer rock in California, a much larger area could be affected by an earthquake.

"A bad earthquake in New Hampshire could damage structures in Massachusetts and Connecticut," he said.

Republican brunch set

Sunday, Feb. 5, Friends of Senator Bob Hedlund will host a brunch noon to 2 p.m. at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham to honor Senator Hedlund and special guest Mitt Romney, chairman Polly Logan announced.

Logan noted that Hedlund meets with selectmen, holds office hours in the district and strives for the perfect attendance he maintained in his past term. Hedlund has been named to serve on the following committees: Transportation, Local Affairs, Public Service, Post Audit and Federal Financial Assistance. He always has given high priority to issues concerning the environment, senior citizens, education, crime prevention and tax reduction.

In addition, the brunch will be a Romney reunion for all those who assisted him in his senatorial campaign.

Assisting with the arrangements are, from Hingham, Carl Harris, Ann Collins, Jamie and Sue Bush, James Claypool, Kevin Costello, Bill and Edna English, Gloria Jantzen, William D. White and William Wise; from Cohasset, selectman Martha Gjesteby, Mrs. Edward Guild, William Grimm, Kevin O'Donnell, moderator George lL Marlette, representative Mary Jeanette Murray, Christy Mihos, Judy Volungis; from Weymouth, H. Richard Coughlin, Anne Hilbert, Kenneth Karlberg, Carolyn Van Tine; from Scituate, Gerald Dwight, Ethel Wheatley, Jeffrey Granatino, David Nellis; from Duxbury, Mrs. Edward O'Sullivan, Audrey MacDonald, Tom Barry, Rita Strong, Debbie Tortorella; from Marshfield, Otis Carney, Joan Williams, Christopher Thayer; from Hull, Michael Avis, Jean Williams and Mary Kakas; from Norwell, Shawni Littlehale.

Kerry Kirkendall is going to be running in the Boston Marathon again this year, as you may know she raises money for the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute by receiving pledges for running. Did you know that she has raised more than $5,000 over the past two Challenges, and this year she hopes to raise another $5,000. Her personal goal this year is to run a 3:15:00 marathon! Why not get in touch with Kerry (83 Atlantic Ave., Cohasset) and sponsor her as a Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge Team member. It will help and inspire her even more!

Three Cohasset residents are among the volunteers helping to organize the upcoming fourth annual Hospice of the South Shore Mall Walk Saturday, March 4, from 7 to 10 a.m., inside the Hanover Mall.

Dianne Chase is the chairman of this year's event, which raises funds for hospice services for terminally ill patients and their families.

She is joined by Ann Helbock and Lori Merliss, who are serving as Cohasset town leaders and are recruiting local walkers and volunteers.

Participants of all ages are invited to take part in the mall walk by walking sponsored laps within the mall. There will be entertainment and drawings for dozens of prizes.

The mall walk is an important source of funding for Hospice, helping to make it possible to provide care regardless of an individual's ability to pay.

To take part in the 1995 Hospice of the South Shore Mall Walk call Ann at 383-6756 or Lori at 383-0232.

By the way, last year Hospice provided comprehensive physical, social, spiritual and emotional care to nearly 500 families. What better reason to get involved!

Doris Flint has returned from a trip to Colorado to visit her daughter and family. She went prepared for winter weather and found 60 to 70 degree temperatures instead. From there she flew to San Antonio to attend a birthday bash for Mrs. John Bland (Virginia Wheelwright) and encountered summer-like weather there also. Then Doris came home to 60 degree weather, she couldn't believe it! As she said "crazy winter." She had a great time, regardless.

Did you know that the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's 1994 Community Auction was one of the most successful ever, with net proceeds slightly over $4,300? They split the proceeds with the Appalachia Service Project and the rest went to Cohassset Harborfest Inc.

Congratulations to all of you hard workers and to the businesses and individuals who contributed to the success of their 7th annual auction.

Mark you calendars for March 11, the date spring comes to bloom at the Second Congregational Church with a display of 50-60 handmade quilts and a luncheon featuring a choice of shrimp or vegetable souffle, salad, rolls and an elaborate homemade desserts. Hours are 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and the cost is $8. The show will benefit children with AIDS. Quilts for these children will be made during the show and the opportunity to cut a square and participate in their making will be offered. Please call the Second Congregational Church (383-0345) if you have a quilt to display or fabric that could be used in AIDS Quilts.

(Picture is from the 1994 Quilt Show).

Speaking of the Chamber, it will hold its February meeting at the Chart House, featuring presentations on the new Shaw's supermarket by both the plaza's developer and Shaw's representatives. This meeting will be open to the public and is scheduled for Feb. 15. More details will be forthcoming, but circle the date if you are interested.

Be sure to support the Girl Scouts in their major fundraiser, their famous cookie sale. If one doesn't come to your door, you can find them at Stop and Shop. Good cause, yummy cookies.

We can't say enough about Stephen Carroll and his tribute to Oronde Khary Allie. What a wonderful thing to do, putting up that billboard, what a nice tribute! You are to be commended, Stephen.

Finally, don't forget that the Teen Center is all set to open on Feb. 4. Everyone is really excited about it, and the volunteers and tradespeople are to be commended for all of their hard work to make it a "haven" for our teens. The organizers have been working with a group of seventh- and eighth-graders to be sure that they get what they want most, it is sure to be a success. Of course funds are needed to meet operating costs ($1,000 per month is the estimated cost). Tax deductible donations may be sent to Cohasset Youth Resources, Inc., 15 Border St., Cohasset. Do your share to help our teens gather in their own spot!

Gertrude S. Brown

Gertrude S. (Horne) Brown, 89, of Plymouth, Mass., and Clearwater, Florida, died Jan. 16 in Clearwater.

Born in Quincy, she lived many years in Cohasset before moving to Plymouth. For the past 22 years she spent summers in Plymouth and winters in Florida.

Mrs. Brown and her late husband, E. Harold Brown, owned and ran a general store for many years in the Beechwood section of Cohasset. The store was sold to her son Herbert L. Brown in 1965.

She leaves a daughter, Dorothea Brown of Plymouth and Florida; two sons, Herbert L. Brown and Merle S. Brown, both of Cohasset; five grandchildren and one great-grandson.

A memorial service was held at the Beechwood Congregational Church. Donations in her memory may be sent to the Beechwood Congregational Church, Church St., Cohasset 02025.

Dorothy F. Giblin

Dorothy Frances Giblin, of Cohasset, formerly of Bernardsville and Maplewood, New Jersey, died on Jan. 24 at her home. She was 85.

Born in Cambridge, Mrs. Giblin spend most of her married life in New Jersey. She graduated from the Forsythe-Tufts School of Dental Hygiene in the 1920s and was a hygienist on Wall Street.

Mrs. Giblin later earned her nursing degree and nursed the elderly at the Ward Homestead in Maplewood for several years.

She was an avid gardener and active participant in garden clubs. She was also a tireless volunteer in assisting the elderly and less fortunate, working into her late 70s as a pharmacy volunteer at the VFW Hospital in Sterling, New Jersey, and later assisting in relief efforts for severely handicapped children in Romania.

Mrs. Giblin was an advocate of quality education and encouraged this objective within her family. She revelled in the growth and development of her children and grandchildren.

Mrs. Giblin was the wife of the late Harold R. Giblin and leaves a daughter, Gail Kemp Flynn of Cohasset, and a son, Peter Giblin, of Esher, Surrey, England and six grandchildren.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated Friday, Jan. 27, in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset at 10 a.m.

Visiting hours will be held on Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. and for one hour prior to the funeral Mass on Friday, from 9 to 10 a.m., at the McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street, Cohasset.

Burial will take place in St. Patrick's Cemetery in Fall River.

In lieu of flowers donations in Mrs. Giblin's memory may be sent to Cohasset PSO Special Needs for Children, c/o Mrs. Anne Whitely, 35 Pond Street, Cohasset 02025.

Veronica Hamel

Veronica (McNamara) Hamel, 87, of Cohasset, died Jan. 18 at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

A native of Boston, Mrs. Hamel graduated from nursing school in 1928. She was the oldest surviving graduate of Boston City Hospital School of Nursing.

She worked for Boston City Hospital for 42 years until her retirement in 1970. She was the head nurse at the hospital's Shortell Unit for many years and did special duty nursing for a prominent doctor.

Mrs. Hamel served as nursing director at the Riverside Nursing Home in Hyde Park from 1965-67 and spent many winters working at St. Francis Hospital in Miami.

Mrs. Hamel was the wife of the late Albert Hamel Jr. and leaves two sons, Alfred Hamel of Hull and Thomas M. Hamel of Plymouth; a daughter, Donna M. O'Niel of Plymouth; two brothers, Thomas Hession of Hyde Park and Frank Hession of West Roxbury; three sisters, Katherine Peluso of Marshfield, Mary Crawford of Pennsylvania and Agnes P. Klock of California and three grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. John the Baptist Church in Quincy. Burial was in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Hingham Visiting Nurse Association, 10 Downer Ave., Hingham 02043.

Welcome the Teen Center

Keith Knowles couldn't stop smiling Sunday. And he had good reason to be optimistic. The town's new Teen Center has taken shape and is set to officially open Feb. 4 and 5.

As president of Cohasset Youth Resources Inc., Mr. Knowles has headed a dedicated group of adults and teenagers who have worked countless hours behind the scenes to provide a positive place for Cohasset teens to call their own.

Mr. Knowles spent some time in the public eye as well. He took the "hot seat" in the selectmen's office on several occasions to lobby for a lease for CYR to take over the building. Thanks to his good presentation and the selectmen's good judgement — CYR, a non-profit group, was able to arrange a token rent of $1 a year making the creation of a new Teen Center just a matter of time.

Teenagers are involved in every aspect of the planning of the new Center and they will be doing some fund-raising as well through bottle drives and other activities.

But for the Teen Center to work, money is needed to pay for the adult staff who will supervise while the Center is open. Operating costs are estimated at $1,000 a month. Every donation of $10 makes it possible to keep the Center open for another hour.

Tax deductible contributions can be sent to Cohasset Youth Resources, Inc., 15 Border St., 02025.

Soon the old Independence Building, which has been nothing more than an eyesore for years, will be full of life and energy. Young teens are pitching in and with the guidance of adult volunteers, they are turning the building into a really neat place to hang out.

Cohasset is a wonderful town to raise children and like most towns, the activities provided often center on younger children whether its youth soccer or Little League, Summer Playground or vacation camps. Any parent knows the gap that occurs when their children embark on teenagerhood and are too old for youth programs and too young to hold a part-time job or get their driver's license.

Cohasset teenagers need a place to go and the Teen Center can fit the bill.

If you or your organization can give it some monetary support, it will be money well spent.

To the Editor:

I am writing to you because I read, with some frustration, the interview with former state senator Brian McDonald. Several of his comments caught my eye, especially the ones regarding Greenbush restoration.

It seems he does not have all of the facts. He mentions that "voters of the South Shore overwhelmingly support" restoration. Not according to the papers I read, including this one, which reported that both Hingham and Cohasset voted the train down...not to mention the thousands of names gathered by the Coastal Coalition in Weymouth and Scituate by citizens against a train.

I want to know what Hingham commuter boat Mr. McDonald was referring to which makes "sense nine months out of the year." In 20 years of year-round service, the Hingham boats have only missed two days! That seems pretty good to me. The parking lot there is always full, as are the boats, so I don't think many commuters would agree with Mr. McDonald's dour assessment of the boat system.

What also scared me was his comments regarding Billy Bulger who was "very good to me." Frankly, I think we've all had enough of this man, especially in light of the preposterous salary hikes voted through late last year.

Mr. McDonald did get one thing right: he admits he underestimated the strong feelings against the train in Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate. And yet he continues to push for this project. He just doesn't get it. He's proud of sneaking a $50 million bond issue for a Hingham tunnel to speed up the train program. The budget for Greenbush will end up between $400 million and $700 million and will cost over $30 million a year to maintain. This, on top of a runaway MBTA budget deficit of over $700,000,000.

These comments by a Greenbush politician are proof that our leaders cannot and will not spend within "our" means. Mr. McDonald is as foggy about the successes of the Hingham commuter boat as he is about working within a budget. Voters saw this and sent him a message: Wake up!

Extra hands appreciated

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset Girl Scouts, I would like to thank the South Shore Community Center for use of the gym. We held our annual father/daughter event this past Sunday. Everyone was hip-hopping to the grooves of Scott Straughn. The dads enjoyed themselves tremendously. We also would like to thank our "clean up" crew: Mrs. McElroy, Mrs. James, Mrs. Ingram, Amy Angela, Amanda and especially our "Dads" who helped. Our sock hop could not run so smoothly if I did not have the extra hands.

Taxpayers take notice

The third quarterly real estate and personal property tax bills for Fiscal 1995 are due in the office no later than 4:30 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 1. Postmark dates will not be accepted. The office will be open all day on the due date, Wednesday, Feb. 1.

The mailing address for tax payments is: Treasurer-Collector's Office, P. 0. Box 296, Cohasset, MA 02025. For those taxpayers who wish to pay their taxes in person, the office is located on the second floor in the new section of Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave. The office hours for Thursday, Jan. 26, through Wednesday, Feb. 1, are: Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.; Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Each quarter tax bills are returned to the office that the post office deems undeliverable. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the collector's office at the town hall, (617) 383-9900, ext. 113. The treasurer's office will provide you with copies of your tax bill to submit with your payment.

Mooring bills for 1995 have also been mailed. They are due upon receipt, payable no later than 4:30 p.m. Monday, April 3. Those mooring owners who fail to pay this bill on time will be subject to cancellation of mooring privileges and their mooring space will be reassigned to the next person on the waiting list. These payments should be made payable to the Town of Cohasset and mailed to the Treasurer-Collector's Office, P.O. Box 296, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Shawmut does not plan to maintain the Village office, and Burg said he did not know where or if Shawmut plans to open a branch to serve the Cohasset Savings customers.

At the present, there is a Shawmut automated teller machine at Cohasset Plaza on Route 3A. Other Shawmut branches are located on Route 3A in Hingham and in Norwell on Route 53.

Selectman Peter Pratt is disappointed that Shawmut will not keep a branch of the bank in the Village, as many had hoped when Shawmut bought Cohasset Savings stock last year. He also noted that the loss of the bank will be inconvenient to senior citizens living nearby who have been able to walk to the Village to do their banking.

"I don't understand the point of buying the bank only to close it down," he said.

Pratt said the loss of Cohasset Savings will make the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank the sole bank in the Village, which is a cause for concern in the community.

He suggested that the selectmen should contact the state banking commission, to see what steps could be taken to "prevent the bank from being taken from us."

"There is sentiment in town that this was a mistake," Pratt said referring to Shawmut's purchase of Cohasset Savings, which had been active in the community for generations.

He is also sorry that the name Cohasset Savings will become extinct.

As a long-time customer of the Cohasset Savings, he recently learned that the Elm Street office will close in mid-March. Pratt said Tuesday he has been told by bank employees there that accounts will be transferred to Cohasset Plaza where the ATM station will be augmented by a full-service Shawmut office, with safe deposit vault.

However, there is no record of any applications or plans filed with town offices for a new Shawmut branch at Cohasset Plaza.

On a larger scale, Pratt said the selectmen should consider what role the board should play to "keep the village viable."

"We must look at what we should be doing to halt the loss of business to the highway," he said.

Chamber of Commerce president Keith Knowles said he has heard "some people" are interested in buying the Elm Street bank office.

He said the vacant building will only have an adverse effect on the Village if it remains unsold "for any length of time."

The Cohasset Savings Bank property at 13 Elm is assessed at $474,200 and the block at 60-68 South Main is assessed at $573,700, according to the town assessor's office.

Last year, Shawmut purchased the outstanding shares in the Cohasset Savings for $16 per share, for a total of $16.9 million.

Shawmut currently operates 250 branches in three states, with holdings of nearly $27 billion.

Shaws plaza brouhaha suppressed said the appeal is unnecessary, unanimously declined Sturdy's request..

Sturdy warned that the new zoning line would be a permanent change and that the by-law only allows a special permit for this change, if it doesn not impact the community.

He contended that the list of 15 conditions with the zoning board's decision proved there would be an impact.

Henderson explained that like it or not the decision of the zoning board was "sound" and procedurally correct and therefore would not be overturned.

He said the planning board had the right to impose its own conditions during the site plan review process and no building permit could be issued until any differences in conditions are resolved between the planning and zoning boards.

"Frankly there is no merit to an appeal, it would not prevail," Henderson said.

"Nothing the zoning board has done strips the planning board's authority over the site plan process," Henderson said.

But Sturdy insisted that Cushing Plaza developers are attempting to do the same thing as was attempted with Stop & Shop when an access was sought off Sohier Street. Shaw's plans include using Beechwood Street as an access.

He is also concerned that the change in zoning would allow Shaw's to build its store further back.

The zoning board said the new building would be in approximately the same place as the existing main building. The expansion into the residential district is needed for a truck turn around area which has been incorporated into design improvements to keep truck traffic off Beechwood Street, the zoning board said..

Event though the planning board can't sue, the matter may be decided in court anyway.

Residents Frank C. J. Hamilton and Jane M. Hamilton, 244 Beechwood Street, have appealed to Norfolk Superior Court, the zoning board's decision to allow Shaw's to expand a business use into a residential zone and the conditiions imposed.

Shaw's which bought the plaza more than a year ago, plans to raze the buildings there, build a new septic system, and construct a new supermarkent with other retail space.

Town car not approved

Building Inspector Robert Egan will keep the $1,800 stipend in his budget for use of his own car on town business for the time being.

Egan hoped the town would provide him with a car and suggested using the police car which will be turned in next year for a new cruiser.

He said the town would save money after the first year. He said the old police car is valued at $500, fuel would run about $700 and routine maintenance on the vehicle would be about $300 over the course of a year.

Selectmen were concerned about insurance which will run more than $500 for liability only. They also said the $1,800 stipend is a sure thing and the maintenance costs on the old police car could exceed Egan's $300 projection.

They suggested that Egan investigate the possibility of sharing a town car with health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik. They also asked for a chart detailing Egan's mileage.

Thanks for holiday party help

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Cohasset CoA, we would like to express our appreciation to the many merchants who were so helpful in making our annual holiday party a resounding success. The party was held Thursday, Dec. 22, in the larger room of the South Shore Community Center, with 110 people attending.

Special thanks to: South Shore Community Center, Buttonwood Books & Toys, Pilgrim Bank, Bank of Boston, Stop & Shop, Bergson's for supplying all the ice cream, Charlotte's Hairdresser of Scituate, Chart House, Alco Oil Co.; Good Sports Inc.; South Shore Music Circus; Kimball's By the Sea; South Shore Chevrolet; Gaffey & Sons Inc.; Marylou's News; Hub Shipping; Anderson Fuel; Dependable Cleaners; Dean Risso of Aquarius Sun Rooms; Barbara Elliot and C.C.D. Class (Christmas cake); Libby Pompeo and Margaret Bates (desserts).

To these aforementioned people along with the CoA Board and volunteers, who gave so much of their time to make this holiday party a huge success, thank you!

Choice is touted in opening of South Shore Charter School

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

[redacted]e Secretary of Education Piedad Robertson spoke before a full house last week, at a ribbon-cutting ceremony and open house at the South Shore Charter School in Hull.

Robertson was there to present the charter to the school's founder and headmaster Timothy Anderson and to show support for the new public school, an innovative educational option that came from the 1993 state Educational Reform Act.

Dozens of interested parents and children packed the school to discuss its programs and curriculum and the school's funding, which has been a source of concern for other public school administrators.

Robertson explained that the money follows the student which means that other public schools may lose not only students but also money when the public charter school opens in September.

Robertson told the assembled group that they were making history by attending the first ribbon cutting at the commonwealth's first Charter School.

Robertson commended Anderson for his commitment, for the risks he and his staff, trustees and volunteers are taking and the new school he has founded. Robertson was also there to encourage and reinforce parents who by sending their children to the new school will be taking a leap into the unknown. She made it clear that the program was a positive change, was backed by the state and its laws and is "the wave of the future."

Robertson explained what led to the development of charter schools and other changes in Education through the 1993 reform act. She spoke of the very real concerns on both the state and national level about the quality of public education and that some things were not as good as they should be. The Charter Schools will be R and D labs that will break the mold of traditional programs and offer something new and different, she said, adding, "it gives people a choice."

Robertson assured parents that the state is monitoring the charter school's programs and helping to get it up and running and Anderson said "the charter can be taken away if we don't do a good job."

Anderson, who has worked with Hull public schools in the past and really pushed for this charter school, said his program was chosen by the state because of its innovative programs.

"Our community service learning model is important, as is our school to work model," Anderson said.

Also unique, is the school's project based learning program and the concept that all students learn at their own pace, he added.

Both Anderson and Robertson spoke about the importance of parental involvement with the school which is not obligated but encouraged.

Anderson said he saw many new faces amid the crowd which came primarily from Hull.

"About 20 percent of the group came from surrounding South Shore towns including Hingham and Cohasset," said Anderson, who does not expect a large number of students from either town to come to the charter school.

Applications are still being accepted and enrollment will be chosen through a lottery drawn in April, Anderson said. The school w'll open in September with 150 students enrolled in grades K-2 and 6-12. Grades 3,4, and 5 will be added in 1996 increasing the enrollment to 400. Open houses and informational sessions on the school and its programs will be held throughout the winter, including an open house this Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the South Shore Charter School at 2 Samoset Avenue in Hull. For more information call Timothy Anderson at (617) 925-3078.

Music volunteers needed

The Cohasset High School band and chorus will perform for the Deer Hill School's fifth and sixth grade band and for the fourth, fifth and sixth grade chorus on Feb. 9 and 10 during the 1:50 period.

Parent volunteers are still needed to help out with refreshments for one hour on either day. Please contact Jane Henderson at 383-6535 or Steve Biagini.

Deer Hill School music decals are still on sale in the school office.

PSO volunteers sought

The Cohasset Parent School Organization is looking for three volunteers to serve on the nominating committee.The committee will oversee the elections for school council representatives and nominate candidates for open positions on the 1995-96 executive board. The committee will meet about six times, beginning in February and ending in April.

Serving on the nominating committee does not preclude volunteering for a position on the board or running for a school council position. Please call Ruth Wilcox (383-1827) if interested.

Wellspring donations noted

Hats off to the Osgood School's first graders who undertook a community outreach project for Wellspring in Hull. During the holiday season, the children performed household chores to earn money to purchase warm hats, socks, gloves or mittens for distribution to needy children. More than 300 items were donated by the children.

Young artists share skills

Teams of enthusiastic sixth graders recently taught art to several fourth grade classes at Deer Hill School. The young teachers gained useful confidence-building and organizational skills through their work with the younger classes, while enhancing their own artistic ability.

The 40-minute lessons, designed by the sixth graders under the direction of their art teacher, Ms. Berman, taught still life, personal collage, Mardi Gras-based masks, abstract art and portraiture.

Ms. Berman acted as roving videographer, taping the students as they taught art to the younger classes.

Students participating in the program included Ari Afshar, Cameron Nugent, Bridget Chase, Kristen Moore, John Crowly, Dan Degruchy, Stephanie Sargent, Amanda Cowing, Clara Sceery, Abby Murphy, Andi Shaughnessy, Adrina Devitre, Caitlin Welby and Zoe Davis.

After-school recreation

The Recreation Commission will be holding after-school programs at the Deer Hill School from Jan. 23 through March 17, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

They include team games/sports on Mondays (ages 4 and 5); hoop games/skills on Tuesdays (grades 4-6); low-organized games on Wednesdays (ages 4 and 5) and arts and crafts on Fridays (ages 5-8).

The Cohasset School Department conducts an after-school day-care program at the Deer Hill School until 6 p.m. each school day. If day-care is needed prior to, or following, recreation programs, registration may be made on an hourly-rate basis. Registration forms are available at the Deer Hill and Osgood school offices.

Osgood children enrolled in the day-care program at the Deer Hill School will be bused to Deer Hill at the conclusion of the Osgood school day at 2:50 p.m.

The registration deadline for the after-school recreation programs is Jan. 18. Classes run for seven weeks unless school is cancelled due to inclement weather.

The cost for a three-day program is $60/1 child, 2nd child/$30, 3rd child/$15. The fee for a two-day program is $45/1 child, 2nd child/$23, 3rd child/$12. For a one-day program the cost is $28/1 child, 2nd child/$15 and 3rd child/$9.

IS IT TIME TO TAKE THE PLUNGE?

Your landlord has just notified you that he is increasing your rent. As you go over your finances, you begin to think that this might be the right time to stop paying rent and to consider buying your own home. But it makes you nervous since you don't have a lot of ready cash for the down payment and closing costs. This is a perfect time to sit down with a good Realtor to talk about the possibilities of purchasing a home.

We have helped a lot of people buy their first homes, and we are well-versed in the creative financing that can make it happen. If you are low on cash, there may be a perfect CMHC, MAP (Mortgage Assistance Program) or other government program that can help you purchase with limited funds. The details of these programs change frequently, and your Realtor is familiar with them all. With a little creativity you can enjoy the freedom and security of owning your own home while you build equity as the property increases in value over the years.

Drop by our office and talk with any of our friendly hard-working and professional associates, and see why the word is out that we are the fastest growing Real Estate office in town. Whether you are contemplating a purchase or the marketing of your home, we'd appreciate the opportunity to provide you with our very best QUALITY BROKERAGE.

College student spends full term in London

Melissa Cafaro is the 21-year-old daughter of Susan and Vincent Cafaro of 240 Fair Oaks Ln. Her brother, Christopher, age 11, goes to Deer Hill Elementary School.

Melissa is a psychology and business major at Marymount College in Tarrytown, New York, and spent this past fall semester studying abroad in London, England. In fact, she was a Christmas Eve present for her parents when she returned to Cohasset Dec. 24!

The Cafaro family is relatively new to Cohasset having moved here from Middletown, New Jersey, in Oct., 1993. Melissa says both she and her parents love the Cohasset area and have made tons of friends.

"It's a warm, cozy little town — we just love it!"

Last summer, Melissa earned money for her semester in London by working at T.K. O'Malley's in Scituate Harbor and at Talbot's in Hingham Square. It was her first summer in New England and she thoroughly enjoyed herself.

Melissa is incredibly friendly and was a marvelous ambassador abroad for America.

"Being abroad has been a wonderful experience because I've made so many British friends as well as American ones," said Melissa.

She studied at City University in London, which is located close to St. Paul's Cathedral, Christopher Wren's masterpiece which was built soon after the Great Fire of London in 1666. She lived in Maida Vale, a pleasant residential area of London. One of the reasons why she chose to go to Marymount College in Tarrytown was because of its excellent study abroad program, which allows students to go overseas for one or two semesters to study in a variety of fields. Melissa lived with a number of students who are in Marymount's drama program. Through them, she learned to take advantage of London's incredible theatre and saw many productions. One of her favorites was "Les Miserables," which she enjoyed with her mother, Susan, and grandmother, Dolores Calaitges of Kings Park, Long Island, who visited Melissa in October, soon after she settled into her London life.

Dec. 20, Melissa flew to Newark, N.J. to be home for Christmas.

"You win and you lose," says Melissa, "Halfway across the Atlantic I was crying because I was looking forward to returning home and seeing my family. I wanted to be home but I just wish I could have taken all my new friends with me!"

Melissa has found that it's not just new British friends she got to know, but this experience allowed her to meet and live with so many new American students, too.

This photograph of Melissa was taken in November, 1994, at one of her favorite sites: Anne Hathaway's Cottage in Stratford-on-Avon. Anne Hathaway was married to William Shakespeare.

This month, Melissa returned to Marymount for her final semester. She graduates in May. As part of her coursework, she will intern at Kidder Peabody (now part of Paine Webber) in Manhattan three days a week. Although she is hoping this may lead to a job offer, she is also applying to business schools and would love to study in Boston and live at home in Cohasset for awhile!

"My time abroad has been wonderful," says Melissa, "but it's also given me the chance to see how much I appreciate my friends and family back home!"

Susan Cafaro works at Caldwell Banker Real Estate in Cohasset. Vincent works for Prudential in Boston.

Grapplers grab fourth in own tourney

By Joe Reardon

For much of Saturday's Cohasset Wrestling Tournament, the host squad challenged eventual winner Sharon as they clung to second place.

The Skippers ultimately dropped back, but their fourth-place finish, just 1-1/2 points behind Canton, but Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney couldn't have been happier with the way his squad battled in the nine-team field.

"We were right in there holding onto second place," Sweeney said. "To even be challenging for second was commendable. We were the only team besides Sharon who had four guys in the finals."

All-Star Ryan Freeman showed just why he is one of the best wrestlers in New England as he pinned all three opponents en-route to a first-place finish in the 130-pound division. Freeman was voted the meet's Most Outstanding Wrestler by the nine coaches.

Tucker Gledhill (103) and Kevin Duffy (125) both took seconds, as did heavyweight Larry Adams.

Cohasset had fourth-place finishes from Ben Littauer (112), John Whitehouse (140) and Dan Silvia (171).

The Skippers are now 6-5 on the season, having defeated Scituate 42-27 last Wednesday and dropping a mismatch against defending New England champion Carver 58-6 on Tuesday.

Cohasset looked as though it would run away from Scituate in the early going. The grapplers swept the first six matches, four by pin, to go up 36-0. The Sailors decided to forfeit in the 100- and 145-pound weight classes.

Gledhill (112), Bob Morgan (119), Justin Golden (130) and Freeman (135) slammed their opponents to the mat before the final whistle blew.

Scituate made a furious comeback and won the next six matches to pull within nine points (36-27) before heavyweight Nate Caldwell's pin clinched the victory.

Gymnasts leave little doubt they're the best

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

There's no doubt the Cohasset High gymnasts forgot something when they left for school on Wednesday morning.

Their butterflies.

The undefeated Skippers (9-0) were scheduled to take on last year's co-champion Scituate in Cohasset. And unlike last winter, when Ruthann Ardizzoni's girls lost to the Sailors after staging an upset in their first meeting of the season, the pressure is solely on Scituate's shoulders.

"I think for us to lose we'd really have to have a problem," said Ardizzoni on Wednesday morning. "The pressure is all off of Cohasset today."

A Skipper win would clinch the long-range plan of attack they had before the start of the season even started.

"Our goal for the season was to be number one as a team," Ardizzoni said. "The individual awards are all bonuses."

Hanover made its meet against the Skippers interesting, due mainly to six Cohasset falls from the beam. But the Skippers' depth was too much for the Indians and Cohasset came away with the 120.75 — 117.25 win.

Ardizzoni admitted she was taken off guard when Hanover led after the bars. Erica Hettstrom's third-place finish was the lone Cohasset gymnast to place in the event.

"I was really shocked when we came off the bars and we were down by two-tenths of a point," she said.

The Skippers came back in a hurry thanks to second- and third-place finishes on the beam from Megan Pratt (7.65) and Hettstrom (7.55) for a 2.1-point lead at halftime. That, despite the fact Cohasset had no less than six falls off the beam.

Ardizzoni said the event is one of the most unpredictable and dicey in gymnastics. "You cannot get enough practice on the balance beam," she said.

Jodi Colwill (7.85) and Kristen Reynolds (7.75) took second and third on the vault while Tara Hettstrom (8.4) and Erica (8.15) went 1-2 on their floor routines.

Erica Hettstrom finished second in the all-around with a 30.7 score.

The Hanover meet turned out to be a warm-up for what Ardizzoni called "one of the team's best meets" ever. Cohasset defeated non-league opponent Marshfield 123.9 — 119.95.

The Skippers were ripe and ready to perform and their scores indicated they are still improving as the season heads toward the February 4 all-league meet.

Tara Hettstrom set a personal best of 8.5 in winning the floor exercise, just in front of Erica's 8.4. Cohasset had two other gymnasts break the 8-point mark with Pratt's 8.1 and Lauren Genovese's 8.05.

The total team score of 33.05 in the event broke the school record.

Cohasset performed exceptionally well on the beam as well, sweeping the event and setting a team personal best for the season. Erica Hettstrom was first (8.35) followed by Colwill (8.0) and captain Tafana Fiore (7.95).

Erica Hettstrom took the all-around (31.95) and Colwill set a personal best with a 30.15.

Sadly, the accidental death of Quincy High School hockey player Matt Messing last week is the the biggest sports story on the high school scene this year.

Messing, just a sophomore, died after going into cardiac arrest following a clean check by a North Quincy player.

Messing's death was not only grieved by his family, friends, teammates, coaches and teachers, but by hockey players all over Eastern Mass. Several rinks around the state have set up booths at games for spectators to donate to the Matt Messing Memorial Fund.

The teenager's death was also remembered at the professional level. A moment of silence was held at the start of the Bruins' season-opener against the Philadelphia Flyers on Sunday afternoon.

Hanover High hockey coach Jim Sylvia, the brother of Quincy High coach, John Sylvia, said the incident "was upsetting to my team as well and still is." Messing is originally from Hanover and played organized hockey with Indian players, including Tony Bruno and Nick Giantis.

The untimely death of a young person is always tragic. People inevitably try to make sense at all and try to find some good that comes from it.

Matt Messing's death showed that hockey players truly care for their own. It doesn't matter what team they play for or at what level. The boys and men on the ice all have one thing in common. From Cam Neely and Pavel Bure, right on down to the kids who skate for hours on local ponds in the dead of winter, they all share a love for the blue-collar game.

The outpouring of sympathy in the wake of Messing's death only reaffirmed that.

"I don't think Matt knew I was coming. Maybe at the last second. I don't know. You don't really have time to think in a situation like that. You just hit the guy."

From an interview with Josh Wingate, the North Quincy High hockey player who checked Matt Messing, the Quincy High player, who died last week of apparent heart failure during a game.

Anyone who plays sports understands the risks involved.

On one play you swoop in for the winning goal, the next play you are reeling on the ground in pain after your body breaks down.

I remember the sharp pain followed by dull numbness that settled into my right arm after throwing one too many pitches during a Little League baseball game. (I couldn't even comb my hair the next two days.)

I also remember the twisting crunch of my left ankle when a defenseman decided to clear me from the front of the goal during a youth hockey game. (Can you say "hair-line fracture?")

However, I also remember how badly I felt after I hit a pitcher in the leg with a

Cohasset more than clips Norwell

Cohasset hosted Norwell last week, but not graciously. The Skippers thrashed the Clippers by a score of 92-58. Cohasset took an 8-0 league record into the contest and emerged an unblemished 9-0.

Dorian Bryant started the game with an offensive putback. Norwell's Matt Lewis hit a jumper but Pete Bishop answered with a layup. Bishop responded to a Bill Lynch basket with another of his own.

Jarred Hardwick made the score 10-6 in favor of Cohasset with a layup and a low-post move. Bryant hit a jumper and Pete Bishop had a steal that set up a Beezer trey. Hardwick hit a trey of his own and a jumper after an outlet pass from Bryant.

Ryan and Pete Bishop each nailed free throws to make the score 21-8. Hardwick grabbed a rebound and put it back and Matt Pierce sank a pull-up jumper. Hardwick's jumper and drive to the hoop got him four more points. Dave Nothnagle fought through traffic for his first points of the game.

Bryant snuffed out a Clipper rally with a jumper, and then launched a pass to Tom Allen, who hit a layup and nailed the free throw. Pete Bishop laid it in off the glass to make the score 39-22. Bryant squirmed through the defense for a pair and Nothnagle drove the lane for his fourth point of the game. Bishop hit a free throw and a layup, then made the halftime score 48-27 with another bank shot.

Allen opened the second half with a layup after a pass from Hardwick. Hardwick took a Bryant pass to the hole and Hardwick and Ryan Bishop combined for three free throws. Hardwick hit his second three-pointer of the night to make the score 58-34. He then streaked through the lane, hit the shot, and the free throw.

Pierce sank a jumper from 10 feet and Ryan Bishop knocked down two free throws. Hardwick drove the baseline for a pair and Matt Pierce buried two free throws. Jeremiah Stevenson picked up his first points with two free throws and a three. Nothnagle hit a free throw and Jerome Marion drained a three-pointer to add to Cohasset's lead.

Ryan Bishop sank a fall-away jumper from behind the backboard and then nailed two free throws for the Skippers' 84th points. A thunderous dunk by Bishop was waived off but Andy "Sweet Randalls" Fitzsimmons hit a free throw. Bishop's swat set up his own bucket on the other end.

Pierce sank two free throws, Marion hit a jumper, and Ryan Bishop tossed in one more from the charity stripe to ice the victory for Cohasset.

Bryant leads hoopsters past Carver

The mighty Cohasset Skippers squared off against the Carver Crusaders last Tuesday night and took a 7-0 league record into the contest. The Crusaders were overmatched by the talented Cohasset squad and the Skippers won for the eighth time this season by a score of 62-53.

Cohasset's Joe Slotnick started the game with a three-pointer but Dorian Bryant was the show this game. Bryant knocked down a free throw and tipped the ball through the hoop to give CHS a 6-2 lead. Cohasset grabbed five consecutive offensive rebounds, but couldn't score until Bryant grabbed his fifth point of the night. Jarred Hardwick sank a free throw after a Carver run to tie the game at nine and Pete Bishop played it off the glass from the post. Next, "Bish" took a Tom Allen pass to the hole for two more. Slotnick nailed a free throw and Jim Magner drained a three-pointer to put the Skippers ahead by six. Bryant hit a free throw and Hardwick hit two to add to the lead.

Bryant hit two more free throws and muscled his way through the lane for a pair, bringing the tally to 24-17. Bryant

'Downtown' excels on, off court

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

When one tries to pinpoint "Downtown" Jeremiah Stevenson's best quality, it's hard to overlook his quiet leadership. Whether he's popping three's from 25 feet or leading the team with a wave of the towel, his leadership has helped Cohasset's varsity basketball team to an 8-0 league record.

While Stevenson excels on the basketball court, there are other arenas where he shows his talent. He led the soccer team at halfback this year and is a top-notch student.

When "Downtown" was asked about the team, he was optimistic about how much better the Skippers could be.

"We're playing well," Stevenson said. "I don't think we're fulfilling our potential completely. There's a lot of ability here that we haven't shown yet.

"Our preseason goal was to go to Worcester for the finals. We definitely have the ability to do it. We've got to get the job done and can't settle for anything less."

Stevenson's best game of the season so far was his stellar performance against Hull last Thursday. He showed why his fans have nicknamed him "Downtown," by knocking down three treys and lighting up the visitors for 11 points.

"I was glad to get in there and show my capability," Stevenson said of his show.

Head coach Ron Ford couldn't say enough about his player.

"Jeremiah is a kid who's got great court sense," Ford said. "He's a great student and shows it by making smart decisions on the court. Jeremiah's probably the best shooter in the program. He's a quiet leader and gets a lot of respect from his peers. He doesn't talk much but when he does, people listen.

"He's definitely a role model around here because he does so well in his grades."

If Stevenson can continue his success on the court, in the locker room and in the classroom, there's no telling where he might be going...other than "Downtown."

Skippers overcome lackadaisical first half

Cohasset came back from a poor first half to triumph over East Bridgewater, 54-43 Tuesday night.

EB got off to a fast start, going up 9-0 over the Skippers. But Pete Bishop put the brakes on the streak with two baskets. Then Ryan Bishop held up Cohasset's surge by picking two hoops and knocking down two free throws. Matt Pierce (15 points) nailed a free throw of his own, bringing the Skippers within four points.

Junior Jarred Hardwick pulled up and hit a jumper, Pierce drained another free throw and Dorian Bryant had an offensive putback. Bryant then drove to the hole and laid it in, bringing Cohasset to within six points after two Viking three-pointers. Bryant's tear continued with a strong inside move that resulted in a bucket.

Hardwick sank a free throw for Cohasset and Tom Allen hit a buzzer-beating three-pointer to make the halftime tally 25-23 in favor of the home team.

The second half began with Allen sinking a jumper from 18 feet. Pete Bishop laid it in off of the inbound pass and Bryant picked up three more points off of an offensive rebound and a free throw. Pierce knocked down a jumper and Allen slashed to the hoop and laid it in over the heads of the Vikings. Pierce kept up his hot streak with a basket after a good pass by Hardwick.

Joe Slotnick grabbed his first points of the night with a strong drive to the basket. He hit the shot, got fouled, and nailed his free throw. Pierce's runner, layup, and free throw, and Bryant's layup made the score 46-37, in Cohasset's favor.

Slotnick's outlet pass to Allen set up a pair for Allen. Pete Bishop then sank two free throws. Pierce nailed four free throws to ice the victory for Cohasset.

"Tonight we didn't come out and play our best game," said head coach Ron Ford. "But we got one kid to step up big tonight and that was Matt Pierce. Matt had a terrific game. He's been in a slump this year, and it's been about confidence. I think he proved to himself and his teammates there's no reason to have a lack of confidence because he's a heck of a basketball player."

Cohasset's next game will be against Norton Friday night at 7 p.m. in Norton.

line drive during a high school baseball game. As the player was taken by ambulance from the field, I stood at first base feeling hollow and wishing I had struck out instead.

But the death last Wednesday night of Matt Messing was beyond comprehension.

Broken bones, sprains and the occasional X-ray are part of playing sports.

But nothing can prepare anyone for death on the playing field, especially a high school athlete.

It is likely that everyone at the rink that night will never feel the same about hockey.

The Messing tragedy could lead to some changes in equipment and medical safety procedures for high school hockey players. But that could take awhile.

For now, all anyone can do is grieve for the Messing family and pray that nothing like that ever happens again.

Matt Messing was skating up ice trying to help his team win. Josh Wingate was also trying to help his team win and he checked Messing.

The rest of what happened we do not know.

We may never know.

Hockey team skates past Norwell, South Boston

By John Kinchla
Special to the Mariner

Just what happened to this team over the Martin Luther King Day weekend may remain a mystery. But in two games it exploded for 13 goals while allowing their opponents only two goals.

COHASSET VS. NORWELL

Five Skippers scored as goalie Kyle Bunstein kicked aside 37 Norwell shots. Consider this game a prelude to the 8-0 Cohasset triumph over South Boston Monday, Jan. 18.

Cohasset started tentatively with a clever wrap-around goal by Mike Shields. Shields continued his artistry all evening, stickhandling Norwell's defenders unmercifully. He played a strong two way game and kept Norwell constantly off-guard.

Center Nevin Bunstein scored next. Earlier, a Norwell drive resulted in Nevin's brother, goaltender Kyle being pushed and wrestled down. Nevin continued with Shield in forcing the contest to be decided in Norwell's end.

Players that scored against Norwell included Nevin Bunstein, Brendan Kinchla, Chris McKenna, Pat Reynolds and Mike Shields. Other players that assisted on some of the goals included Brian Riley. Jared Graves, who has played tenacious defense was hurt in the Norwell contest, but should return for the Hull game.

COHASSET VS. SOUTH BOSTON

Goalie Kevin McKenna recorded a shutout. Adam Donovan, Matt O'Connor and Anthony Wigmore, with an assist from Nevin Bunstein, played a truly tough and oftentimes magnificent defense.

Players who scored against South Boston included Jeff Tosi (two), Brendan Kinchla, Chris McKenna, Pat Reynolds, Kevin Smith, Mike Shields and Anthony Wigmore. Other players that assisted on some of the goals, Nate Cotter.

Cohasset fans particularly enjoyed seeing future Skippers Caitlin Donovan, Teddy Goff, Billy Good, Ryan Hubley, Ben Ketchum, Matt Pilzcak, Pat Ridge and Jay Whoriskey.

Hockey ices Hull, 3-1

By Carol Riley
Special to the Mariner

On a three game winning streak, the Cohasset varsity hockey team beat Hull Saturday afternoon at Pilgrim Arena, 3-1. Trailing 1-0 after two periods, Cohasset put on tremendous pressure and scored all three of its goals in the final period. Junior forward Chris McKenna scored on an assist from Anthony Wigmore and Mike Shields, tying up the game. Junior co-captain Nevin Bunstein scored next, assisted by defenseman Jared Graves and Kevin Smith. A dramatic open-net unassisted goal by junior co-captain Pat Reynolds nailed down the win. Kyle Bunstein was formidable in goal with 19 saves, some of them coming at critical points in the game for Cohasset.

The next home game will be versus Abington, Wednesday, Feb. 1, at 7:40 p.m. at Pilgrim Arena, Hingham.

Bryant leads hoopsters

got his next four points after offensive rebounds, closing out the half for Cohasset.

Allen started the second half for Cohasset with a thunderous breakaway jam, the first of his career, compelling the crowd to jump to its feet and give Cohasset's starting point guard a standing ovation. Hardwick knocked down two free throws and Pete Bishop sank two of his own charity shots to make the score 34-29, in Cohasset's favor.

Bish's next hoop came as the result of a strong inside move. Then Hardwick broke away and finger rolled it over a Carver defender for a bucket. Allen drained two free throws after a technical foul was called on Carver. A leaping, acrobatic save by Beezer set up another Hardwick basket. Slotnick made the score 44-35 with a hoop from the paint. Beezer swished a trey and Bishop and Slotnick combined for an offensive tip-in. Hardwick broke away from the defense and, not one to be outdone, picked up a slam dunk of his own and another rise from the fans. Bishop took a well-placed pass from Slotnick and laid it in off the backboard. Slotnick had four consecutive points with a reverse lay-up and a strong post move. Allen tossed it ahead to Slotnick, who made a touch pass to a streaking Pete Bishop. Bishop guided it through the strings and got fouled.

To ice the victory for Cohasset, Jerome Marion threaded a bounce pass to Andy Fitzsimmons, who laid it in and hit the foul shot.

DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION WATERWAYS REGULATION PROGRAM
Notice of License Application pursuant to M.G.L. Chapter 91 Waterways License Application
No. W93-2930
Coopers Island Realty Trust
Notification Date: February 8, 1995

Public Notice is hereby given of the application by Coopers Island Realty Trust to maintain a pier, ramp and float at 67 Gammons Road, in the Municipality of Cohasset, in and over the waters of Little Harbor. The proposed use of the structure(s) and/or fill is to provide noncommercial docking and boating access to navigable waters and is a water-dependent use project.

The Department will consider all written comments submitted thirty (30) days subsequent to the "Notification Date" in order to decide whether to grant authorization for the proposed activity pursuant to G.L. Chapter 91. A public hearing may be held upon request by the Municipal Official. Furthermore, a municipality, ten citizen group or any aggrieved person that has submitted written comments may also petition to intervene to become a party before the close of the comment period. Failure to submit such petition will result in the waiver of any right to an adjudicatory hearing. Further information regarding this application may be obtained by contacting the Division at (617) [redacted]-5695. Plans and documents for this application are on file with the Department for public viewing, by appointment only, at the address below. Written comments must be submitted to: John A. Simpson, Program Chief, DEP/Waterways Regulation Program, One Winter Street, 8th Floor, Boston, MA 02108.

Story hours at Buttonwood

Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset and Buttonwood for Kids in Hingham will again be holding story hours for young children ages 2-5.

Story hours will be held at 10 a.m. on Tuesdays in Cohasset and in Hingham on Thursdays at 10 a.m.

Story hours will feature songs and fingerplays. No preregistration is required. For further information call 383-2665 or 749-2665.

Concert at Old Ship slated

Old Ship Church in downtown Hingham will host a candlelight concert on Sunday, Jan. 29, at 4 p.m.

The concert will feature Joseph Payne on the harpsicord, soprano Roberta Anderson and violinist Robert Eshbach.

The hour-and-a-half program, which will feature the music of Purcell, J.S. Bach and Frescobaldi, is free and open to the public. For further information call 749-3259.

Anniversary service set

Five local Unitarian Universalist parishes will gather at First Parish Church in Cohasset on Sunday, Feb. 26, at 10:45 a.m. to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the adoption of the Principles and Purpose Statement of the Church.

Participating congregations include First Parish in Hingham, First Parish in Norwell, Second Parish in Hingham and First Parish in Scituate. All are welcome to attend the service.

Ministers from the five participating churches and others will address each of the seven Unitarian Universalist principles and purposes. A combined choir will provide music. For further information call Reverend Atkinson at First Parish in Cohasset at 383-1100.

Cartoonist is on cable

On Thursday, Jan. 26, Wigmore Pierson's guests on "Pierson to Person" will be Cynthia Lagerval, clinical director of Cranberry Area Hospice in Kingston and Donald Hill, whose family received Hospice services prior to his wife's death.

The second segment guest will be Cohasset resident Jim Hamilton, a cartoonist for the Mariner newspapers, who will discuss his craft, sources of inspiration and some of his favorite cartoons.

"Pierson to Person" is broadcast live each Thursday from 8 to 9 p.m. on cable television channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and on channel 53 in Hingham.

Anyone wishing to be part of the studio audience is asked to arrive at the studio on Gannett Road in North Scituate by 7:30 p.m. For further information call Robert Belliveau at 545-2500.

Encore! concert Feb. 4

The new location for Encore!, the well-loved pops-style concert to be presented by the Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale on Feb. 4, will be the Broad Cove Ballroom on Rt. 3A in Hingham.

Highlights of this year's concert will include medleys from two Broadway shows, a rousing gospel sing-along and Mass. Hysteria's humorous take on the year just past, called "Views on the News from the Muse of Amuse." The concert will be accompanied by 7-string guitarist Ralph Rotondo, who will join pianist Lenae Badger and drummer Tim Maynard.

Cohasset residents participating in the concert, which will combine a variety of choral music with humorous, original segments written especially for the group, include: Susan Cameron, Mary Ann Cushing, Paula Cuneo, Jane Forrer, Jo-An Kilgore, Betts Murray, Anny Newman and Deedee Rousseau. Cohasset's Rich Jensen will sing several solos.

Patrons are encouraged to purchase reserv[illegible] for six for $72 and to bring a festive picnic [illegible] during the concert. Single seats may be purchased for $12.

Tickets, which will not be available at the door, may be bought at Noble's Camera in Hingham Square, from members of either group or by mail by sending a check and self-addressed stamped envelope to Broad Cove Chorale, 66 Lincoln St., Hingham 02043. After Jan. 30 call 749-6561 for information about ticket availability.

Cabaret '95 is coming!

The halls of Cohasset's First Parish House on Main Street will be ringing again with music and dance as rehearsals for Cabaret '95, "Those Were the Days," get under way.

Two performances are scheduled for Saturday evening, March 18, and Sunday afternoon, March 19, at the First Parish House.

The director/producer of Cabaret '95, which features members of the parish, is Carolyn Curtis. Information about ticket sales will be announced soon.

Teen center needs staff

The Cohasset Teen Center is seeking a supervisory staff consisting of college-age men and women and other young adults who have a desire to work with pre-teen children and young teens in a relaxed atmosphere.

For further information please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. There is an urgent need to fill these positions as soon as possible.

Citizen of the Year goes to bat for his fellow seniors

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Joseph D. "Joe" Buckley is a quiet, self-effacing man who shies away from the limelight.

So when he heard the news he'd been named the 1994 Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year, Buckley needed just a little gentle persuading to accept the recognition.

But by Monday morning, he'd gotten used to the idea.

"I've been lucky all my life to be able to help people, not with the big things but little things," says the 71-year old Linden Drive resident.

"My help has always been one-on-one. I get more out of it than they do," Buckley says about serving as a volunteer. "I never wanted any recognition — but it's nice to have it."

The five member selection committee — consisting of Police Sgt. Robert W. Jackson, Assistant Town Clerk Jacqueline Maguire, Librarian Susan Watrous, Drug & Alcohol committee member Ted Carroll, and Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford — chose Buckley out of a field of 12 nominees submitted by 30 local citizens.

Buckley works tirelessly behind the scenes helping the town's senior citizens wade through the paper work to access health insurance benefits. And he's not afraid to go to bat for someone he thinks is treated unfairly by the system.

It's a cause that's close to his heart. He recalls years ago when a friend liquidated all his assets to pay for cancer treatment — an experience that left a lasting impression.

Also before retiring, Buckley worked with health insurance as part of his responsibilities as head of his family-owned steel fabricating business.

So gravitating to SHINE (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders), a state-administered program made up of trained volunteers who help seniors understand the complexities of the health-care system, was a natural for Buckley.

He looks like your favorite uncle, but he acts like your favorite person.

— Mary Ahearn in her nomination of Joe Buckley.

"A lot of people don't know what benefits there are out there," he says.

Gaining people's confidence is of great importance, notes Kathy Glenzel, SHINE coordinator.

"People feel comfortable approaching Joe with sometimes very delicate matters," she says.

It's easy to see why people gravitate to Buckley.

"He looks like your favorite uncle, but he acts like your favorite person," says Mary Ahearn in her nomination.

A Canton native, Buckley graduated from Boston College High School in 1941. He served in the Navy for three years during World War II and married Margaret (affectionately called "Mig") in 1945. The Buckleys celebrate their 50th anniversary this year.

Although the Buckleys "reluctantly" moved to Cohasset in 1954 from Milton, they haven't looked back.

"With three children at the time, we needed more room so we came down and we love it here," Buckley says.

Some don't dig Weld's words on Greenbush tunnel

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

When Governor William Weld took a ride to Hingham on the MBTA commuter boat last August, he didn't have much to say on the restoration of rail service on the Old Colony Greenbush line.

But at last week's New England Press Association Meeting in Boston, he said a mouthful.

While it is not clear what impact Weld's comments will have on the MBTA's decision, his definitive statements have churned debate among local train opponents and supporters.

The Boston Globe reported that Weld said the state will move ahead on the Greenbush spur of the Old Colony Line, with or without a tunnel under Hingham Square. Weld also said Transportation Secretary James J. Kerasiotes would not be in favor of a multi-million dollar tunnel and will likely push for restoration without it due to the added expense.

Gymnasts clinch SSL title

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

They are all a year older and have that much more experience under their belts. There were no pretenders to the crown this season. Hanover went down twice. Scituate couldn't matched the depth of its confident opponent and the rest of the South Shore League field had no alternative other than sitting back and watch as they pulled away in the standings.

After flipping, vaulting, mounting, dismounting and setting standards for aspiring gymnasts to aim for in the years to come, Cohasset clinched the SSL title with Monday's 124.6-99.3 victory over Carver.

Health board has a familiar face

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Robert V. Davenport of Sohier Street will serve as interim member of the board of health replacing long-time member William Baird who stepped down two weeks ago.

In a majority vote Monday, selectmen and remaining members of the board of health appointed Davenport who will serve until the April 1 town election. Davenport said if appointed he planned to run for the one-year remaining of Baird's term.

John K. McNabb, Jr. of Pond Street also applied to replace Baird. McNabb has taken out papers to run for Baird's seat.

Selectmen Jane Goedecke, Merle Brown, and Michael H. Sullivan and Board of Health member Tom Cook voted for Davenport; Selectmen Peter Pratt and Martha Gjesteby and health board member Alix White voted to appoint McNabb.

Davenport sat on the board of health for nearly two years. In 1992, he was appointed to fill the unexpired term of former health board member Sullivan, who was elected selectman. In the town election in 1993, Davenport was elected to fill out the remainder of Sullivan's term but lost his bid for re-election to a three-year term last year to White.

Ironically, Sullivan, Cook and Baird had opposed Davenport's appointment three years ago, but said Monday that he had served the health board well and gave him their endorsement.

Cohasset's week

Public meeting on Shaw's

The general public, town officials and Chamber members are cordially invited to attend a presentation by Shaw's representatives, sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, on Wednesday, Feb. 15 at 7:15 p.m.

The meeting, which will follow an informal Chamber get-together beginning at 6:30 p.m., will be held at the Chart House on Border Street. Details of the Cushing Plaza project will be presented, followed by a question and answer period. The meeting is open to all interested citizens.

Nomination papers ready

Nomination papers for the town election on Saturday, April 1, are available at the Town Clerk's office through Thursday, Feb. 9, until 7 p.m. that evening.

All nomination papers should be submitted to the registrars of voters for certification of names and addresses on or before Monday, Feb. 13, until 5 p.m.

Open seats include two positions for three years for selectmen; one position for three years for assessor; two positions for three years on the school committee; three positions for three years as trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; one position for three years and one position for one year on the Board of Health; one position for three years for water commissioner; one position for five years for sewer commissioner; one position for five years on the planning board, one position for five years on the recreation commission and one position for five years on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Fifty signatures are needed to have a name placed on a ballot. Campaign forms must be filled out.

Parking plan offered

Police Chief Brian Noonan presented a plan to selectmen Monday which would allow residents to park in some no-parking zones during Church hours.

Noonan proposes allowing parking on the south side of Jason and Long Roads in the Common between the hours of 8 a.m. and noon on Sunday. Other changes include allowing parking only on the east (Town Hall) side of Highland Avenue and not both sides as it is now.

Signs alerting drivers to the restrictions will be posted, Noonan said.

He said this plan will allow emergency vehicles through.

Safety officer Clifton Jones noted that at times the fire department cannot get apparatus onto Highland Avenue. He said photos show less than six feet clearance with parking on both sides. And a fire captain recently complained that if he had a call he could not get the apparatus down Jason Road and onto Highland Avenue, Jones said.

The parking changes are also in response to complaints from church goers who were ticketed recently.

Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan asked that the police department inform the churches of the parking changes. Police and fire officials also plan to hold a public meeting on the matter.

Dispatch committee named

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and Police Chief Brian Noonan will sit on the Civilian Dispatcher Screening Committee, selectmen said this week.

The town is looking for three full-time, three part-time, and two interim part-time dispatchers to cover the Enhanced 9-1-1 system due to be up and running by May 10.

The full-time dispatchers will each earn $21,000 a year; the part-timers $8,320, and interim part-timers $2,400. Selectmen project a budget of about $100,520 which will be offset next year by a decrease in personnel costs because three vacancies on the fire department will not be filled.

Doyon said the town had received 25 applications for the positions. He said qualifications include being already trained in dispatch, first responder, and CPR.

Selectmen will ask town meeting for money to cover providing the new dispatch service until fiscal year 1996 starts July 1.

Board membership hike

Town meeting voters could be asked to set the stage to increase the number of members of the board of health from three to five.

Health board member Alix White said more members would enable the board to share the work load which includes dealing with Title V, the new state septic system upgrade regulations; capping the landfill, and the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill.

"We're not super human," she said.

Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan noted that with all the major issues facing the board the "health" aspect of the board of health has taken a back seat.

Health Board member Tom Cook agreed and said five members would "get a better mix on the board."

Selectmen decided to save a space on the town warrant for an article asking voters to approve the increase in members. In the interim, the proposal will be put by the government structure committee and the by-law study committee which will have their reports ready by town meeting.

If town meeting approves, the earliest the board could increase its membership is the 1996 town election, selectmen said.

Red ink with town starts to dry up, water official says

By Sarah Cook
Mariner correspondent

Water commissioners presented a preliminary water budget of $1,268,598 to the advisory board last Thursday (Jan. 26). The total budget includes $507,827 dedicated to contract services.

An increased sum of $10,000 is budgeted for legal services in fiscal year 1996, which starts July 1. Commission chairman Frederick Koed explained the increased budget was necessary due to the large demand for legal services as a result of the numerous projects and contracted services that the water department is currently handling.

Koed also addressed the water department's debt to the Town of Cohasset.

The debt, as of fiscal year 1995 stood at $394,209. He said that it is the "intent of the commission to begin payment of the debt."

Koed further explained that due to numerous variables, such as projects and contract services scheduled for fiscal year 1996, that it is difficult to determine exactly when the debt will be paid off.

The water department, however, has budgeted a sum of $10,000 as payment on the almost $400,000 debt. Koed indicated that the sum actually paid to the town may exceed this amount as the budget that he has proposed is extremely conservative in terms of accounting for revenue.

Koed also presented five preliminary water articles to be voted on by the town meeting. One article involves appropriating a sum of $1,500 in order to lower the water service at 81 Elm Street from the water main to the property line.

Apparently, during construction in 1980 that involved dropping the grade on Elm Street water pipes were not moved simultaneously to the appropriate level, four feet below ground. As a result, the residents of 81 Elm Street lose running water during time periods when the ground is frozen and are required to set up a hose with constantly running water from their neighbor's home.

Koed believes that the money to fund the project should come from town revenue as opposed to that of the water department, as responsibility for the situation must be taken by selectmen.

In addition to the presentation of the proposed water budget and an update on the status of projects and contract services, Koed explained the rational behind hydrant fees being paid by the fire department. Koed argued that hydrant fees are representative of all of the costs that go into enabling fires to be fought. Hydrant fees are established on a per-hydrant basis. It is not clear how many working fire hydrants there are in town.

Snow shovelling guidelines

A reminder that the following bylaw was voted in at the 1993 Annual Town Meeting. It reads as follows:

Section VII. No person shall cause or allow the discharge of water, snow or ice upon a public street, sidewalk or way in the town so as to create hazardous conditions.

Although many residents need to get to their jobs, doctors appointments or other necessary destinations, it is recommended that whenever possible residents should refrain from shoveling the last few feet at the end of their driveways until the roads have been completely plowed. This will save residents from repeated shoveling of the same area.

The highway department does not have the manpower to shovel out anyone's driveway that has been snowed in from snow coming off snowplows.

Residents are reminded not to shovel snow onto the roads and for private plowing contractors not to leave snow from driveways on the roads. Both these infractions cause hazardous conditions.

Citizen of the Year goes to bat for his fellow seniors

"We wouldn't leave Cohasset for all the money in the world."

And he's got lots of family who feels the same way. Nowadays there are as many Buckleys in the phone book as Pratts and Laugelles.

It all started in the late 1940s, when Buckley's father bought 110 acres and developed Linden Drive and Old Coach Road.

Buckley's younger brother Ray Buckley, who lives on Forest Avenue, came to town first followed by Joe and brothers Al, George, Paul and Jack and their families. Their sister Marie Lucas lives south of the border in Scituate.

Having a leg amputated might sideline most but not Buckley.

Two years ago, Buckley lost his leg after a serious break following a ten-foot fall off a roof. Two months after receiving his prosthesis, he was driving himself down to the beach.

His courage is an inspiration to his fellow seniors.

"I had known Joe Buckley casually for some 30 years plus, but did not know the real Joe Buckley until I was invited to sit on the Board of Directors of the Council on Aging, at which time it became apparent that the casual Joe was not the real Joe," Austin O'Toole recalls.

"A typical example of the real Joe became obvious shortly after he experienced his tragic accident, at which time Joe showed up a week or so after refit of his new leg, hobbling on a hospital walker, asking what he could do at the COA office."

Over the years, Buckley has served as a volunteer with the Boy Scouts, Little League, Sunday School and was a member of the town's advisory board, which goes over the town budget to present to town meeting. He serves as a eucharistic minister at St. Anthony's Church; is on the board of directors of South Shore Elder Services, a regional agency dedicated to the needs of senior citizens; and is one of 16 people from across the state on the senior council of Blue Cross and Blue Shield. He is also a member of the board of directors of the Cohasset Council on Aging where he serves as treasurer.

He still finds time to work part-time as a financial advisor to two local companies, Russillo, Gardner & Spolsino in Boston and Seven D's Realty in Hull. Buckley also obtained a certificate in gerontology from UMass Boston in 1990 which included courses on the legislative process.

Also in 1990, he served in the senior intern program in Washington, D.C. where he obtained first-hand knowledge of the workings of government.

Buckley uses these learned skills to analyze legislation that affects senior citizens and to provide information to local political representatives on issues.

Perhaps Buckley's greatest legacy the example of service he instilled in his four children.

"As always, he is the happiest when he is helping others," Paul Buckley says about his dad.

"I feel this legacy of concern for others' needs is the most important thing I have received from my father."

Many fine citizens nominated for annual award

The Cohasset Mariner received 12 nominees for its annual Citizen of the Year award.

Linden Drive resident Joseph D. Buckley was selected by a committee of five consisting of Police Sgt. Robert W. Jackson, Assistant Town Clerk Jacqueline Maguire, Librarian Susan Watrous, Drug & Alcohol Committee member Ted Carroll, and Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford.

Other nominees included:

- Anna Abbruzzese for the "many things she does including involvement with the Village Renaissance Committee, Historical Society, Council on Aging," and more.
- Georgine Butman for "volunteer work with the Girl Scouts and children."
- Tara Hettstrom for her "leadership and Church involvement."
- Harold Litchfield for his "tireless efforts as highway surveyor and courteous, efficient response in emergencies."
- George L. Marlette for his "knowledge and skillfulness" as town moderator.
- Robert Martin for his "dedication to a range of projects and events and his leadership of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce."
- Joseph R. McElroy for his "leadership of the restoration project" of the lightkeepers residence on Government Island.
- Virginia Riley for her "faithful volunteerism in a variety of low-key causes."
- The Rev. Gary Ritts for his being the "driving force" behind the Appalachia Service Project.
- Katherine F. Stanton for her "immeasurable lifelong service to the community, state, and family" including her work with as an advocate of foster children and service to those in need.
- Ann Whiteley for her "unselfish giving of her time efforts, and energy where needed" especially in school projects.

Increase in hours tabled

Selectmen tabled action on the fire chief's request to increase his senior clerk's hours until they can discuss it with the advisory board tonight (Feb. 2).

Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln asked that the billing clerk's hours be increased from 15 to 20 per week. Lincoln said since the ambulance billing is going so well, he would like to utilize the clerk to do some memos and typing for him.

He explained that the employee, who is Jane Henderson, did not plan to take advantage of the town's health insurance which would save about $4,600 a year. Increasing the hours would translate into a salary increase to $2,800.

But selectmen said Lincoln's timing wasn't good in light of the large operating budget deficit projected for fiscal year 1996, which starts July 1.

They said he should have included the request in his budget proposal submitted last month.

But Lincoln said he was instructed by the advisory board not to budget for anything that was not contracted for.

"I followed that procedure," he said.

Thinking generically about the clerk's position, selectmen tossed around the idea of increasing Henderson's hours to 19 so eligibility for health insurance benefits wouldn't click in . But less than 20 hours would also mean that the clerk would not be eligible for paid vacation or holiday time.

Some don't dig Weld's words on Greenbush tunnel

firmed Weld's statement.

"He (Kerasiotes) has stated on record that the tunnel looks like an expensive option," said D'urso, adding "he's been cautious about it, because of the cost estimates".

Still, D'urso said that nothing has been ruled out but that Kerasiotes remains committed to building the Greenbush branch.

More than a year ago Hingham selectmen resolved to support the restoration of rail service through the town, only if a short tunnel (option 6A) was built below Hingham Square. This was the long fought for compromise and unanimous choice of the state appointed Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC), which is made up of representatives of all communities along the Greenbush corridor.

Cohasset selectmen are split on support for Greenbush restoration.

The 3/4 mile-tunnel would begin near the South Shore Country Club and end at Station Street; would eliminate five of the 14 grade crossings planned for Hingham; and help to reduce noise pollution and vibration through the National Register Lincoln Historic District.

The impacts of the train at grade and of construction on a tunnel in this district are comprehensively outlined in a Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Statement/Report (SDEIS/R) as are the financial impacts of each of the nine transportation alternatives studied.

According to the report's summary, of all the options, restoring rail service at-grade is the most-efficient and cost-effective choice; a choice that will attract more riders, take more vehicles off clogged highways, and meet clean air mandates.

Under the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990, the Boston area —including Greenbush — must make substantial efforts to decrease automobile emissions.

The study, which also looked at expanded bus and boat services, including a new Nantasket Commuter Boat Terminal in Hull — also found that while commuter rail service would have the most positive effects it would also have the most negative environmental effects.

Of paramount importance to Hingham are the town's historic assets which are protected by a federal law that states no federal transportation project can adversely impact a protected resource — including national register historic districts.

According to the statute, the Greenbush line can only be restored to service after it is determined that there is no "prudent or feasible" transportation alternatives which would have fewer adverse impacts on the town and if there is no such alternative that all possible planning and mitigation has been undertaken.

Charged with protecting those interests, Hingham will ask its town meeting to appropriate money to pay for any costs, including legal fees that the town may face in responding to the MBTA. Historical Commission Chairman Alexander Macmillan recently journeyed to Washington D. C. to meet with federal officials on the train.

On Weld's statements, Macmillan said he doesn't place much stock in them and said the process is going forward. Macmillan said the SDEIS/R is essentially the same report the CAC had a year ago with some changes in the financial information.

"They're (MBTA) over selling it, because their enthusiastic about it," he said of the report's findings

Macmillan said the Greenbush matter is coming down to what he knew it would "rail with a tunnel or rail without a tunnel."

In the end, Macmillan said he is confident the short tunnel option will be chosen because it is both feasible and prudent.

Those are the magic words and they're "pregnant" with meaning, said Macmillan, who pointed out that while anything is feasible, the search for the prudent alternative is not necessarily the search for the cheapest alternative.

The report shows at $309 million, with $95 million of that for the short tunnel, alternative 6A is the cheapest of all the tunnel options. It is not cheaper than increasing boat service in Hingham and Hull, an estimated $35 million and it is certainly not cheaper than just continuing bus service at $7.4 million.

But it will divert an estimated 1,336 automobile trips on an average weekday by the year 2010 and will most successfully balance the transportation and environmental needs on the South Shore, Macmillan said.

William Grimes, founder of the pro-train Back on Track group and a fellow CAC member said he was surprised that the Governor spoke out in favor of the train.

"We're glad he came out and said it," said Grimes, who plans to send Weld a thank you note.

"But his speaking out doesn't make it a reality legally, we have to go through the process," Grimes added.

A 20-year resident of Hingham, Grimes has said it is a nice town with some old buildings but it is no more historic than any other South Shore town.

For train opponents the Governor's statement and the financial feasibility report do not bode well. And while Nancy Buckley, the founder of the anti-train group the Coastal Coalition said she was a first "stunned" by what Weld said, it now may be the "best thing that could have happened."

Buckley said she is hoping Weld's words, although premature and in violation of the federal review process, will serve as a wake-up call to the South Shore and that residents in all towns affected will rally with her group and get informed and speak out on the issue.

"People are so misinformed on this issue," said Buckley who maintained that there are just three alternatives for South Shore residents: support the Coastal Coalition and force the MBTA to admit that its boat and bus studies are flawed, keep silent these next few months, and let the MBTA choose the train at grade or support the town with funds to sue and get the tunnel built.

Buckley said that suing will not stop the train but could force the MBTA to build a tunnel under Hingham Square and while she said she could not speak for the entire Coastal Coalition, when the decision is made, she and co-founder Randy Young, would as Hingham residents support the tunnel.

Buckley commended Macmillan for his efforts and said "Alex has done an outstanding job of what he's been charged with doing."

New staffing tops Deer Hill budget

By Alison B. Shyer
Mariner correspondent

A substantial upgrade of the existing computer system, and salary increases, including three new positions, account for much of the increase of the budget for the Deer Hill School as proposed to the school committee last Thursday (Jan. 26).

The budget, presented by Guido Risi, an administrative assistant in the superintendent's office, includes new positions for a half-time health aide, a new fourth-grade teacher and an aide for three students with special needs. The introduction of the equivalent of two full-time positions are due to increasing enrollment. The health aide, who would also work half-time at the Osgood School, would be on the premises when the nurse is at the other school, in case a student need medical attention. The nurse is always on call.

Risi conceded that although having the health aide would be helpful, it isn't a dire necessity.

"Are the children safe now? I think they are," he said.

The total salary increase, including the contractual raises for the staff, would be about $106,000, or 9.1 percent of Deer Hill's total budget for 1995-96.

The proposed budget, which has a total increase of 8.7 percent over last year's, also includes about $28,000 for 12 new Macintosh computers, with networking software and printers for the school's.

Risi justified the request by explaining that the Osgood school and the high school both have more advanced computer technology. He insisted that that Deer Hill's failure to keep up would create a "gaping hole in the system."

Committee member Ralph Kidder questioned the placement of the computers. By having the computers in a lab instead of in the classrooms, he argued, the students would be set apart from the teachers and would have to depend on an aide, whose job should be to assist the teachers, not take place of them.

"I have a strong, visceral reaction to a lab that is disconnected from the teacher," he said, and added that "one of the most important roles a teacher plays is as a role model."

Other expenses included various physical education apparatus, such as new basketball hoops for the playground and floor mats for the gymnasium. Risi highlighted the need for concerns about safety, and also pointed out that students from other schools, as well as other members of the community, make use of the equipment.

Health board . . .

group opposed to expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill of which McNabb is an active member, said she was dismayed at the process which she said gives the appointed candidate an "unfair advantage" in upcoming the town election.

Connie Afshar, a SAFE member, also spoke endorsing McNabb, who also serves as chairman of the town watershed protection committee.

Selectman Gjesteby said she was disappointed in Baird for not applying to fill in as interim board of health member. Baird had originally planned to resign at the end of March but changed his mind after learning that the seat would not be able to appear on the April 1 town election ballot unless vacated earlier. Baird, who decided to resign because of increasing business demands, said Monday he decided not to apply to be appointed as interim member because of business and family commitments.

Bob Martin, a regular at selectmen's meetings, spoke up and suggested selectmen thank Baird for his eight years of service on the health board.

Let's give a standing ovation to Marnie DeMichele, a freshman at Colgate! Marnie made the dean's list for the first semester, and you know how hard she must have worked to accomplish such a feat! Freshman year is a tough one, we are proud of you Marnie.

The next time you see Bill Baird, be sure to thank him for all of the time and effort he put in while a member of the Board of Health. It can be a thankless job at times, one that involves many hours and decisions that seldom please everybody.

Thank you Bill, for your dedication and numerous hours you gave to our town.

Hats off to Laurajean McDonald of Hunneman & Company/Coldwell Banker, Cohasset, who was awarded Broker of the Year for the Cohasset office for 1994. That makes five years in a row that she has been Hunneman's premier broker, that's some record!

Friday, March 3, is the date for the PSO's annual Silent Auction. The place is the Chart House, the time is 8 p.m. to midnight.

Susan Tedeschi and her "Best of Boston" band will perform. Tickets are $20, which includes admission, light hors d'oeuvres, finger desserts and gratuity. For more information, call Kate Abbruzzese (383-9317), Ed Connolly (383-1248) or Ellen Sanchez (383-6911).

The Class of 1970 is planning its 25th reunion Aug. 4, 5 and 6. Please come join them for their next meeting at the American Legion Sunday, March 12, at 4 p.m. For more information call Marilyn Pratt Morrisen at 383-9042 or Trisha Hall O'Keefe at 335-6872.

We begin by sending Kevin Mulcahy belated birthday greetings — he turned 21 last week, a big birthday indeed!

Hope your day was a happy one, Kevin!

Noble and Greenough School has announced its fall semester academic honors, and four Cohasset residents "made the grade." Taylor Devin (a freshman) and Geoffrey Chamberlain (a sophomore) both earned High Distinction (B+,A- average), and Stefanie Noering (8th grade) and Maura MacLeod (a freshman) achieved Distinction (B, B+ average). Congratulations everyone!

Cassandra and David Rioux have wonderful news to share with us, and her name is Gabrielle Maxime Rioux! Gabrielle was born Jan. 9 at 11:02 a.m., and she weighed 8 lbs. 1 oz. She joins her big sister, Dominique, who must be thrilled to have a baby sister! We wish you all the best!

We also want to make an announcement of the birth of Millie and Jason Proodian's new bouncing baby boy, born Jan. 13, at 10 pounds, and named Zachary Charles Proodian.

Grandparents are Richard and Carole Proodian. That is really exciting; congrats to all of you.

Anniversary celebrations were in order last week; Ken and Janice Sargent celebrated their 27th!

We sure hope that the day was a happy one for a dynamite couple that deserves nothing but the best!

Rick Shea and fellow Cohasset Education Foundation members are thrilled about the new computer lab at the Osgood School established with funds given by them! There will be an open house Wednesday, Feb. 8, at 7:30 p.m., so that you can see the whole thing for yourselves. And be sure to give Rick and the rest of the CEF members a pat on the back when you see them. They worked hard to make it all a wish come true for our students and their teachers too.

How do you like Ship Cove Park? Isn't it wonderful? In case you don't know where it is, it's the lovely space between Tedeschi's and French Memories. Actually it was probably started by the artists at Cohasset High School who painted the murals — then Donna Green built her beautiful patio in back of her studio — then Hubert vander Lugt (Hub Shipping Inc.) and Tim Stanton (Shawmut Bank) got together to make that walkway pretty. Jim Sandell designed it, and Tom Colario did the landscaping (thank heavens for a mild January).

A real group effort that benefits all of us, remember when it was nothing but old papers and trash? We thank all of you!

There sure must be lots of activity at 79 Sohier St.! That's where Kathilynn and Douglas Yeager live, along with their three sons, Adam, Justin and Evan.

Evan Colby Yeager is the newest addition, he was born Dec. 28, and weighed 8 lbs., 8 oz.

His maternal grandparents are Jane and Bill Myers of Malvern, PA; his paternal grandparents are Marilyn and Bill Adams of Cohasset.

The week of Feb. 6-12 at the Providence Civic Center in Providence, R.I. is the date of the United States National Figure Skating Championships. The top amateur skaters in the country will be competing for a national title and the right to be selected for the U.S. World Team. The top skaters at this championship will represent the U.S. in international competitions and the World Championships, which will he held in Birmingham, England, March 7.

Bethany Quintin, a student at CHS, will represent Cohasset at the National Championships. Bethany represents the Skating Club of Boston and trains at the Tony Kent Arena in Dennis under the tutelage of Evy and Mary Scotvold, who also train Olympic medalists, Nancy Kerrigan and Paul Wylie.

Bethany competes on the junior level and next year hopes to move up to the senior level. This will allow her to try to qualify for the World and Olympic teams. This is Bethany's fifth National Competition.

She is now one of the top 12-15 junior lady skaters in the country and she hopes to do well at this Nationals in order to increase her national ranking. This is the first time that the National Championships have been in New England in many years, so for those interested in watching Bethany compete, she skates her short program Tuesday. Feb. 7, at 3:20 p.m. at the Providence Civic Center and her long program Thursday, Feb. 9, at 12:20 p.m., at The Civic Center.

Those interested in the other skating schedules are encouraged by the United States Figure Skating Association to call 1-800-SKATE 95 for details.

Good Luck Bethany, let us know all about it!

Remember last week when we told you about Kerry Kirkendall and the Dana-Farber Marathon? Well, Geoff Nothnagle is going to be running too, for his second time. Last year Geoff put in over 1,100 miles training for the event, this year he has 151 miles so far. The Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge Team has raised more than $1.4 million so far, their goal is $750,000 this year. So, now you have two marathoners to sponsor (you can get in touch with Geoff at 36 Atlantic Ave. for more info.).

obituaries

Dorothy Graham

Dorothy E. "Dolly" (Pearce) Graham, 81, of Cohasset, died Jan. 13 in the Cardigan Nursing Home, Scituate.

A native of Toronto, Canada, she was educated in Springfield, Vermont and was a longtime resident of Bellows Falls, Vermont. She had lived in Cohasset since 1969.

Mrs. Graham was a former salesclerk and, more recently, a babysitter.

She was the wife of the late Daniel C. Graham and leaves two daughters, Margaret J. Sweeney of Holliston and Joanne F. Reed of Hingham; a sister, Kitty Zeno of Greenfield; six grandchildren; six great-grandchildren and four nephews and nieces.

A memorial Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was private.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Cardigan Nursing Home, 59 Country Way, Scituate 02040.

Leonard O'Donnell

Leonard J. O'Donnell, 73, of Cohasset, died Jan. 27 at home.

Born in Boston, he grew up in Jamaica Plain, where he graduated from high school. He summered in Scituate from 1948 to 1977, when he moved to Cohasset.

He was the president of Wall Street Planning Corporation and developed a mass marketing sales technique for mutual funds during the 1950s.

Mr. O'Donnell was an anti-smoking activist who, after losing his voice to cancer 22 years ago, often visited cancer patients in hospitals and their homes.

He was a Marine Corps veteran of World War II and was a member of the Disabled American Veterans and the 3rd Marine Division Association.

Mr. O'Donnell owned a window company, L.J. O'Donnell, Inc., and worked for Weather Master Alsco in Allston.

He was the twin brother of Quincy attorney Lawrence F. O'Donnell, whose son, Lawrence F. O'Donnell Jr. wrote the book "Deadly Force" and husband of the late Margaret M. (Kirk) O'Donnell. He leaves a son, Kirk O'Donnell, of Washington; a sister, Patricia M. Deegan of Marshfield Hills and two grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was in Marshfield Hills Cemetery.

Donations in his memory may be made to the Riverview School, Rt. 6A, East Sandwich 02537.

editorial

Citizen of the Year

As editor of the Cohasset Mariner, it's my pleasure to announce that Joe Buckley has been selected as the 1994 Citizen of the Year.

Mr. Buckley epitomizes the volunteer spirit that makes Cohasset a "community."

Throughout the six weeks that nominations were open, I read dozens of letters from readers who took the time to nominate a citizen detailing his or her contributions which help make this town one we all love.

With a field of 12 nominees submitted from more than 30 citizens, the selection process wasn't easy.

Our thanks to Police Sgt. Robert W. Jackson, Librarian Susan Watrous, Drug & Alcohol Committee member Ted Carroll and Assistant Town Clerk Jacqueline Maguire for joining me at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham for the challenging and pleasurable task of poring over the nominations submitted.

Regrettably, we can't recognize each of the 12 fine nominees with the Citizen of the Year award. And we thank all those who wrote such thoughtful letters and notes nominating their fellow citizens.

The selection committee narrowed the field down to six, then four, three and finally to two. The final decision—although not reached without considerable discussion — was unanimous.

So we extend our heartfelt congratulations to Mr. Buckley, a Cohasseter whose quiet enthusiasm and boundless energy to assist his fellow man serves as an inspiration not only his children but to all who know him.

Sue Connolly, outreach worker for the Council on Aging, puts it best.

"Joe is not one of those people you will see on the front lines getting all the credit," she says. "He is the one behind the scenes doing all the work."

With this award, it's not money we're offering but recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock or movie star with envy when the real hero is the local police officer, parent, teacher, or church leader.

The annual Citizen of the Year award is our way of taking our hats off to a person among us who goes that extra mile without asking for anything but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

Teen Center support is appreciated

letters

To the Editor:

Thank you for the kind words in your editorial of January 26. It's always nice to get an "Attaboy"! As you know, the teen center has become a reality because of the efforts of many people.

Peter Collins and his cadre of contractors and volunteers have worked tirelessly to transform an uninhabitable relic into a bright and inviting place. Rose Collins and Rosemary O'Connell have spent many hours working with the teens to involve them in both the organization and operation of the center. They also have been recruiting and interviewing the adult supervisor candidates. Craig Muir has put his creativity and office resources to work on some preliminary (and successful) fund-raising mailings. The other directors of CYR have invested a lot of their personal time in supporting, both directly and indirectly, those activities. They include: Bill Adams, Bill Baird, Jack Conte, Paula Knowles, Margo Nedrow, and Jack Worley.

Based on the precept that the present is but a reflection of the past, the original group of "Teen Depot" organizers should also be acknowledged. The energy and determination of Beth Christofell, the wise counsel of Gary Ritts, the experience of Bill Baird, and the enthusiasm of Paula Knowles, Karen Hettstrom, and Rosemarie Mercurio all set the stage for what will be Cohasset's new teen center.

I will consider your comments of January 26 to be a fitting "Swan song" for my activities with CYR. Last October, I embarked on a new career path that is both very exciting and personally rewarding. As a result of that new direction, I begin a certificate course at UMass on January 28. While this education will be valuable in my new job, it also will consume a great deal of time. Accordingly, I have resigned my position as president of CYR. It has been a privilege to be a part of this very worthwhile activity and I leave knowing that the future of the teen center is in the hands of some of the most committed and talented people I have had the opportunity to work with. Thanks for all the support you have given both me and the teen center.

Scavenger hunt a success

To the Editor:

Many thanks should go out to the townspeople who gave to our Scavenger Hunt for the food pantry held this past Sunday. The townspeople people not only opened their doors, but opened their hearts to help our fellow man.

My parents always have told me to treat one another with respect, kindness, and to help whenever I could. I'm glad they have instilled these qualities in me, because the townspeople have the same qualities in them. I wish we could pass this on to our fellow man throughout the land. We should help each other to help ourselves be better people.

Thank you to Jen Coley, our youth group director, for all her kind words, time, and effort, and especially her patience for being there for us.

Republican brunch set

Sunday, Feb. 5, Friends of Senator Bob Hedlund will host a brunch noon to 2 p.m. at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham to honor Senator Hedlund and special guest Mitt Romney, chairman Polly Logan announced.

Logan noted that Hedlund meets with selectmen, holds office hours in the district and strives for the perfect attendance he maintained in his past term. Hedlund has been named to serve on the following committees: Transportation, Local Affairs, Public Service, Post Audit and Federal Financial Assistance. He always has given high priority to issues concerning the environment, senior citizens, education, crime prevention and tax reduction.

In addition, the brunch will be a Romney reunion for all those who assisted him in his senatorial campaign.

Assisting with the arrangements are, from Hingham, Carl Harris, Ann Collins, Jamie and Sue Bush, James Claypool, Kevin Costello, Bill and Edna English, Gloria Jantzen, William D. White and William Wise; from Cohasset, selectman Martha Gjesteby, Mrs. Edward Guild, William Grimm, Kevin O'Donnell, moderator George lL Marlette, representative Mary Jeanette Murray, Christy Mihos, Judy Volungis; from Weymouth, H. Richard Coughlin, Anne Hilbert, Kenneth Karlberg, Carolyn Van Tine; from Scituate, Gerald Dwight, Ethel Wheatley, Jeffrey Granatino, David Nellis; from Duxbury, Mrs. Edward O'Sullivan, Audrey MacDonald, Tom Barry, Rita Strong, Debbie Tortorella; from Marshfield, Otis Carney, Joan Williams, Christopher Thayer; from Hull, Michael Avis, Jean Williams and Mary Kakas; from Norwell, Shawni Littlehale.

Open to the public, reservations may be made by calling Julie Guild, 383-6443; Carl Harris, 749-7115; Deborah Tortorella, 585-5733; Chris Tayer, 837-7167; Rita Strong 934-0880 or Ann Hilbert, 337-3743.

Local artist's painting provides a glimpse of home

By Diana N. Kinch
Special to the Mariner

Anne handed me the invitation, its content printed formally like a wedding announcement. The Office of Special Events and Tourism cordially invites you to attend a reception and exhibit by the Pleine Aire Painters of New England, Thursday, Dec. 15, at the Parkman House, 33 Beacon St., Boston. The work of artists from Cohasset, Marshfield, Norwell and Scituate were represented.

Anne Lane and son, Lane Forrer, a sixth-grade student at the Deer Hill School, stand in front of Anne's watercolor "The Wall," which was part of the recent Pleine Aire Painters of New England exhibit at The Parkman House in Boston.

commentary

My friend Anne Lane, was one of the Cohasset artists.

"It would be worth the experience of seeing the inside of the Parkman House," Anne said.

I decided that this was a great opportunity for a family holiday outing. Take the subway into Park St., see the Christmas lights on the Common and saunter to the four-story brownstone just to the right of the State House. The Parkman House and estate had been bequeathed to the city of Boston in 1908 by George Francis Parkman. The Parkman house had only one other owner since it was built in 1825. The land was originally owned by the Hancock Family. We rang the bell and were personally greeted and ushered into the house, spilling with its ornamented greens and gold bows.

Full sheet floral watercolors by Mary Lizotte, a member of the South Shore Art Center, hung on the permanent blue walls of the receiving room to our left. Anne found us and continued our tour up the spiral staircase and into the living room where we viewed paintings depicting scenes of Boston, other South Shore towns and the Maine coast. Strains of the piano chords wrapped around the room, encompassing a 15-foot Christmas tree at one end and a rectangular dining table adorned with an enormous flower arrangement and hors d'oeuvres at the other.

Anne's work entitled "The Wall" hung in the library, which is presently Mayor Menino's study, while his offices are being renovated, a cozy room filled with numerous antique pieces. Above the desk hung "The Wall", a watercolor scene from Anne's backyard looking out to Sandy Beach in Cohasset.

My boys quickly found Anne's son, Lane Forrer, who looked like he was single-handedly hosting the event in his navy blue blazer. He knowingly showed the boys to the side kitchen and the tonics. Following their lead, we continued down gallery hall, dotted left, right and even above the door frames with pastels, oils and watercolor pieces, a history of New England. The end of the hallway led to the carriage room where the work of Roz Farbush, another Cohasset artist, was displayed. Her acrylics depicted, with colorful conviction, life on Nantasket Beach, historic landmarks and doorways of Boston.

We congregated back in the library, before leaving. Looking over Anne's shoulder at the soft peach, pink and greens in her painting, I traveled far away from a blustery, cold December day to a Cohasset summer scene, where I was barefoot on sun-glazed grasses amidst warm ocean breezes. And I thought while standing beside the antiquities of the Boston political haven, how Anne's work has brought us to this legendary Beacon Hill mansion while giving us a glimpse of home.

Music movement workshop

Local music educators are invited to attend a special introductory workshop titled "Education Through Movement: Building the Foundation," to be held on Saturday, Feb. 4, beginning at 9:30 a.m., in Cox Hall at the South Shore Conservatory's Hingham campus.

The four-hour session, presented by Elisabeth Bryant, an endorsed trainer in Phyllis S. Weikert's "Education Through Movement" program, will explore the advantages of incorporating the use of movement and dance activities into a music curriculum.

Bryant, co-conductor of the Conservatory's Intermediate Summer Wind Ensemble, has successfully incorporated the movement approach into her SWE program.

Tuition is $10. The session, which includes an hour lunch break, will end at 2:30 p.m. (Check-in time is 9 a.m.)

For further information call Ed Sorrentino at 749-7565 before Friday, Jan. 27. Space in the workshop is limited. The program is sponsored in part by the Mary DeForrest Seymour Foundation.

Encore! concert Feb. 4

The new location for Encore!, the well-loved pops-style concert to be presented by the Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale on Feb. 4, will be the Broad Cove Ballroom on Rt. 3A in Hingham.

Highlights of this year's concert will include medleys from two Broadway shows, a rousing gospel sing-along and Mass. Hysteria's humorous take on the year just past, called "Views on the News from the Muse of Amuse." The concert will be accompanied by seven-string guitarist Ralph Rotondo, who will join pianist Lenae Badger and drummer Tim Maynard.

Patrons are encouraged to purchase reserved tables for six for $72 and to bring a festive picnic to enjoy during the concert. Single seats may be purchased for $12.

Tickets will not be available at the door but may be bought at Noble's Camera in Hingham Square, from members of either group or by mail by sending a check and self-addressed stamped envelope to Broad Cove Chorale, 66 Lincoln St., Hingham 02043. Call 749-6561 for information.

'Annie' auditions are Feb. 4

The Cohasset Dramatic Club, the area's oldest community theater group, will hold auditions for the classic musical "Annie" on Saturday, Feb. 4, at 11 a.m. for adult roles (Junior High through college). Vocal auditions will be a cappella (1 minute). Music and choreography rehearsals will begin the week of Feb. 12, with script rehearsals beginning the week of March 5.

Auditions for Annie and the Orphans (for children who look no older than 12 years of age) will be held on Saturday, Feb. 11 at 1 p.m. for ages 7-10 and at 2:15 p.m. for ages 10 and up. Vocal auditions will be a cappella (1 minute). Music and choreography rehearsals will begin the week of Feb. 26, with script rehearsals beginning in March.

Auditions will be held at the St. Francis Cabrini Parish House, Hood Rd., Scituate.

The show, which will be presented in May, will be cast entirely from the junior members of the club. The show, under the direction of Kerry Tondorf and the musical direction of Karen Ginsburg, will be choreographed by Bonnie Duval and produced by Dawn Rota and Anita Aherne.

'Sweeney Todd' auditions

Hingham Civic Music Theatre will hold auditions for "Sweeney Todd" (the Demon Barber of Fleet Street) on Monday, Feb. 6, at 7 p.m. in the Hingham High School auditorium and on Tuesday, Feb. 7, at 7 p.m. in the HHS music room.

Callbacks will be on Thursday, Feb. 9, at 7 p.m. in the music room.

A large cast of men and women of varying vocal ranges is needed. The music is dramatic and challenging. The ability to read music is not a must but would be helpful. If auditioners could prepare either a song from the show or another Sondheim song it would be a plus. Anyone with theatrical or musical experience is welcome.

"Sweeney Todd" will be directed by Martha Sawyer, with musical direction by Juliet Cunningham. The show will be presented in the HHS auditorium on April 21, 22 and 28 at 8 p.m. and on April 30 at 2 p.m.

For further information call Martha Sawyer at (617) 545-7248.

Register for summer arts

Registration is now open for the seventh season of "Summer Arts at Derby" at Derby Academy in Hingham. The five-week day program is open to students, ages eight to fifteen years old, and is staffed by professional artist/teachers. The program has attracted artists from Massachusetts, California, Washington, D.C., New York and Virginia.

Students choose their own schedule from more than 60 courses in drama, music, visual arts, writing, dance, photography, animation, gymnastics, martial arts, and sports. Courses offered include painting, clay, mask-making, acting, musical theatre production, story theatre, puppetry, soccer, ballet, jazz, graphic design, general sports, rock band, soapstone carving, cooking, and many more. A newspaper is printed daily, and a full-scale musical is produced. Guest artists complement the program with special performances and workshops. The program culminates in an all-day Arts Festival that celebrates the talents of the students through performances and exhibits of their work.

Dates of "Summer Arts at Derby 1995" are June 26 to July 28; hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Tuition for the five weeks is $950; enrollment is limited. For brochures and applications or information about financial aid, call Thalia McMillion, (617) 740-4766.

Don't miss Tablescapes at art center

The South Shore Art Center will present its sixth annual Tablescapes from Feb. 7 through Feb. 12. This year 22 local artists and designers will be creating table settings based on an artist or artistic period.

A gala champagne reception will be held on Feb. 10 from 6 to 8 p.m. Tickets are $15 each. The menu will include black olive paté, bruschetta, antipasto baguettes, salmon paté and eggplant and chicken pesto pizzas, catered by Two by Two of Norwell.

A special tribute to brides will feature antique gowns from the Cohasset Historical Society, a collection of antique bride dolls and a bridal cake and table-setting exhibit from Montilio's.

The event will include daily speakers on a variety of topics including faux finishing, antique laces and linens and table settings.

Raffle tickets will be available throughout the event for prizes from the Rudolph Adamo Salon, Celtics tickets to the Atlanta Hawks, private tennis lessons and a gift certificate to Tiffany's.

The Tablescapes lecture schedule (free with admission) will include: Barbara Bowman on table linens (Tuesday, Feb. 7 and Friday, Feb. 10 at 1:30 p.m.); Sue Krueger of "Older and Better" (Wednesday, Feb. 8); Phil Smith on interior design (Thursday, Feb. 9 at 10:30 a.m.) and Peggy Connors on "Gardens Around the World" (Thursday, Feb. 9 at 1:30 p.m.); Alex Pappas discussing china (Saturday, Feb. 11 at 10:30 a.m.) and Rita Kirk talking about colors (Saturday, Feb. 11 at 1:30 p.m.) The lecture series will be held at the South Shore Art Center.

Tickets for the exhibit are $10 at the door, $8 in advance. All proceeds will benefit the educational programs of the South Shore Art Center. For further information call the SSAC at 383-ARTS.

Valentine Cabaret, art sale

Cohasset High School is having a Valentine Cabaret and Student Art Sale at Kimball's by the Sea on Wednesday, Feb. 15, beginning at 6 p.m. The evening will feature instrumentalists, vocalists and artists and a light buffet supper and art sale. A Cabaret Show will be presented from 7:30 to 9:00 p.m.

Tickets are $12.50 per person. Reservations may be made by February 10 by sending a check, payable to Cohasset Arts Boosters Club, to Olga Nohe, 21 Whitney Woods, Cohasset 02025. Seating is limited.

Proceeds will benefit CHS music and art curriculum enrichment.

Scots-Irish assembly at DH

At a recent assembly at Deer Hill School, students enjoyed a "Scots-Irish Story and Song" program, presented by Jerry and Nancy Bell. The bells are traveling minstrels who share magical stories, traditional costumes and ancient instruments of their homeland.

The audience experienced Scotland and Ireland as mystical places, full of mountains, monsters and music. The program was sponsored by the Cohasset PSO.

Junior High coffee set

The second in a series of "Coffee with the Principal" will be held on Feb. 10 at 9 a.m. in the audio/visual room of the Junior High School. The purpose of the series is to provide an opportunity for an informational exchange of ideas. All are welcome to attend.

The coffees are sponsored by the PSO in hopes of fostering good communication between parents and the school.

Social Studies review

Any Junior or Senior High School parent interested in participating in a review of the Social Studies curriculum is invited to do so on Feb. 8 at 7:30 a.m. in the audio/visual room at the High School.

Parental input is sought to evaluate the present program and to make changes for future studies. If interested in attending the meeting, please call Karla Watts at 383-0371, Jackie Dinsmore at 383-6816 or the high school at 383-6100.

Creative arts expo at DHS

Sixth grade students at the Deer Hill School have been busy working on a cooperative learning, interdisciplinary project combining creative writing and graphic arts. The students have formed greeting card companies in their homerooms, with each company selecting a specific theme and producing a unique line of cards to fit that theme.

On February 14 the students will hold a Creative Arts Expo at Deer Hill. Each company will set up a promotional booth displaying their products for parents and fellow students. Students will also perform commercials that they wrote for their companies.

One company is creating a special line of cards for pet owners. Others are focusing on environmental, futuristic, nature or underwater themes. There are 20 companies in all.

Students are designing and printing the card covers in art class with Mrs. Ann Berman and are writing the poetic verses for their cards in English class with Mrs. Joann Magoun and Mrs. Betty Cisneros.

Schools need your help

At the Deer Hill School two programs are in progress to collect points or coupons towards computer software.

The A+ America Program involves dropping off coupons, lids, caps and other items at the school.

Participating Sunoco stations will issue a coupon with the purchase of eight or more gallons of gasoline (including past fill-ups). Marshall's receipts can be saved for valuable points.

Hood one-gallon milk and one-half gallon orange juice caps, Brigham's icecream lids, Stonyfield Farm yogurt lids and UPC codes from Polaroid and Faberware are all needed.

Original receipts and the UPC code from Lotus Dev. Corp. products, the UPC sticker, proof of purchase, lifetime warranty and UPC codes from BASF merchandise and RDL Acoustics original receipts may all be submitted to the school to help in accumulating the necessary points to receive software products.

Be sure to ask for coupons/receipts at participating businesses.

With the Bank of Boston Program, which is schoolwide, points can be redeemed for educational equipment. The school collects 100 bonus points by a member of a family (18 years or older) completing a Bonus Certificate at a participating Bank of Boston branch (there is no obligation on the family).

Extra points may be earned if the family already banks with the Bank of Boston, through qualifying transactions, such as the purchase of a CD or a loan. The Cohasset branch is at the Tedeschi's Plaza on 3A. If every family in the system collects school investment points by completing a form through May 31, Cohasset schools could gain the maximum benefit from the program. The drop-off locations are at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools.

Music volunteers needed

The Cohasset High School band and chorus will perform for the Deer Hill School's fifth and sixth grade band and for the fourth, fifth and sixth grade chorus on Feb. 9 and 10 during the 1:50 period.

Parent volunteers are still needed to help out with refreshments for one hour on either day. Please contact Jane Henderson at 383-6535 or Steve Biagini.

Deer Hill School music decals are still on sale in the school office.

PAC meeting is Feb. 7

The Parents' Advisory Council will hold its monthly meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 7, at 7:30 p.m. at the Deer Hill School. The meetings are provided as support to all parents and guardians of students receiving services in Cohasset schools under Chapter 766. All are welcome.

For further information call Jo Ann Pilczak at 383-0268 or Ann Whiteley at 383-9310.

Year-old gun robbery still under investigation

A handgun recovered after a routine motor vehicle stop in Easton was stolen from a South Main Street home a year ago, Cohasset police said.

State police stopped a car driven by a 19-year-old Cohasset man last week and found a .380 caliber semi-automatic handgun which Cohasset police traced to a Cohasset robbery reported Jan. 30, 1994.

Following a 7 p.m., Jan. 27 motor vehicle stop for defective equipment, state police charged the driver, Justin Littlehale, 75 Elm St., and two passengers, who are juveniles, with receiving stolen property and possession of a firearm without being properly licensed, according state police at the Middleboro office. They were also charged with possession of a Class B (illegal drugs) and Class D (marijuana) substances. Police would not release the names of the two 16-year-olds charged because they are juveniles. Two other passengers were not charged, state police said.

Cohasset police have not recovered a .45 caliber Colt semi-automatic pistol, a .22 caliber Winchester pump action rifle, bayonets, and some magazines and ammunition taken during the same robbery.

Anyone with information about the missing weapons should call Police Det. Rick Grassie, 383-1055.

Winning mark is within wrestlers' reach

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Right along, Cohasset wrestling coach Torin Sweeney considered the '94-95 campaign as a rebuilding season. With several youngsters on the squad and facing a stiff schedule, Sweeney figured a .500 record would be a huge achievement, not to mention a means of building momentum for next winter.

So with a 6-6 record and five meets remaining, the Skippers have a good chance at finishing above the .500 mark. It's not too tough to guess what Sweeney's reaction would be if that delicious scenario played itself out.

"These are all matches we should be in," he said. "I'm very happy with the way the team has been wrestling."

Still, Sweeney knew the Skippers would be easy prey for some of the teams they'd face this season and they took two of them on last week.

Cohasset was smothered by the defending New England champion Carver squad, 58-6 and lost to a Atlantic Coast League power Hingham.

The Skippers managed to win four matches combined with sophomore Justin Buckley taking both his 160-pound confrontations by pin.

"He's really starting to wrestle very well now," Sweeney said. "He has turned it on."

All-Star Ryan Freeman wrestled to the closest finish of the Carver meet at 135 pounds. Matched against defending state champion Peter Macolini, Freeman escaped from a hold so close to the end of the match, Sweeney said the outcome could have been called either way. Ryan wound up losing the match, 3-2.

"Ryan actually spun behind him right at the end," Sweeney said. "Not only was it close by a point, but it came right down to the end."

Freeman looks to be in excellent shape for the remaining meets and the upcoming South Sectionals.

"He couldn't be any readier at any time in his career," Sweeney said.

Sweeney said he was confident that his wrestlers could do well in the remaining meets if they concentrated on the task facing them.

The Skippers were to wrestle Hanover on Wednesday and then host a quad meet against Holbrook, Middleboro and Rockland, Saturday morning beginning at 10 a.m.

"We quite possibly could win all three," Sweeney said in handicapping the weekend meet. "We won't lose to Holbrook, but the other two could go either way."

Look for the guy with the wide smile if things go Cohasset's way.

Gymnasts clinch title in (personal) best style defeats, came on the heels of the Skippers' victory over last year's co-champion, Scituate, before a packed Cohasset High gymnasium last Wednesday night.

The Skippers not only clinched the title, they did it with style.

The 125 points Cohasset scored was the best in the school's history. Several of the gymnasts also set personal records over the course of the two meets.

The Skippers also laid to rest the disappointing second meet against Scituate of a year ago. Cohasset staged somewhat of an upset in defeating the Sailors the first time they faced each other. The win put the Skippers in first place, but they had to compete against Scituate one more time.

Anxious and intimidated the second time around, the Sailors wound up beating Cohasset to force the tie.

Skippers coach Ruthann Ardizzoni said winning the title outright was more of a thrill to both herself and the girls.

"I think the girls are totally excited because that was their goal from day one," said Ardizzoni. "We have a lot of depth. The first kid that goes up is good and the last kid that goes up is good."

Sophomore Erica Hettstrom was the big point-earner for the Skippers in the win over Carver. Hettstrom won the all-around (32.1), bars (7.6) and balance beam (in a season-best 8.4). She finished second to her younger sister, Tara, in the floor (8.6 to 8.4).

Cohasset also garnered a first-place finish from Jodi Colwill, who improved on her personal best of 8.1 on the vault to 8.2. Megan Pratt was the all-around runner-up (29.2) and copped third on the bars (7.1) and floor (8.0).

Along with the best overall team score ever, Cohasset set a team record for the highest total ever on the bars in the win over Scituate. With their strong scores, Ardizzoni's young squad left little room for the Sailors to slip up.

Tara Hettstrom set personal bests in the all-around (31.2) and floor (8.6). Her scores were good for third and second, respectively.

Erica finished second on the bars (7.6) while Megan Pratt and Tara tied for third (7.5). Cohasset's victory in the event marked the highest team total of the season.

Pratt (7.9) and captain Tafana Fiore (7.7) wound up taking second and third on the balance beam.

by Joe & Dave

With the regular season winding down in many winter sports, the .500 mark needed to qualify for the various tournaments has made for more than a few do-or-die situations.

First, the teams that are definitely in.. Cohasset and Abington's boys basketball teams are both in. Rockland must win three of its remaining six games to reach the magical 10-win mark. Mike Mayhew's girls' squad in Abington doesn't have to worry. The Green Wave reached 10 wins five games ago. Led by Kelly Boyle they have 15 victories so far and have clinched the league championship.

Both Hanover squads have had tough seasons and won't be in the tourney, but the Indians' hockey team is closing in on its ninth consecutive South Shore League title. A tourney slot goes along with it.

Abington had big aspirations for its hockey team this season, but injuries to key players wiped out the Green Wave's chances at a tournament spot. Rockland is still breathing.

Cohasset's gymnastics team is 11-0 and has clinched the SSL championship for the second year in a row. Ruthann Ardizzoni's talented squad set a slew of all-time school records this season and should fare well as both a team and individually in the sectionals. Look for Hanover gymnasts Renee George and Kim Richardson to garner some medals in the league meet.

The South Shore should be well-represented in the wrestling tourney as well. Cohasset's Ryan Freeman and Rockland's Mark Laramee look to be the best bets to advance past the sectionals.

I wasn't a big advocate of the new tourney qualification standard when the season first began and I still don't believe it's the best way of picking teams for the playoffs. But, unlike the experimental open-basketball tourney, no squads will be playing past their regular season with losing records. I think most coaches will agree with me when I say that was a joke and to do away with the open tourney was a smart move by the MIAA.

—Joe Reardon

Just a few idle thoughts that came to me the other day while I was channel surfing:

- I'm starting to believe the O.J. Simpson trial is being called the "Trial of the Century" because that's how long it's going to take to reach a verdict.
- After watching and listening to Kathy Lee Gifford sing the National Anthem before the start of the not-so-Super Bowl, I have an incredible urge to throw her off a cruise ship. I'm sure Frank would give me a hand after having to introduce his no-talented spouse.
- Deion Sanders may be a great talent, but next to the Chicago Bulls' Scottie Pippen, he is the biggest jerk in professional sports. Sanders is an egomaniac who talks like he's reading the lines to a bad rap song. Pippen? He should have been suspended for 10 games after throwing that chair in the game the

Skippers slam Scituate hoopsters

The Cohasset Skippers were hosted by the Scituate Sailors on Tuesday night. The first place Skippers headed into the contest with a 11-0 league record while Scituate went in sporting a 9-3 record and holding second place. But only Cohasset emerged as the victor, posting a decisive 46-32 win.

The game started with a fearsome block, handed out by a trio of Skippers, Pete Bishop(11 points), Joe Slotnick(11 points), and Matt Pierce(10 points). Pierce pulled up and nailed a jumper but Scituate answered with a three pointer. Slotnick knocked down a free throw, making the score 3-3.

A Sailor fast break looked like a sure basket until a hustling Tom Allen burst on the scene. Allen took off and when he had landed, the basketball was halfway across the gym. Allen's block set the tone for the rest of the half. The block set up another hoop for Pierce.

Scituate's Chris Brown nailed a trey, but Slotnick answered with a pull-up jumper. Bishop put back a miss to give CHS a 9-6 edge. An Allen drive to the hole resulted in a pair for the senior guard and Jarred Hardwick sank a three pointer of his own. A nifty post move by Slotnick lifted the Skippers to a score of 16-6. Pierce nailed a jumper and Slotnick took a Magner pass to the rim for two. Pierce followed with a three pointer and Cohasset owned a 23-8 lead.

Bishop put the skids on a four-point Scituate run with a hoop and the foul shot. Jeremiah Stevenson knocked down a three and tough Cohasset defense forced a turnover. Slotnick's layup, Allen's coast-to-coast drive, and Bishop's strong play at both ends gave Cohasset a 35-15 halftime lead.

Cohasset's entrance into the gym at the end of halftime was greeted by a hostile Scituate crowd. But the Skippers' faithful, not to be outdone, replied with a sizable legion of their own.

Pierce kicked off the second half with a free throw and Bishop tapped it back in after a miss. Pierce drove to the hole for two points and Dorian Bryant ripped down a rebound that resulted in two points for the big forward. Offensive boards by Bishop and Hardwick set up a Hardwick layup. Slotnick answered a Sailor three pointer with a strong drive to the basket, making the tally 46-22.

The last three minutes of the game were highlighted by strong rebounding by Ryan Bishop, Andy Fitzsimmons, and Dave Nothnagle and a shot block by senior Jerome Marion.

The Skippers shut down Brown, holding him to just seven points, 10.5 points below his average. Slotnick and Hardwick were his primary adversaries, but the entire team pitched in to stop the third highest scorer in the league.

Head coach Ron Ford was not ecstatic about Cohasset's victory.

" We played a great, great first half," he said. "We played outstanding in the first half. That's the level that this team should play at. It was a disappointing second half but the game was well over when that happened. This team has got a lot of potential and we showed it in the first half tonight."

Cohasset will host Abington on Friday night. Ford said, "It's going to be a tough game; they're a tough team. Hopefully we'll be able to put a full game together on Friday."

Matt Pierce's work ethic pays off

If there is a definition for "coach's ballplayer," Matt Pierce's photo is next to it.

"Matt is a kid who works very hard on his game," said head coach Ron Ford. "He worked harder than anybody in the off-season this year. He constantly has a basketball in his hand. He's a gym rat. He's the kid whose trying to break into the gym. He's always there. Matt's work ethic reminds me of Chris Mullin's. The kid can't get enough basketball. That's just the way Matt is. For him to be in a slump this year was disappointing, but tonight we saw him break out of it." (Pierce "pulled out of it" with a stellar, 15-point performance against East Bridgewater.)

If Matt Pierce is playing the same type of games down the stretch as he is now, we're gonna be a very tough team to beat."

Pierce's sixth-man role last year helped lead the Skippers deep into the tournament. This year appears no different as Pierce and his teammates are off to a 10-0 South Shore league start.

But Pierce, himself doesn't seem too impressed with his accomplishments. When asked about his performance against EB, his reply reflected more on the team than himself.

"Every game somebody has to step up and tonight, I guess it was me," Pierce said. "The team as a whole played pretty poorly and I just happened to have a good game.

"I played pretty well at the beginning of the season and then I started to get into a slump. Now, I think I'm starting to come out of it."

Lest you think that he has no time for anything but basketball, you'll find Pierce's name on the honor roll. The work ethic he displays in the gym goes for the classroom as well.

In response to a query about his work ethic, Pierce replied, "I lifted weights all summer and I've worked hard to get where I am."

So chances are the next time you go to Sullivan gym at Cohasset High, you'll have the opportunity to watch Pierce perfect his game, if it's not there already.

Pompeo earns ECAC honors

Cohasset's Brian Pompeo, a senior at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, is a key member of the men's ice hockey team. As a starting forward, Pompeo recently earned the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC) Co-Player of the Week honors for his performance during the week of January 15.

A team co-captain and three-year letter winner, Pompeo scored two goals and made one assist during the week against American International College (AIC) and the University of Connecticut (UConn). He scored one goal and made one assist in a 6-2 win over AIC. The second goal came in the second game against UConn. Pompeo's performance over the weekend gives him five goals and nine assists for a season total of 14 points. The team's current record is 7-4-2.

Last year Pompeo was an assistant captain for the White Mules making 10 goals and 16 assists for a total of 26 points. The White Mules finished the season with a 13-9-2 record earning its first playoff spot in the ECAC championship tournament in nine years.

Pompeo is the son of Hap and Leah Pompeo of Cohasset and a graduate of the Belmont Hill School. He is an administrative science major.

Mihos leads squad to finals

Goaltender Ashley Mihos helped lead the girls South Shore Hornets hockey team to a finals finish at the weekend Tabor Academy Tournament. In five tournament games, Mihos allowed just seven goals. She recorded a shutout against the highly-favored Connecticut Polar Bears team.

The Hornets lost in the final game to Chelmsford, 3-1. Mihos also plays for Derby Academy's JV hockey team which beat Fessenden Academy, 3-2, last Wednesday. Jamie Simmons of Cohasset scored two goals in the win.

Little League registration

The Cohasset Little League will hold a further registration for the 1995 season Saturday, Feb. 4, 10 a.m. to noon at Cohasset High School. Anyone interested in participating in the Cohasset Youth Baseball Program in 1995 is advised that this is the last opportunity to take advantage of the $10 discount per player. A further registration will take place in March, but the discount will not apply at that time. Youngsters between the ages of 5 and 18 are eligible to register. Anyone who registers is expected to pay the registration fee, complete the application and produce a non-returnable xerox copy of his/her birth certificate.

Road Race by the Sea set for April 2

The 19th Annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea will be run Sunday, April 2, beginning at 1 p.m., at Cohasset Village, Cohasset. Check-in times at the Cohasset Community Center are Saturday, April 1 and Sunday, April 2, 9 a.m. to noon.

Registration fee up until March 28 is $10; March 28 and after, $12.

To get an application: Send a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Cohasset Road Race by the Sea, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025. Send completed application with payment to the above address, also.

For race questions, call Austy Lyne at (617) 383-6550.

other night. Better yet, the ref should have bashed it over his head and knocked some sense into him. Now that would be something for "Sports Spotlight."

• Admit it. With spring drawing closer with each passing day, you can't wait to see Jose Canseco in a Red Sox uniform.

• Did you know there are already 235 licensed Drew Bledsoe football cards? And this is a guy who has been in the league for just two years.

• Rumor has it that the Robert DeNiro of Hingham, Scott Wahle, will be co-starring as cousin "Oliver" in the new "Brady Bunch" movie. He was originally up for the part of "Barney Rubble" in the "Flintstones" but the chemistry between Wahle and Rosie O'Donnell just wasn't there.

Teen center opens Feb. 4

The Teen Center will host an open house on Feb. 4 from 7 to 11 p.m. and on Feb. 5 from noon to 4 p.m.

The organizers of the facility, which will be under the supervision of a paid staff, have been working closely with a core group of enthusiastic seventh- and eighth-graders.

Funds to meet operating costs, estimated at $1,000 per month, are greatly needed. Every donation of $10 makes it possible to keep the center open for an hour. Tax-deductible donations may be sent to Cohasset Youth Resources, Inc., 15 Border St., Cohasset 02025.

Valentine breakfast, Feb. 11

The Cohasset Enrichment Program is sponsoring a Valentine's Day Pancake Breakfast on Saturday, Feb. 11, from 9 a.m. to noon at the Deer Hill School on Sohier St. The cost is $3 per person or $9 per family for pancakes, juice, coffee and fruit.

The Enrichment Program will be performing a short comedy. Reservations may be made by calling 383-6860.

Blues/Jazz band to play

Susan Tedeschi and her "Best of Boston" band will light up the Chart House from 8 p.m. to 12 a.m., Friday, March 3 at the PSO's annual Silent Auction.

Tickets are available for $20 and cover admission, light hors d'oeuvres, finger desserts and gratuity.

For information, call Kate Abbruzzese at 383-9317, Ed Connolly at 383-1248 or Ellen Sanchez at 383-6911. The Chart House will be closed for dinner.

Cabaret '95 is coming!

The halls of Cohasset's First Parish House on Main Street will be ringing again with music and dance as rehearsals for Cabaret '95, "Those Were the Days," get under way.

Two performances are scheduled for Saturday evening, March 18, and Sunday afternoon, March 19, at the First Parish House.

The director/producer of Cabaret '95, which features members of the parish, is Carolyn Curtis. Information about ticket sales will be announced soon.

Church holds quilt sho

The Second Congregational Church will ... its second annual Quilt Show and Luncheon on March 11 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. More than 50 handmade quilts will be featured. The lunch will include a choice of shrimp or vegetable souffle, salad, rolls and a fancy homemade dessert cart.

The cost of the quilt show and luncheon is $8. Proceeds will benefit Children with AIDS. Quilts for these children will be made during the show, and guests will be invited to cut a square and participate in making the quilts.

If you have a quilt to display or fabric that could be used in making the AIDS quilts, please call the church at 383-0345.

*The low introductory discounted rate on the Home Equity Line is valid for the first six months of the loan and is offered to all new credit lines secured by single family and two family, owner occupied homes. The introductory rate and the regular rate are variable and will change if the Wall Street Journal prime rate changes. The introductory interest rate of the loan is calculated by subtracting 1.52% from the prime rate published in the Wall Street Journal on the first day of the billing cycle, thereafter the regular interest rate is calculated by adding 1.00% to the prime rate. The maximum APR is 18%. Property insurance is required. Final approval will be subject to income verification, appraisal, if necessary, and clear title. Anti-Greenbush rhetoric blasts train study group

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

The Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) met in Braintree last week for the first time since unanimously voting last March to support the restoration of rail service to the Old Colony Greenbush line with a short tunnel (Alternative 6A) under Hingham Square.

And what should have been a working meeting for the members to discuss the latest revisions and financial feasibility studies in the Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Report (SDEIR) turned into a political platform for State Representative Joseph Sullivan (D- Braintree) ,who worried that the MBTA has kept information from the public, and for the anti-train group the Coastal Coalition and its supporters to raise their concerns, including the danger of hearing impairments in children due to prolonged exposure to train horns.

While CAC members mulled over the use of experimental pole mounted whistles versus bells on trains at grade crossings, a new executive summary and a financial report that shows that restoration of rail service at grade level is the most cost effective way to meet the South Shore's transportation needs, Coastal Coalition member Ann Musto asked what impact of the train and its horn blowing will have on children in

An end to alcohol ban in big top sought

By Sarah Cook
Mariner correspondent

Last year's opposition to the zoning relief and liquor license granted to South Shore Playhouse Associates by the Zoning Board of Appeals and selectmen appears to have subsided as Music Circus officials seek a renewal of both the special permit and license that would allow them to serve beer and wine at events in the upcoming season.

The non-profit South Shore Playhouse Associates is the parent company of the Music Circus and Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis.

Despite the fact that the special permit granted last year by the zoning board did not expire until Feb. 3, 1995, selectmen did not renew the Music Circus' liquor license in January. Selectmen stated that they would await the renewal of the necessary zoning relief from the zoning board.

As a result of the liquor license denial, Music Circus Attorney Louis Cassis filed an appeal with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC). Cassis explained at a meeting with the zoning

Cohasset does its homework on handicapped access

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

Two weeks have passed since the Jan. 26 deadline for cities and towns throughout the state and the country to comply with the American with Disabilities Act (ADA).

The law, which was signed in 1990, is designed to give all citizens equal access to government functions and requires that public buildings and work places be made accessible to the disabled.

Towns that do not comply will face lawsuits.

All over the Commonwealth, communities have rushed to make their town halls, police stations and libraries accessible in time for last month's deadline or show good-faith efforts to comply in the near future.

"Cohasset is in good shape," said local Disabilities Commission Chairman Michelle Buckley.

According to Buckley the town and the commission have worked well together on accessibility issues and were well prepared for the ADA deadline.

"The majority of buildings in Cohasset are accessible," she said, adding that those she's worked with have been "cooperative, friendly and aware of the laws."

Accessibility comes in various forms and price ranges, everything from lowering a paper towel rack in a restroom and adding signs to elaborate hydraulic lifts and elevators.

Winter of '95 makes its debut

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

Winter finally arrived over the last weekend, with almost six inches of heavy, wet snow falling before warmer temperatures dropped almost an inch of rain on top of it. A blast of arctic air, as the storm blew out of the region, turned the whole mess into snowy concrete, impossible to shovel for anyone who hadn't gone after it early.

After a month of January with unseasonably warm weather, the recent cold snap woke up residents who thought winter had passed us by.

Cohasset Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield said town trucks plowed and sanded streets for 15 hours. Private contractors put in 8 hours of work.

The highway department plows and sands 37 miles of public streets, and 11 miles of private ways in Cohasset.

Litchfield said his $45,000 snow removal budget is "kinda healthy" now, with $26,000 remaining in the account before this weekend's storm. Figures for this recent storm are not available at this time.

"This storm was nothing out of the ordinary," he said. The biggest problem his department faced was

Gimme shelter

I am a 7- to 8-month-old brown and black Beagle/Doberman mix. I was found at the Stop and Shop in Cohasset Jan. 25, but I had been spotted previously in the Sandy Beach area in Cohasset. I am wearing a brightly colored nylon collar, but my tags are missing. I have a wound of unknown origin, and I desperately need my owner to come forward with rabies verification so that I won't be euthanized. Please help me! My time is running out! If you have any information, call the Scituate animal shelter at 545-8703.

COPS grant awarded

The Cohasset police department will receive a $75,000 federal grant for recruiting and training an additional police officer.

Cohasset is one of 13 South Shore towns, out of 221 towns statewide, to be awarded funds from the federal Crime Bill that Congress passed last fall.

U. S. Rep. Gerry Studds (D-Mass. 10th Dist.) announced the grant awards Tuesday afternoon.

In a statement issued by his office, Studds said the grants are part of the third round of funding under the COPS-FAST (Community Oriented Policing Services-Funding Accelerated for Smaller Towns) program, totalling $165 million.

Cohasset Police Chief Brian Noonan said it will be up to the selectmen to decide whether the town will hire an additional officer for his 17-man force.

Under the grant program, Cohasset will receive $25,000 a year for three years, towards the salary of an officer. The town will have to pay the difference between the grant amount and the base pay of approximately $31,000, plus benefits of $5,500.

Noonan said he "really wants" Cohasset to receive one of the COPS-MORE (Making Officer Redeployment Effective) grants which would provide money for equipment purchases and the hiring of civilian dispatchers. Applications for this program are due by March 17.

"It's a real, tough, competitive grant," he said.

The town will hire a total of nine dispatchers this year, he said: three full-time, three part-time, and three to fill in when needed, Noonan said.

Other area towns receiving $75,000 grants are Abington, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Rockland, Scituate, and Whitman. Plymouth received a $150,000 grant to hire two police officers.

Nomination papers ready

Nomination papers for the town election on Saturday, April 1, are available at the Town Clerk's office through Thursday, Feb. 9, until 5 p.m. that evening.

All nomination papers should be submitted to the registrars of voters for certification of names and addresses on or before Monday, Feb. 13, until 5 p.m.

Open seats include two positions for three years for selectmen; one position for three years for assessor; two positions for three years on the school committee; three positions for three years as trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library; one position for three years and one position for one year on the Board of Health; one position for three years for water commissioner; one position for five years for sewer commissioner; one position for five years on the planning board, one position for five years on the recreation commission and one position for five years on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Fifty signatures are needed to have a name placed on a ballot. Campaign forms must be filled out.

HISTORIC NEW ENGLAND PROPERTIES

Hunneman & Company-Coldwell Banker recently established an Historic New England Properties Divison which offers training for sales associates interested in developing marketing services for the unique architectural styles of the region. Jacqueline Clark, Margy Charles, Claire Watts, Helen Pratt, Lora Labonte, Liz Warren and Judy Parsons, Manager, of the Cohasset office have completed the course of study and are designated as specialists in the marketing of historic properties.

Instruction was provided by representatives from the Peabody Essex Museum in Salem, Mass. and the National Historic Trust of Washington, D.C. The course surveyed styles and unique details of homes built from the colonial period of the 1600's and 1700's through the modern movement which began in the 1920's. Included also were tours of historic homes, local and national historic district regulations, historic designated propterties, preservation and restoration guidelines and the effect of period detail on a property's intrinsic value and monetary worth.

If you have an historic home and are interested in its effective marketing, please call our office and ask for one of our Historic Properties Specialists for information on placing it in our Historic Properties Register.

Hunneman & Company-Coldwell Banker is New England's #1 real estate company in sales volume and number of transactions.* The Cohasset office, one of fifty three branches throughout Massachusetts, serves the entire South Shore.

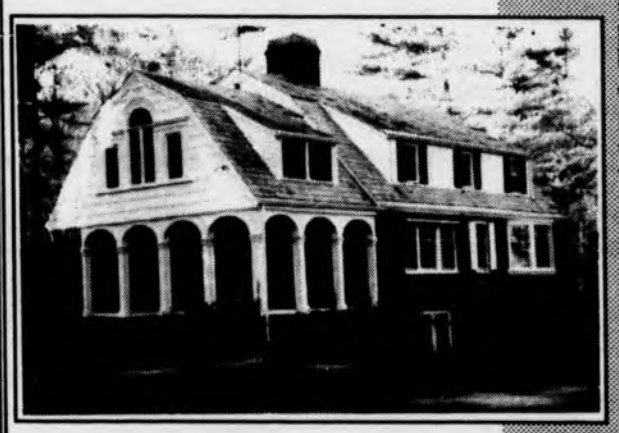
NORTH RIVER PROPERTIES

NORWELL - A world apart and on 5.7 secluded acres this is a home that will mesmerize and captivate you. There are unobstructed views of the North River and marsh and for naturalists this is a heaven on earth. The original structure, believed to have been built by Mary Baker Eddy, has a large Wright-style addition which was designed to enhance its original charm and keep it in harmony with its extraordinary natural surroundings. There are 8 rooms, 3 full baths, storybook balconies and lots of custom decking. Especially cozy and warm with a floor to ceiling fieldstone fireplace. If you dream of living on the river and if privacy and serenity are what you long for, this is a property you must see.

Offered at $540,000.



NORWELL - Two wooded and private acres surround this gracious brick home, custom built when craftsmanship was the norm and pride determined quality. With deeded river access and sweeping views of the North River, there is a friendly feeling throughout the home. There are beautiful handcarved mouldings and views from most of the eight rooms, 4 bedrooms, including a fireplaced master suite, 2 1/2 baths, a generous living room and dining room, a cozy den with built-ins and a lovely formal summer porch. Mature plantings dot the landscape and there are lovely, well tended gardens. It is rare to find a home with such character and grace. A property for the discerning buyer and truly a home for a lifetime.

Offered at $375,000.

Cohasset's week

Public meeting on Shaw's

The general public, town officials and Chamber members are cordially invited to attend a presentation by Shaw's representatives, sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, on Wednesday, Feb. 15 at 7:15 p.m.

The meeting, which will follow an informal Chamber get-together beginning at 6:30 p.m., will be held at the Chart House on Border Street. Details of the Cushing Plaza project will be presented, followed by a question and answer period. The meeting is open to all interested citizens.

Town wins safety award

The Town of Cohasset has been awarded a Certificate of Achievement for its superior commitment and effectiveness in risk management by the Massachusetts Interlocal Insurance Association. Cohasset was one of two towns chosen for the award from among 261 municipalities participating in MIIA's workers' compensation program.

Cohasset was praised for its initiative and leadership in loss control activities, including thorough investigation of accidents and extensive employee training in safe practices and preventive measures. The town's safety program and safety committee were also commended.

Cohasset will receive almost $5,000 as its share of the dividends announced at the MIIA Annual Meeting, which resulted from reduced workers' compensation costs made possible through the efforts of communities participating in the MIIA program.

Homeowners seek relief

The proposed construction of an addition to the residence located at 68 Summer Street, having been positively recommended by the Planning Board and heard by the Zoning Board of Appeals, awaits a decision granting both a required special permit and a variance.

Christine and Dermit Millar seek the variance in order to be able to extend the entry-way of their home six feet closer to the property line along Summer Street. The exterior wall of the residence is currently located 22 feet from the property line.

The Millars stated that such an addition would be within the context of the neighborhood as the exterior of the neighboring residence is within 17 feet of the property line.

In addition to the variance, a special permit is needed for the proposed construction of a mudroom and a deck in the rear of the residence as well as a pergola connecting the garage to the home. The special permit is required as construction of these additions would be within the flood plain.

An end to alcohol ban in big top sought

board Thursday (Feb. 2) that this appeal was filed in an attempt to protect procedural results and avoid the cost of application for a new license as opposed to a license renewal. He added that the appeal would be dropped should the special permit and liquor license be granted prior to the ABCC hearing scheduled for Feb. 22.

Cassis and Music Circus General Manager Vincent Longo said Thursday that Music Circus officials had complied to the best of their ability with the 14 conditions established by the Zoning Board in the special permit issued for the 1994 season.

Although a discrepancy with respect to the legality of the presence of alcohol within the performance tent existed between the conditions of the relief granted by the zoning board and the liquor licence granted by selectmen, Music Circus officials claimed to have abided by zoning board's stricter condition and did not allow patrons to enter the performance tent with beer or wine. The licence granted by selectmen allows alcohol anywhere within the fenced area inside the Music Circus grounds.

Zoning Board Chairman Mark DeGiacomo explained that this condition was established in order to reduce the number of drinks consumed by patrons prior to leaving the performance in their cars. DeGiacomo said that should patrons be allowed to bring alcohol into the performance tent, they may purchase two drinks as opposed to just one.

Music Circus officials, however, requested that this specific condition be removed, claiming that it was an "inconvenience to the people" and that they "don't see any down side to being able to drink in the tent." Cassis specifically cited the fact that the condition created a bottleneck at entrances to the tent and forced people to consume their beverage faster than they would probably have liked.

Cassis further stated: "It is the only requirement that we would like to see removed."

Vincent Longo expressed concern that the Music Circus was "not as successful as it would have liked to have been" in preventing patrons from parking in the lots of the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood Schools. He explained that the Music Circus officials had posted no parking signs, but were unable to chain entrances to the parking lots. Superintendent of Schools Stephen Hart had prohibited any blockade of entrances to the lots on the basis that it would prevent Cohasset resident's access to school facilities, Longo said.

Cassis identified the situation as a "condition that preceded the liquor license" and explained that people park in the school lots in order to avoid any delay in leaving the crowded Music Circus parking lot.

Cassis concluded his presentation with a final request to the board.

"It is our sincere request that if you approve our permit, that it be like other permits and not be restricted to one year," he said.

Longo added that Music Circus officials would treat their responsibilities under the conditions of the special permit no differently should the permit be issued for a period longer than one year.

Sohier Street resident Robert V. Davenport represented the only opposition to the renewal of the special permit at the meeting noting that although ticketing of cars parked on Sohier Street had improved, parking continued to be a problem at the Sohier Street location as well as on Ripley Road and in the parking lots of the Deer Hill School and the Joseph Osgood School.

Davenport concluded his remarks by stating: "I still do not believe that they need or should have a liquor license there."

The planning recommended approval of the special permit last Wednesday night (Feb. 1). The zoning board indicated that a decision would be returned as quickly as possible.

Cohasset does its homework. . .

Foresight, good timing and a bit of "dumb luck" played a part in Cohasset's good standing, said building commissioner and ADA coordinator Robert Egan.

Egan explained that many of the renovations to town buildings precede the ADA law but were designed for accessibility and meet the requirements of the state Architectural Access Board (AAB).

At town hall, which was renovated in 1989 with an addition on the south side of the building, ramps provide access to the main entrance off the parking lot which contains three handicapped spaces. On the building's first floor there are two handicapped accessible bathrooms and the entrance to the auditorium. An elevator provides access to all other floors and public spaces.

Major renovations in 1990-91 to the single level police and fire department building made it completely accessible with handicapped parking, and pitched walkways outside and widened doorways, and handicapped bathrooms inside, Egan said.

At the Paul Pratt Memorial Library access issues were planned for well in advance as two exterior ramps providing access to both floors were built as early as 1975. A handicapped parking space, not required in lots of fewer than 15 spaces by the AAB's laws, but required by the ADA, was completed last spring, Egan said.

floor and one on the the children's floor bring the building into compliance with state and federal requirements.

Senior citizen activities are primarily held at the Community Center which is completely accessible through a new addition that was specifically designed for these programs. Ramps and handicapped-accessible bathrooms comply with state and federal codes and a shared handicapped accessible shuttle van with Hingham transports senior citizens to and from various activities.

And while the Veterans Legion Hall and the Water Treatment Plant could use a ramp and a handicapped parking space to be in full compliance, plans to do so are in the works and neither project should be to costly, Egan said.

The Joseph Osgood school is for the most part accessible to the disabled with the classrooms on the ground level and several entrances at grade. The east wing which was added in 1949 and is three steps below the original structure has been accessed by a portable ramp in the past.

But Egan said that space constraints has forced the school to use this lower level which houses the gym, library, art room and future computer room more often and it is not fully accessible from the inside. Egan said that feasibility studies with the school facilities committee are underway and a solution is being pursued.

The more modern Deer Hill School is a one story building that meets requirements for handicapped accessibility.

At the high school, accessibility was achieved just in time to meet the needs of a disabled student. Guido Risi, assistant to the Superintendent of Schools, said a wheel chair lift which brought the school into compliance was completed late last fall at a total cost of $26,512.

While Cohasset is exceptionally well prepared to meet state and federal handicap codes, Buckley acknowledged that the cost to make some buildings accessible is prohibitive.

Construction costs can be staggering and engineering and architectural studies to find the best means of providing accessibility make those costs even higher.

Title II of the ADA does not require that physical barriers in existing buildings be removed as long as programs and services are made accessible to individuals who are unable to use an inaccessible facility.

As some towns struggle to get to know the laws, get plans together and get moving on compliance, title II might offer some relief and some opportunity for towns to accommodate disabled citizens without breaking the bank.

In Cohasset, Buckley is both pleased and optimistic about town wide accessibility.

"Each town is different," she said, adding, "we're doing well. We're working it out."

Anti-Greenbush rhetoric blasts train study group and outside Cohasset's Osgood School which lies along the right of way.

Coastal Coalition member Nancy Buckley raised safety and grade crossing issues and asked why there was nothing in the report on Transportation Secretary Federico Pena's offer to reward communities that shut crossings down.

MBTA Project Manager Joseph Connor pointed out that Pena's program applies mostly to rural areas with freight traffic not commuter rail service.

"There are 180,000 grade crossings in the country and 2/3 of them have nothing but signs and lights," Connor said, adding "federal programs to upgrade and close crossings have been around for 10 years."

Holding an MBTA document in his hand, State Rep. Joseph Sullivan criticized the "T" for countless delays in releasing the Environmental Impact Report and demanded to know what weight environmental and mitigation issues have versus cost in the final decision on an alternative. Sullivan said that the document he held indicated that the choice had already be narrowed from nine options to three (the three were not listed) and that the public has not been included or informed about this.

"I want to know that our comments will be valued and accepted," said Sullivan who added he wants a level playing field on all alternatives, regardless of cost.

Coastal Coalition member Ilana Marks of Scituate shared this concern and said that the boat and feeder bus option, a preferred alternative for the anti-train group has not been given enough consideration.

"The boat has not been explored in the same way that the train has been. The boat is not getting equal time," she said.

But Connor maintained that all options have been looked at carefully and that there has been no decision regarding Greenbush. Connor suggested a time table in which the MBTA will release the final Environmental Impact Report later this month and following a 60-day public comment period and two public hearings, the decision will be made in May.

CAC member William Grimes, the founder of the pro-train Back on Track movement said he was baffled by Sullivan's presentation.

"I don't understand his motivation at all," he said.

Grimes was also disappointed that the Coastal Coalition chose to use the CAC meeting to promote more "scare tactics."

The train is new and different and some people are afraid of the unknown, and some people play on their fears, said Grimes who wants the Coastal Coalition to "turn off the red hot rhetoric" and start working toward a common goal.

Grimes said he was encouraged by indications that Coastal Coalition founders Nancy Buckley and Randy Young, both Hingham residents, would jump ship and get on board to support the tunnel option if the MBTA decides the train is the way to go.

"We need to build a united front," said Grimes, adding "the idea that a group of disparate people can go to the state and say we'll all be happy with it (tunnel) would be good. It's always best when people can bury their differences and work together."

The $95 million tunnel supported by the CAC would eliminate five of 14 grade crossing planned for Hingham and would make the horn blowing issue, which is of particular concern to abutters, moot.

The tunnel will also satisfy Hingham Historical Commission Chairman Alexander Macmillan who has been charged with protecting the town's historic assets. The nationally registered Lincoln Historic District lies in the train's right of way and federal law protects this resource from any transportation project that could adversely impact it. Macmillan said the short tunnel option is the only one that is both prudent and feasible.

Feasible and prudent or not, Governor William W[illegible] indicated last week that State Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes would not favor a multi-million dollar tunnel and will likely push for restoration without it, due to the added expense.

Kerasiotes has stated on record that he is committed to building the Greenbush branch of Old Colony Line but the tunnel looks like an expensive option, said transportation office spokesperson Jodi D'urso.

The CAC will meet again on Thursday, Feb. 16 at Weymouth Town Hall to finish going over the SDEIR and make their final comments on the report.

Winter of '95 makes its debut

"Cars travelling on the roads when they should've been in the house."

Sgt. Richard Abbadessa said the police department was "inundated" with calls from residents when electric power was lost for a little more than an hour late Saturday afternoon.

People feared a repeat of the long power outage over the Christmas weekend in December.

Abbadessa said that Boston Edison crews "were right at it."

"They responded promptly this time."

The power failures were caused by a blown transformer on Ripley Road and by heavy snow and fallen tree branches on utility wires.

He added that police responded to many private security alarms that went off due to the power outages.

Police reported "a couple minor incidents" of kids throwing snowballs at cars.

At approximately 10 p.m., police arrested a Marshfield man, and charged him with malicious damage to a motor vehicle and larceny from a motor vehicle.

Abbadessa said Alan McDavid, 20, was stopped by Scituate police, assisting Cohasset officers, following an altercation near the Cohasset Knoll nursing home on Route 3A. McDavid allegedly punctured the tires of a motor vehicle and ripped the upholstery in response to a snowball-throwing incident that started in Marshfield.

Preliminary local aid

State Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Plymouth/Norfolk) announced that Governor William Weld's recently released Fiscal Year 1996 budget proposal allocates approximately $1.05 million in local aid for the town of Cohasset, and a total of nearly $40 million for the entire district. These figures represent the most amount ever proposed in local aid.

The local aid funding level includes Chapter 70 funds as proposed through the Education Reform Act of 1993; General Aid funds; MWRA funds; and Lottery Distribution funds. General Aid funding remained level as most other accounts saw significant increases.

Hedlund acknowledged the commitment of the Administration to adhere to the funding schedule outlined in the Ed Reform Act.

"Although the funding mechanism of the Ed Reform Act seemed difficult to implement, I am pleased to see that Governor Weld has remained loyal to his commitment," Hedlund said.

The major increase in the local aid proposal is due to the five-year plan by the Legislature to lift the lottery fund cap on proceeds being returned to cities and towns. The Commonwealth, as a whole, will realize a $55 million increase in lottery aid. Cohasset's share has increased by $48,924 over the Fiscal Year 1995 figures.

"The local aid commitment to cities and towns would not be possible without the lifting of the lottery cap. Local aid stability is crucial to a town's fiscal planning," Hedlund said.

The proposed budget also includes provisions for local aid relief for the MWRA communities. The $35 million account will provide an extra $8 million for ratepayers over the Fiscal Year 1995 budget figures.

The Fiscal Year 1996 Budget proposed by Governor Weld must be debated by both the House of Representatives and the Senate, and will take effect July 1.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

AVOID FINANCIAL HEADACHES

QUESTION: I have a good "gift of gab" selling plumbing and building supplies. What more do I need to sell my own home?

ANSWER: It takes a lot more than a "gift of gab" to sell a home properly today. It's a big financial undertaking and takes a lot of specialized education and financial training to prepare one's self to do the job professionally.

Realtors know that many sales are lost strictly for want of proper financing. They also know the intricate methods and sources of financing. Your home is probably your most valuable asset. The best way to sell it is the professional way – through a Realtor.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold auditions Saturday for the musical "Annie." It will be a youth production, with junior and senior high school students in the adult roles and the parts of Annie and the orphans will be played by youngsters who look no older than 12. There were supposed to be auditions last Saturday, but the storm must have interfered, so please call Dawn Rota at 545-3195 for info regarding auditions.

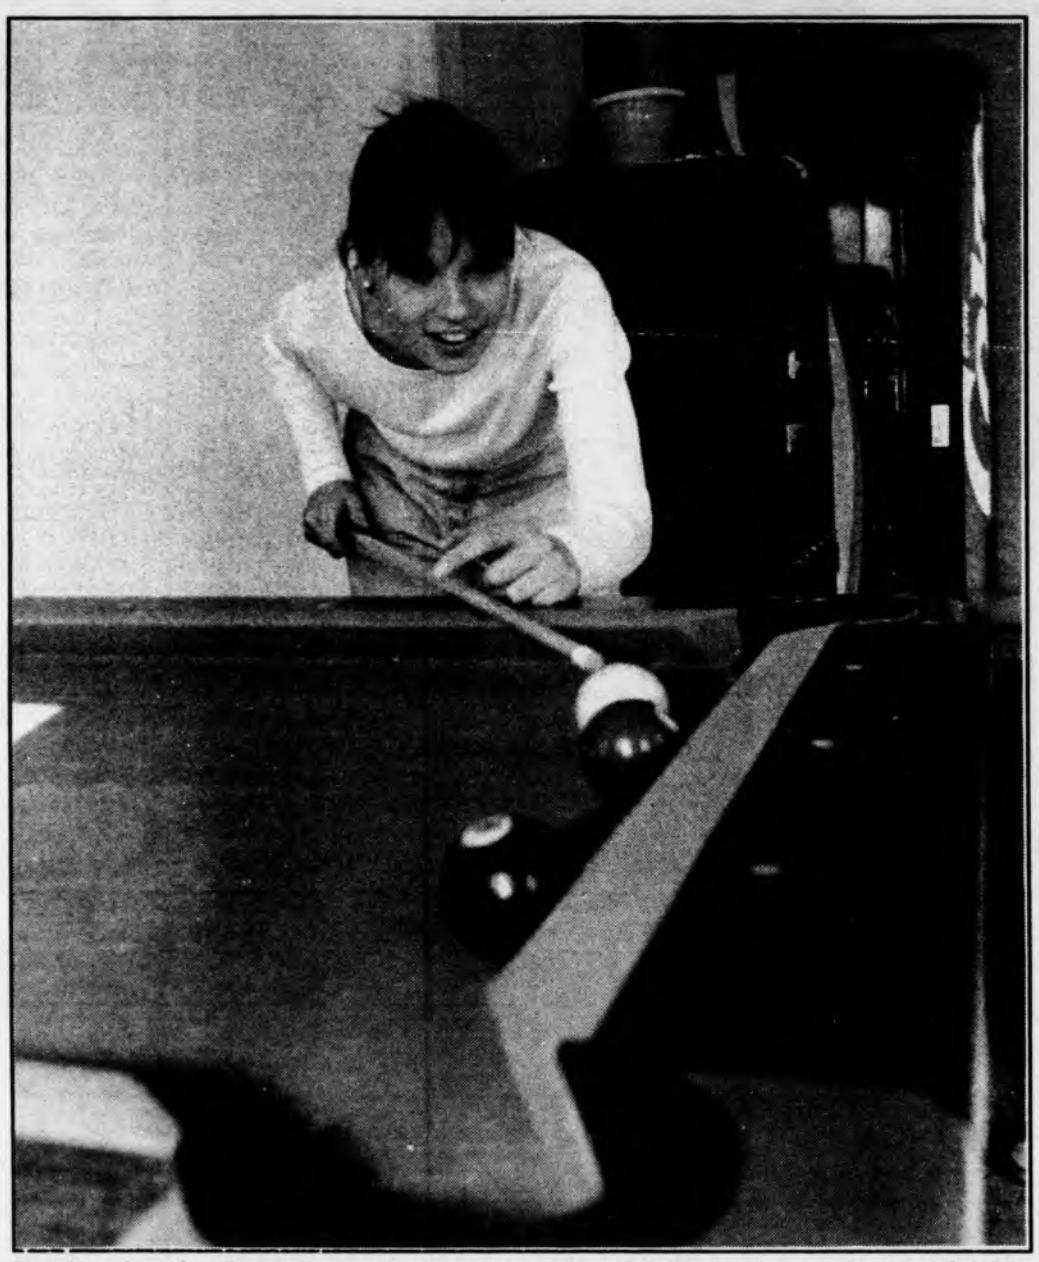
Hope you circled Wednesday (Feb. 15), that's the date for the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's meeting with Shaw's. The place is the Chart House, the time is 6:30 p.m. for coffee, 7:15 p.m. for the presentation. The general public, town officials and business owners are all invited to see and hear exactly what Shaw's has planned.



Don't miss the Teen Center's grand opening this Saturday, Feb. 11. The big day was postponed from last weekend due to the storm. But that didn't stop Amy Parisi, who gets ready to drop one in a corner pocket at the new Teen Center on South Main Street. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

Had a chat with Ricki last week, who you all know by now is my sister living in Hawaii — here's some food for thought from there! She says that many people there are sure that O.J.'s son did it! They are sure! How about that?

There are so many people that will miss Lennie O' Donnell! What a man he was, he helped countless people with their various problems, he was kind, gentle and so loving; the list of his attributes goes on and on. We will always remember him!

Ruth and Harry Goodwin certainly will be lonely after Wednesday, that's when their daughter, Ruthie, goes back home to California. She has been here for three weeks, and was happy to see many of her friends — we'll bet she will also be very happy to get back to warm California after this past weekend!

Everyone please take two minutes and say a prayer for Tim Myers and his mom and dad, Dottie and Tom, as well as his brother Steve — such a courageous family, and a wonderful one!

Last but not least, how about our gymnastic team and basketball team! As the kiddos say, they are awesome! Check the schedule, then plan on going to give your support; they will love you for it. And, you will love them.

Don't forget to call with your news, okay? Sallyann, 383-0560

The cost of the quilt show and luncheon is $8. Proceeds will benefit Children with AIDS. Quilts for these children will be made during the show, and guests will be invited to cut a square and participate in making the quilts.

If you have a quilt to display or fabric that could be used in making the AIDS quilts, please call the church at 383-0345.

Here's what's being said about Paula Meallo – who won the Top Broker of the Year Award at Hallmark 100

• She loves to help people.
• Paula's willing to sell in other areas; in fact, she'll drive to the ends of the earth with a client, even if it's out of her area.
• I've always noticed that Paula and her clients smile a lot. She makes house-hunting an adventure.
• I think she has been successful because she contributes to the community. Years ago she initiated a Charity Gift Wrap. All of the guests buy toys or clothing for needy children, and then we gather at Paula's to wrap them. She serves us goodies and then she and her husband Al go out and deliver the presents. I know she gets a lot of satisfaction out of that.
• She has something I'm going to call 'The spirit of influence.' It's hard to explain what this is. Somehow she knows what kind of a home her clients are going to love, a nd she doesn't waste their time, she gets right to it. She has such a pleasing way about her that the client totally accepts her judgment. A lot of us wonder how she does that.

– Karen Kirkendall

Hallmark 100 President Chris Ford says:

Paula Meallo was Hallmark 100's Broker of the Year for 1994 with over $6 million in sales. This was the highest single year performance in the history of Hallmark 100 by an individual sales associate.

Paula is an incredibly effective sales associate. She is very soft spoken and at the same time she listens very carefully and remains very tuned in to the wants and needs of her many clients and customers. Paula's secret is volume. She does not shy away from lower priced properties or working with rentals – and she gives the same level of attention to a prospective renter as she does to the prospective buyer of a $500,000 home.

Repeat business based on the recommendations of satisfied customers is the key to long-term success in real estate and for that reason I expect Paula will be among the leaders of our company for years to come.

Paula's clients like her, too:

• Paula Meallo has performed as relocation specialist assisting the Brockton Hospital Physician Recruit Center since the spring of 1989. Throughout this time she has responded to the requests of over 50 visiting physicians and their families. Always she is professional, thorough and provides well-researched information in a supportive and friendly manner.

– James M. Tzamos, Director, Physician Recruitment Center

• Mrs. Paula Meallo personally assisted me with both my professional and personal relocation from Los Angeles to the South Shore. She was extremely accommodating, providing countless hours of researching, driving, taxiing, and of course, showing...and accompanied my entire family on a house hunting trip which lasted EIGHT DAYS!

– Dr. Robert LoNigro, MD, Diplomate, American Board of Internal Medicine

• Paula's a very dynamic individual. along with being extremely knowledgeable in the real estate field.

– Brian R. Connolly, Director, Physician Relations

A difference of opinion

We learned this week that there's a move afoot by the anti-train group, the Coastal Coalition to remove Selectman Martha Gjesteby from the Citizens Advisory Committee, the group appointed by the state Secretary of Environmental Affairs to comment on the environmental feasibility study on transportation alternatives in the Greenbush corridor.

Coalition members also suggest that Mrs. Gjesteby can't be "pro-train" and be a Cohasset selectman.

Those who called us said they were seeking legal counsel for advice on how to file a class action suit against Mrs. Gjesteby, whom they claim is in conflict-of-interest because she continues to support restoration of the Greenbush Line despite the fact that special town meeting last fall narrowly advanced a non-binding resolution directing selectmen to "do everything in their power to stop" the train.

While the Coastal Coalition has the absolute right to do anything it wants within the law to try and derail Greenbush, we think its members are off base in targeting Mrs. Gjesteby whose opinion happens to differ from their own.

The Coastal Coalition, which is very concerned about noise and safety issues, may not realize it but we think they have a real advocate in Selectman Gjesteby. She may not stand up on a soap box to oppose the train but you can rest assured that if the train comes — she'll work hard to make sure Cohasset gets all the mitigation measures it needs.

And few Cohasseters are as well versed in transportation matters as Mrs. Gjesteby who has sat on a variety of regional transportation boards over the years including the original CAC on Greenbush back in 1986.

Having observed her conduct as a selectman, we find Mrs. Gjesteby to be a real stickler whether it's over a few dollars in a specific town budget or language in a contract that doesn't sound just right. Often times, she won't retreat from a point even when the other four selectmen don't agree.

We think that citizens on both sides of the train issue are well served with Mrs. Gjesteby on the CAC. She isn't afraid to speak out on any environmental issue that might negatively impact Cohasset.

The Coastal Coalition should back off and let the CAC and Mrs. Gjesteby do the important job of commenting on the EIR. Like the rest of the public at large, the Coalition will have its chance to comment once the report is released.

Citizen of Year selection is praised

To the Editor:

When your work is not glamorous or obvious it frequently is not apt to be recognized. However, the Cohasset Mariner did its homework when it selected Joe Buckley as the Cohasset Citizen of the Year.

Joe is one of those individuals who quietly performs services to his community on a regular basis and has over a long period of time without any recognition. His service is not limited to any one age group but rather is intergenerational in nature.

He is recognized as the expert on health benefit matters, a subject which covers the needs of people of all ages. Joe has a certificate in Gerontology, has served an internship in Washington, D.C. for a week and is called upon by legislators, H.M.O.'s and housing groups for advice. Many of his clients are children and grandchildren of our senior citizens. The town is indeed fortunate to have such a valuable person available on a daily basis.

Congratulations, Joe, on this prestigious award.

Lack of leadership alleged

To the Editor:

Despite the record numbers of voters at the October Town Meeting, and the clear directive of Article 1 instructing our selectmen to do whatever was within their power to stop the train, Martha Gjesteby will vote for the train. Mrs. Gjesteby is the only selectman who is a member of the Greenbush Citizens Advisory Committee. Her vote will more than likely be the only vote for the train from the three Cohasset members. She will cast this vote fully aware of the fact that the train would pass the Sohier St. intersection by the Osgood School at 57 mph. She also knows that 12 second bells would ring at 67 dBA at 50'. She knows about the horn mounted on the train blowing for a quarter of a mile before the intersection at 98 to 103 dBA at 100' to the side, or horns on a pole at 93 dBA at 50'. The gates are about 3' from the train allowing pedestrians to stand a great deal closer than the 50' and 100' distances used by the MBTA to determine decibel levels thus increasing the levels dramatically. Still she wants this for our town.

If you are as upset as I am about this lack of leadership as well as a lack of responsibility to the townspeople, please speak out. The media and the MBTA want you to think this is a done deal. It is not. As long as you stay quiet about this, they assume we want this train. Together we can stop this tragedy! Please write letters to our leaders, make phone calls to them, and talk to your neighbors. But do it now because time is running out.

Train's safety is a concern

To the Editor:

Am I alone in objecting to the Greenbush Line because of the safety factor? I was living in town back when the commuter trains were running. To tell the truth it was a relief when I no longer had to fear a collision with a train at the many grade crossings on the South Shore.

There was always the chance that the morning would be foggy, and I could not see well, or, I might be distracted by my child in the car and not notice, or, it could be snowing with visibility cut... I heard from a friend who moved from Scituate to Salt Lake City recently. She was shocked to learn of a neighborhood girl, just 16, who had the radio in her car turned on to loud music, and was struck by a train at a crossing! The girl was tossed out of the car, alive but injured, and the car was demolished.

Another safety factor to be addressed is that of fire or police responding to a fire or accident. Must the apparatus wait at the grade crossing for a train to pass before speeding up the hill to the 3A section or Beechwood section of town? Last week we heard of a 5-year-old boy who, if the fire apparatus had been able

Town gears up to present override option to voters

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Town officials gathered last week, hoping to find ways to reduce a projected $576,000 Proposition 2-1/2 override by at least $75,000. Officials have calculated an override will be necessary in order to cover routine operating expenses in fiscal 1996.

The town could also face override requests ranging from $188,000 in fiscal 1997 to $721,000 in fiscal 2000. According to financial projections prepared by Town accountant Michael Buckley, the overrides would cause the tax rate to rise to a nearly $20 per $1,000 of assessed value by fiscal 2000. The average homeowner would face a tax bill of $5,726.

Buckley's projections assume a steadily increasing debt level to pay for such major items as a new school building, a sewer expansion, a town garage for DPW vehicles and capping the landfill.

"It's kind of a depressing picture," advisory committee chairman Nan Roth told a joint meeting of the advisory committee, selectmen, personnel board, school committee member Nancy Sandell and school Superintendent Stephen Hart last Thursday night. "It leaves you stunned."

If voters will not approve the overrides, the town may have to move to a fee-for-service approach to keep the budget in balance.

Annual increases in operating expenses are set at three-to-four percent, according to Buckley. School expenses could rise even higher under the demands of the Education Reform Act.

Maintaining the present level of school services is estimated at 5.3 percent this year, Hart said. As the state adds additional requirements for expanded time spent on learning, core curriculum requirements and other educational services, the school system's operating costs will rise.

Cohasset may not qualify for any additional state aid to implement the new requirements, Hart added. The state has determined Cohasset spends more than the state-set minimum spending per pupil, but less than they deem a community of Cohasset's relative wealth could spend on education. As a result, the state sets a minimum mandatory level of new spending each year, leaving the town unable to make any significant reductions on the school-side of the budget.

In past years the town has used "free cash" — unexpended funds from previous years — to reduce the deficit. But the free cash reserves have been steadily eroded in recent years. Roth anticipates the town may have between $200,000 and $500,000 each year that will be eaten up by such anticipated and unexpected expenses as a new lawn mower, new truck and snow removal expenses.

Buckley estimates the cost of warrant article requests for the special and regular town meeting at $629,000, but only $470,821 remains in the town's free-cash account.

Selectman Jane Goedecke suggested many of the capital budget requests built into Buckley's assumptions may fall into the category of pie-in-the-sky.

"Remember, this is a projection of all the things that are in the hopper," Goedecke said. "Maybe some of them, like the school, will never happen."

Roth and Buckley anticipated the new school would be constructed in 1998, with bond payments starting in 1999 and with the state's 63 percent reimbursement beginning in fiscal 2000. They also included a sum for the James Brook sewer alternative, with work completed by the end of fiscal 1998 and bond payments beginning in fiscal 1999.

"Our debt service is going to be huge in future years," Roth said.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan decried the town's past habit of failing to settle contract negotiations in a timely fashion, forcing officials to raid the free-cash account to pay for retroactive raises.

Town officials agreed there is no way the town can avoid overrides in the next five years, the only debate is over the size and frequency.

The town can take one of two approaches Goedecke said. Voters can opt for small annual overrides "to keep us on an even keel" or pass large overrides periodically.

Cohasset has not had an operating budget override in the past two years. In fiscal 1993, voters approved an override of nearly $400,000. Prior to that they approved a $142,000 override in fiscal 1992, a $203,800 override in fiscal 1990 and a $659,911 override in fiscal 1989.

Roth said town officials and voters must either face the necessity of frequent overrides as the cost of maintaining the level of services Cohasset residents have grown to expect or face the fact things cannot stay the same.

The advisory board agreed to go back over the departmental budgets looking for areas to cut during the next two weeks. At the end of that period they will present two options: a budget with a $500,000 override attached to it and a zero-override budget.

"A zero-override budget would require some pretty draconian measures," advisory board member Michael Putziger warned. He painted a picture of a summer-season only harbormaster, widespread layoffs and elimination of town services.

"We have to cut something," Goedecke said. "We will go back and slash and burn. I think that's what we're going to have to do again."

Since much of the budget is in fixed costs for salaries, group insurance, pensions and utilities, town officials said the only area they can make any significant cuts in would be personnel. Cutting personnel automatically means cuts in services in a town government as small as Cohasset's, Roth said.

Sullivan suggested the group look at restructuring the way town government is organized. He suggested some savings could be found by merging several smaller departments into a unified public works department with a single director.

Selectman Peter Pratt also emphasized the need to look at regional solutions, fees and forcing the state to fully fund the mandates they impose on local communities.

"We have to throw out the concept that the tax rate pays for everything," Pratt told his colleagues. "Fees have an element of fairness. The conservation commission, planning board and building inspector could all pay for themselves."

The joint boards agreed to reconvene Feb. 15 with proposals for cuts. They will also contact the town's legislative delegation about long-range solutions.

Snow shovelling guidelines

A reminder that the following bylaw was voted in at the 1993 Annual Town Meeting. It reads as follows:

Section VII. No person shall cause or allow the discharge of water, snow or ice upon a public street, sidewalk or way in the town so as to create hazardous conditions.

Although many residents need to get to their jobs, doctors appointments or other necessary destinations, it is recommended that whenever possible residents should refrain from shoveling the last few feet at the end of their driveways until the roads have been completely plowed. This will save residents from repeated shoveling of the same area.

The highway department does not have the manpower to shovel out anyone's driveway that has been snowed in from snow coming off snowplows.

Residents are reminded not to shovel snow onto the Rail study has holes, reader says

To the Editor:

Having attended the CAC meeting Feb. 1 in Braintree, which met to review the latest Greenbush Environmental report from the MBTA, I must say that I left with a feeling of dread. While many issues came up, many did not. Rep. Joseph Sullivan of Braintree expressed frustration with the scheduled public hearings on this controversial issue, calling it nothing but "a joke."

Mr. Sullivan and Ilana Marks, a member of the Coastal Coalition in Scituate, forced Joseph Connors and members of Sverdrup, the engineering advisors, to, in effect, admit that the public is not going to get what it thinks it is during the upcoming hearings on the train. Marks and Sullivan concluded that there was indeed NOT a level playing field regarding Greenbush alternatives, which include bus and ferry options and that the MBTA had already made its mind up on a train solution. Gov. Weld's premature support of the train the previous Friday reinforced this, further undercutting the importance of the public hearing process, where strong anti-train comments are expected. Mr. Connors and others did not successfully challenge these assertions. This begs the question: Was there EVER a level playing field?

Train's safety

to respond sooner, might have been saved. Even two, three or five minutes can make the difference between life or death in an emergency.

And remember, the busy time for the commuter trains is exactly the time for the school busses to be criss-crossing town!

The evening commuter rush is another difficult time with setting sun, approaching darkness and everyone, kids and all, tired and hurrying home for supper.

Our town fathers have always worked to make Cohasset the best and safest of communities. Let's not jeopardize the future of our citizens with a disruption we can not easily undo.

Discussion about train/bell/horn noise at crossings grew heated until Randy Young of Hingham pointed out an important fact to committee members: that since federal regulations require bells/horns must sound 1/4 mile from a crossing, that we would experience nearly constant blowing through most of Cohasset and Hingham. There are 11 crossings in Cohasset and 14 in Hingham. Again, the MBTA and Sverdrup, waffled their response.

Nancy Buckley of Hingham noted that the Secy. Pena of the FTA was offering $7,500 to towns for every railroad crossing that was closed to improve safety. There are 43 such crossings on the proposed line.

There was much confusion, even among the experts present, about realistic decibel levels and safe thresholds.

The discussion then turned to feasibility. The MBTA maintains they can afford this train along with existing operations and other planned projects. I then challenged them to explain a newspaper article stating Greenbush's annual maintenance costs to exceed $30,000,000 when it was listed in the report at slightly over $9 million. Again, the MBTA and Sverdrup dodged the hard answer.

Surprisingly, no mention was made about the MBTA's current debt crisis, now projected to be $594,000,000 for FY 1996.

Two pro-train committee members awkwardly adjourned the meeting as questions from the audience became more aggressive. Clearly, a number of committee members were uncomfortable with the numerous unanswered questions about the train. Others were visibly confused about the report. This is understandable. After this much time, the public deserved a more convincing document. Concerned citizens poked several holes in the "final" draft. This does not bode well for the public hearings. The document is seriously flawed and does not stand up to even basic questions.

Burst pipe dampens programs but not spirit

Monday, the cold, frigid weather hit the South Shore Community Center, when a pipe burst in the building resulting in extensive water damage in the gymnasium, nursery school, and bowling alleys. Nursery school, gymnastic, aerobics, gym dandy, and bowling classes have all been cancelled at this time. However, plans are to resume classes Wednesday.

The community center praises the Cohasset fire department for its "roll up your sleeves and pitch in enthusiasm" and for its emergency assistance in shutting off the water and lending a hand with swabbing up the floors. Thanks also to Paul Barry of Barry Waste Services & Recycling Co.; Building Inspector Bob Egan; Arthur Fletcher, Ellen & Rip Donze, Arthur Pompeo, Susie O'Brien, Jan Porter, and the community center staff.

Any assistance with this unplanned financial crisis would be appreciated. Please call the center at 383-0088 if you can help.

Technology tops junior/senior high school wish list

By Alison B. Shyer
Mariner correspondent

Junior/Senior High School Principal Meg Gallagher, with some help from various faculty and advisory council members, scrutinized every consequential increase during two recent meetings that the school committee examined her budget.

In keeping with the move towards technology in the school system, computer-related purchases account for a large percentage of the junior/senior high budget. Almost every department requested new machines or upgrades of already existing ones.

Gallagher stressed her desire to remain on the cutting edge of technology, especially with regard to acquisition of information.

The library budget includes an allowance for a network modem. Gallagher expressed a desire to expand the school's on-line capabilities, eventually into the homes of students.

"Technology is so important, especially with regard to the library," she said. "I am so concerned that our kids, 90 percent of whom go on to college, have the same advantages as the kids from private schools."

School board member Jim Kirk urged the committee to consider investing in consulting services before implementing any network into the school system, insisting that is would be a good idea for the school to have a policy and a plan first.

The math department requested seven new computers and hopes to expand the lab to allow students more access. The existing lab is often occupied by classes, leaving little time for individual students to work.

Dave Magnussen, the head of the math and science departments at the high school, said that Cohasset is still a little behind schedule according to the standards set by National Council of Teachers of Mathematics (NCTM). Magnussen noted that there is a tremendous demand at the high school for the continued updating of the system. He also said that there are so many students excited about the math lab that his classes have grown from one to four.

When questioned about the necessity of having a CD-Rom for his classes, French teacher George Fortin said that the computer was just another tool for teaching. His proposed purchase would also include audio,and would be helpful to those kids who might not be as "language talented" as others.

"We have to keep them interested in any way possible," he added.

Librarian Susan McFadd requested funds for expanding the current laser disk system, which is interactive with the Macintosh system, but school board vice chairman Ralph Kidder questioned the wisdom of investing in a system that is, by all accounts, on its way to becoming obsolete.

McFadd insisted that the laser disks are an excellent educational tool for the library and said that their future in the private sector would not affect their educational worth. The library is still on the catalog system, but currently researching on-line programs.

New positions proposed for the high school total about $80,000 or 6.4 percent of its budget.

ADJUSTMENT COUNSELOR SOUGHT

For the fourth year in a row, the junior/senior school seeks to hire a full-time adjustment counselor.

Citing suicide, eating disorders, guns and date rape as among the problems facing todays youth, school council member Connie Afshar, stressed that the position, which would pay about $33,000, is an absolute necessity

"The advantage to having someone on-site is proximity," she said, and added that many people "were very surprised to hear that there isn't someone like that at the high school."

Although the high school has two full-time guidance counselors, it was pointed out that they are always busy.

School Committee chairman Nancy Sandell suggested a reevaluation of the existing services.

"I don't deny that there is a tremendous need," she said, but added that the committee should "look at the people we have in the system now and see if they can be used differently."

Two additional positions proposed for the 1995-96 budget are aides for the writing and the math labs, each with a salary of $14,000.

Full-time aides, according to Gallagher, as well as Magnussen, are enormously beneficial to the students, allowing them access to the lab all day, instead of intermittently. The aides would be familiar with the curriculum and could be used as "immediate referrals," she said.

Gallagher also hopes to hire an art intern, for a salary of $12,000.

After the presentation of the junior-senior high school budget last week, the school committee concluded its review of the individual schools' proposals and now must decide what to recommend to the town.

The committee is now faced with the task of deciding how to trim down the entire proposed school budget with its 8.2 percent increase to a number closer to the 4 percent suggested by the town.

The school principals and the superintendent are scheduled to meet to discuss incremental cuts from each school's budget and will present the results to the committee tonight (Feb. 9). Based on those reports, the committee will make its recommendation to the advisory board.

Drama workshop at DHS

Deer Hill School will be offering a Drama Workshop to interested students beginning in March, following a performance by Wheelock College's Story Troupe.

Members of Wheelock's staff and troupe will provide workshop training and will oversee the program.

Parents and student volunteers from the Junior High and High Schools are needed to help organize and oversee the project, which will take place on Thursday afternoons from approximately 1:50 to 3:30 p.m. The goal of the workshops will be story dramatizations based on multi-cultural literature being taught or discussed within the curriculum.

Parents and students who would like to volunteer are asked to call Diane Kinch (383-2940) or Deer Hill Reps Linda Bolster (383-6140) or Helene Garber (383-0119).

Creative Arts Expo

The sixth grade students at Deer Hill are busy working on a cooperative learning, interdisciplinary project, combining creative writing and graphic arts. The students have formed greeting card companies within their homeroom classes. Each company has selected a specific theme and is producing a unique line of cards to fit within that theme. One company is making a special line of cards specifically for pet owners. Others are focusing on environmental, futuristic, nature or underwater themes just to name a few. There are 20 companies in all, each with their own individual specialities.

The students are designing and printing card covers in art class with Mrs. Ann Berman, and are writing the poetic verses for their cards in English class with Mrs. Joann Magoun and Mrs. Betty Cisneros.

Feb. 14, the students will hold their Creative Arts Expo at Deer Hill. Each company will set up promotional booths displaying its products for parents and other students. Participants will also perform commercials which they have written for their company.

Valentine Cabaret, art sale

Cohasset High School is having a Valentine Cabaret and Student Art Sale at Kimball's by the Sea on Wednesday, Feb. 15, beginning at 6 p.m. The evening will feature instrumentalists, vocalists and artists and a light buffet supper and art sale. A Cabaret Show will be presented from 7:30 to 9:00 p.m.

Tickets are $12.50 per person. Reservations may be made by February 10 by sending a check, payable to Cohasset Arts Boosters Club, to Olga Nohe, 21 Whitney Woods, Cohasset 02025. Seating is limited.

Proceeds will benefit CHS music and art curriculum enrichment.

Scots-Irish assembly at DH

At a recent assembly at Deer Hill School, students enjoyed a "Scots-Irish Story and Song" program, presented by Jerry and Nancy Bell. The bells are traveling minstrels who share magical stories, traditional costumes and ancient instruments of their homeland.

The audience experienced Scotland and Ireland as mystical places, full of mountains, monsters and music. The program was sponsored by the Cohasset PSO.

Junior High coffee set

The second in a series of "Coffee with the Principal" will be held on Feb. 10 at 9 a.m. in the audio/visual room of the Junior High School. The purpose of the series is to provide an opportunity for an informational exchange of ideas. All are welcome to attend.

The coffees are sponsored by the PSO in hopes of fostering good communication between parents and the school.

Social Studies review

Any Junior or Senior High School parent interested in participating in a review of the Social Studies curriculum is invited to do so on Feb. 8 at 7:30 a.m. in the audio/visual room at the High School.

Parental input is sought to evaluate the present program and to make changes for future studies. If interested in attending the meeting, please call Karla Watts at 383-0371, Jackie Dinsmore at 383-6816 or the high school at 383-6100.

College program offered

A program explaining the many aspects of college admissions will be offered by Leslie Goldberg, an independent educational consultant from Hingham, on Tuesday, Feb. 28, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. in the Whiton Room of the Hingham Public Library. (Snowdate: Thursday, March 2).

Call 749-2074 for further information about this free program, which is open to the public. Refreshments will be served.

Goldberg has an M.Ed. in guidance and counseling and has been involved in the field of education for over 20 years, with a private practice for nearly eight years.

'Annie' auditions at CDC

Because of last weekend's storm, The Cohasset Dramatic Club has moved auditions for adult roles (Junior High through college) for the classic musical "Annie" to Wednesday, Feb. 8 at 6:30 p.m. and Friday, Feb. 10 at 6 p.m. Vocal auditions will be a cappella (1 minute). Music and choreography rehearsals will begin the week of Feb. 12, with script rehearsals beginning the week of March 5.

Auditions for Annie and the Orphans (for children who look no older than 12 years of age) will be held on Saturday, Feb. 11 at 1 p.m. for ages 7-10 and at 2:15 p.m. for ages 10 and up. Vocal auditions will be a cappella (1 minute). Music and choreography rehearsals will begin the week of Feb. 26, with script rehearsals beginning in March.

Auditions will be held at the St. Francis Cabrini Parish House, Hood Rd., Scituate.

The show, which will be presented in May, will be cast entirely from the junior members of the club. The show, under the direction of Kerry Tondorf and the musical direction of Karen Ginsburg, will be choreographed by Bonnie Duval and produced by Dawn Rota and Anita Aherne.

Super Subs sets a record

The San Francisco 49'ers were not alone in setting a new Super Bowl record on Jan. 29. This year the Appalachia Service Project's Super Sub Sale fundraiser for the group's 1995 home repair project was an unprecedented success. Sales and profits were up 67 percent from last year.

Volunteers sold, made and delivered 185 subs, 90 Greek salads and 58 pints of chili — a total of 333 orders (a substantial increase over last year's 200 orders). Greek salad orders increased 131 percent over last year's requests for them.

Ami Argus organized and supervised the 54 teens and 20 adults who worked for two days preparing, assembling and distributing the subs, salads and chili.

ASP thanks all the workers, purchasers and local businesses (Victoria's, Star Market and Stop and Shop) who contributed to the fundraiser's success by volunteering their time and by donating items for the sale.

SSAC hosts Tablescapes

Tablescapes VI, an original presentation of over 20 table settings designed around a particular artist or artistic period, continues at the South Shore Art Center through Sunday, Feb. 12.

Participants include artists, interior designers, decorators and local businesses. Tablescapes is a celebration of art and how to incorporate it into your own home.

A special tribute to brides-to-be includes a special wedding cake, antique bridal gowns and dolls from the Cohasset Historical Society and a lecture series including talks on linens, faux finishing, portraits, china and garden design.

A Champagne Reception, catered by Two by Two of Norwell, will be held on Friday, Feb. 10, from 6 to 8 p.m. Tickets are $15.

General admission tickets are $10 at the door, $8 in advance. The hours of the exhibit are Feb. 9 and 11 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Feb. 10 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Feb. 12 from noon to 4 p.m. For further information call (617) 383-ARTS.

Valentine breakfast, Feb. 11

The Cohasset Enrichment Program is sponsoring a Valentine's Day Pancake Breakfast on Saturday, Feb. 11, from 9 a.m. to noon at the Deer Hill School on Sohier St. The cost is $3 per person or $9 per family for pancakes, juice, coffee and fruit.

The Enrichment Program will be performing a short comedy. Reservations may be made by calling 383-6860.

The PSO's Annual Silent Auction is March 3 from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Chart House.

This year many local businesses have generously donated items and services ranging from a weekend at the Boston Harbor Hotel to classic Ray Ban sunglasses.

Along with the auction, Susan Tedeschi's Blues Band will play. As featured in the Boston Sunday Magazine, Susan's band was the 1994 winner of New England's premier blues competition, the Harper's Ferry Battle of the Blues Band. She also took the silver medal at the annual National Blues Competition in Memphis, Tennessee. Susan and her band have become one of New England's favorite blues acts.

Tickets are $20 and cover admission, light hors d'oeuvres, finger desserts and gratuity. Valet parking will be limited, so please consider car pooling. Please come for an evening of auction bidding and music.

For information call Kate Abbruggese, 383-9317, Ed Connolly, 383-1248, and Ellen Sanchez, 383-6911.

Alzheimer's support group

The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore will host a discussion on resources for respite care for Alzheimer's patients on Wednesday, Feb. 22, at 7:30 p.m. in Thaxter Community Hall, 30 Thaxter St., Hingham.

Options for nursing home care in case of emergency or illness of the caregiver will also be suggested. Several representatives from Welch Healthcare will present a program on services offered at the new Harbor House Nursing and Rehabilitation Center of Hingham, which includes a 19-bed Alzheimer's unit, as well as other area nursing homes.

The meeting is free and open to the public. For information on local support meetings and services call 749-5417.

The Hearing Center

Have You Heard?

by Nancy Allonen-Allie, M.S., CCC-A
Licensed-Certified Audiologist

MATTERS OF FREQUENCY

A pure-tone hearing test involves subjecting the ears to a series of pure tones at various frequencies, as well as at varying levels of loudness. While we all know that loudness is a measurement of sound's force, many of us are not quite clear as to what exactly frequency is. To begin with, the frequency of a sound wave is measured in terms of units called "hertz." Slow-traveling sound displays a low number of cycles per second (hertz) and a low tone. Fast-moving sound is characterized by a higher frequency and produces a higher tone. The human ear detects frequencies ranging from about 20 hertz to about 20,000 hertz, and is most sensitive to sounds in the 4000 hertz range. Loud noise usually causes damage at about this frequency before it impairs hearing at other frequencies.

If you or a loved one have been experiencing difficulty hearing, please contact us at THE HEARING CENTER. We will be happy to show you the latest technology available today. Because hearing impairments vary greatly between individuals, we carry a variety of brands so that you can decide which one gives you the best results. We offer free hearing aid cleaning and maintenance. Please call us at 1-800-339-9316. Our offices are conveniently located at 62 Derby Street, Hingham, MA 02043, Tel: 617-740-7292. Mastercard and Visa are accepted. We are a healthcare provider for Pilgrim Health Care and Medicare. Medicaid and most major insurance plans are accepted and we will help you process the forms.

P.S. For most people, speaking frequency falls in the 500-to-2000 hertz range.

Wrestlers reach 10 wins in 'rebuilding season'

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

All season long he said it. Again and again. If his young squad of wrestlers finished with a .500 record he would be ecstatic. After all, Cohasset wrestling coach Torin Sweeney was working on rebuilding a team that had won at least 10 meets the three previous years. It was a job that doesn't take over night to accomplish.

But after defeating Hanover on Feb. 1, and taking all three wins during last Saturday's quad meet at Cohasset High School, the Skippers had their 10 wins (10-6).

Sweeney, who grew more and more excited by the prospects of the Skippers' future after every win could no longer call it a rebuilding season.

"I think reloading is the word I'd use," Sweeney said with a laugh. "I'm just enjoying it. There's no question tough (the eighth-graders) are going to be. They love to compete and they wrestle tough.

"When it's time to wrestle they put on their game faces."

The best go-to man among the eighth-graders was 119-pounder Bob Morgan. He scored a big pin in Cohasset's 45-29 win over Rockland and has won been victorious in all his league matches, sending his opponent to the mat six times.

"In all the matches we needed him to win," Sweeney said, "he came up with big ones."

Cohasset said one reason why the younger wrestlers were able to hold their own this season was the "trickle down effect" from the upperclassmen. The eighth- and ninth-graders were able to learn a lot about the sport from the more experienced grapplers, as well as Sweeney.

Ninth-grader Tucker Gledhill (103) should draw a high seed in Saturday's Division 3 South Sectionals. All Gledhill did was put together a 15-6 record and win two of his matches on Saturday.

Sophomore Justin Buckley (160) is probably the hottest wrestler on the team. Buckley has improved his record to 11-10 by pinning his last six opponents.

Kevin Duffy has been one of the most consistent wrestler on the Cohasset roster. Wrestling at 125 pounds, Duffy quietly ran up a 12-2 record in dual meet competition, complete with seven pins. Add the tourney matches and Duffy's record was a cool 17-5. Duffy also showed his versatility when Sweeney bumped him up to 130 pounds against Rockland and proceeded to win that and his other two matches.

Justin Golden, an eighth-grader, recorded four wins wrestling in the 135- and 145-pound divisions.

John Whitehouse scored a big win over his Middleboro opponent and has improved with every meet in the 135-140 pound class.

The team's most proven wrestler, Ryan Freeman (130), is capping off his senior year in fine fashion. Of Freeman's 23 wins, 20 were by pin. He lost just two matches all season and will be a strong favorite heading into the Division 3 South Sectionals.

Eighth-grader Greg Boynes has done the job filling in on varsity when Sweeney needed his services. Another eighth-grader, Jordan Fiore (145), whose older brother Nate was an All-Scholastic at Cohasset, won his first meet of the year against Holbrook.

Sweeney was particularly impressed with the Fiore battled in his matches. And although he had only one win, Fiore was a valuable asset to the Skippers.

"Even though he hasn't had as many wins he has fought off a lot of pins and helped the team's points," Sweeney said.

Dan Silva (152) has been bothered by a sore shoulder for much of the season, but still recorded 10 wins in what Sweeney calls a very tough weight class.

Luke Caldwell (171) is the winningest eighth-grader with seven wins, an impressive number for a novice. Darrell Jones (189) has played a part in the Skippers' wins and heavyweight Larry Adams won two of his Saturday matches to bring his record to 9-6.

The friendly 'Chief'

Hingham's Ryan Kane is all smiles as he meets with former Boston Bruin great, John Bucyk, at Pastimes sports cards. The hall of famer is just one of several sports personalities invited by owner Elliot Goldberg to sign autographs at his popular Route 3A store.

Gymnasts score tired victory over Duxbury

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

It was bound to happen sooner or later this season, what with juggling school work, practices and still trying to get a solid eight hours of shut-eye a night.

Don't panic. The Cohasset High girls gymnastics team's perfect record is still intact (12-0). But the South Shore League champions were obviously fatigued and not at full strength on February 1, when they yawned their way past Duxbury, 120.9 — 111.9.

It's certainly a sign things are going well when a team isn't up to snuff, but still manages to maintain the type of score Cohasset hit in downing the Green Dragons.

"We were probably due for hitting a meet that wasn't our best," said Cohasset head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni. "They're still performing well. We had a problem with the bars. In the other events we seemed to do all right. I think they were just tired.

"Almost scoring a 121 is still decent."

The Skippers had several average performances, but their scores were still good enough for many of them to break into the top three.

Tara Hettstrom was the big winner for Cohasset. Hettstrom won the all-around (30.4), vault and floor. She also took third on the bars.

Captain Tafana Fiore scored a fine 8.0 to win the balance beam while Erica Hettstrom finished second to her younger sister in the all-around. The older Hettstrom, who currently has the flu and is questionable for Thursday night's league meet at Carver (6:30 p.m.), was the runner-up on the floor and earned two third-place finishes on the beam and vault, despite competing with a fever.

Jodi Colwill picked up seconds-place showings on the beam and vault events.

The Beanpot has some local angles that will make this year's final Boston Garden tourney even more special for South Shore hockey fans.

Boston College, the defending champions, have Hingham's Rob Canavan and Kingston's Toby Harris on their roster and both should see a lot of ice for the Eagles.

Canavan, a senior at BC, played high school hockey at Hingham High while Harris, a sophomore, did the private school route after skating briefly for Silver Lake.

Canavan set all kinds of scoring record while skating for Garrett Reagan at Hingham but graduated in '91, the year before the Harbormen claimed the Division II state title.

Over at Northeastern, defenseman Rich Schuhwerk will be a key player as the underdog Huskies look to capture the final Beanpot at the Boston Garden.

Schuhwerk also played his high school hockey at Hingham High and was instrumental in leading the Harbormen to the Division II state title in '92.

In the state championship game, also played at the Boston Garden, Schuhwerk barely came off the ice as Hingham beat St. John's of Shrewsbury by a 2-1 final.

He also played soccer for Hingham High and once showed his toughness by playing with a broken nose the game after suffering the injury.

Another local connection is Boston University goalie and Hanover resident Tom Noble.

Only a freshman, Noble has seen a lot of ice for BU and could be a key player for the favorite Terriers.

Noble is one of the best high school goalies this state has produced (a close second to Pittsburgh Penguin Tom Barrasso) and led Catholic Memorial to several Super Eight titles.

The opening round games will be played on Monday Feb. 6 with Northeastern playing BU in the first with Harvard facing BC in the second.

The two winning teams will square off Monday Feb. 13 for the coveted Beanpot.

Just about everyone thinks Boston University has a cake walk to the title but anything can happen in the tourney. Just ask BC who beat Harvard in OT last year on a 45-foot dump-in wrist shot.

All night long, the Harvard goalie made big stop after big stop but was beaten on a floater taken from just inside the blue line.

Time to break up the Skippers.

Cohasset cruised to the South Shore League boys' basketball crown last week after easily beating second place Scituate and Abington.

Scituate, the only SSL with a hope of upsetting Cohasset in the regular season, was taken out of its game by the big front line and outside shooting of the Skippers and never threatened.

Barring an early round upset, the Skippers look to be a huge favorite in the Division 3 state tourney.

As for Scituate, the Sailors need both

Hoopsters celebrate night with easy victory

Cohasset's "Senior Night" started off with a bang and finished in the same manner. The team started off the evening by presenting the varsity cheerleaders and the players' parents with flowers.

But the main event of the evening was the dispatching of Hanover by a score of 67-50 as the senior Skippers played their final game in the "SkipperDome." Hanover was led by Jon Peacock and Adam Magoun, with nine and eight points, respectively.

Cohasset's Matt Pierce started off the game with a jumper that put CHS on the board, and Pete Bishop followed with a drive to the hole. Senior guard Thomas Allen slashed his way to the bucket for a pair, giving Cohasset a 6-5 lead. Pierce and Jared Hardwick each knocked down pull-up jumpers. Dorian Bryant's fade-away and Hardwick's bucket pulled the Skippers to within one after a Hanover run. Joe Slotnick and Hardwick combined for two offensive putbacks.

Jim Magner's outlet pass to Jerome Marion was passed back to Hardwick, who was fouled and hit a free throw. Marion forced a jump ball, and Pete Bishop followed up on it with a layup and then two free throws, Magner drained a trey to give Cohasset a 28-21 lead at halftime.

Pete Bishop (Cohasset's leading scorer with 13 points) started the second half with a layup and free throw. He then stole the inbounds pass and dished to Pierce, who swished the layup. Pierce then drained a trey and hit a charity shot to give Cohasset a 37-26 lead. Bishop nailed a 12-foot jumper.

Jeremiah Stevenson bounced it in to Bryant, whose power move to the hoop netted him two points. Slotnick's pull-up jumper earned him another two points. Hardwick nailed two free throws, making the score 46-32, in Cohasset's favor.

Ryan Bishop's two beautiful passes set up Slotnick for buckets on consecutive possessions. Hardwick's putback after a miss was good for two, as were Slotnick's layup and Magner's free throws. Stevenson nailed a free throw as well, and Ryan Bishop put away two more.

Marion's quick hands grabbed a steal and he laid it in despite heavy defensive pressure by Hanover. Dave Nothnagle iced the game for the Skippers by knocking down two free throws.

Slow start can't stop Skippers

The Skippers hosted the Abington Green Wave Friday night and walloped them handily, 68-52. Cohasset got off to a slow start but showed why they are league champions by shutting Abington down in the second half.

The Green Wave jumped out to a 5-0 lead, but Cohasset's Joe Slotnick nailed a free throw to put the Skippers on the board. Ryan Bishop's layup after an Abington three-pointer made the score 8-3. Slotnick hit a jumper and Tom Allen's steal and fast break layup made the score 8-7. Slotnick's jumper and free throw tied the score at 10. Dorian Bryant and Pete Bishop each hit a layup, and Ryan Bishop hit a free throw. Pete Bishop banked two layups, and Jim Magner hit one of his own. Slotnick's steal and layup tied the game at 23.

Jared Hardwick's offensive rebound and putback with a minute left, and Magner's trey and layup gave Cohasset a 28-23 lead at the half. Allen's three-pointer started the half for Cohasset. Bryant took a charge that set up an Allen layup. Pete Bishop sank a free throw, and Bryant's offensive putback gave CHS a 36-25 lead. Pierce broke away, laid it in, got fouled, and sank the foul shot to complete the three-point play.

Pierce's steal and save went to Bryant, who hit the uncontested layup. Slotnick's tip-in gave CHS a 20-point lead. He hit a jumper from behind the backboard and a free throw. Pete Bishop laid it in off the glass to give the Skippers a 50-31 lead. Bishop hit a layup and Allen and Slotnick each blocked Green Wave shots.

Allen's coast-to-coast drive and acrobatic moves netted him a pair, and Pete Bishop's layup put Cohasset back by 12 after a short Abington run. Allen pickpocketed Abington's dribbler and broke away for an easy layup. Bryant sank a pair of free throws and Slotnick drove to the hole for two. Slotnick's dish to Allen set up the layup for Cohasset's point guard. Andy Fitzsimmons' free throw and Hardwick's layup iced the victory for the Skippers.

Cohasset's next game will be against Hull Friday at Hull High School.

Pierce's work ethic impresses Ford

If there is a definition for "coach's ballplayer", Matt Pierce's photograph would surely be beside it.

"Matt is a kid who works very hard on his game," said Ford. "He worked harder than anybody in the offseason this year. He constantly has a basketball in his hand. He's a gym rat. He's the kid who's trying to break into the gym. He's always there. Matt's work ethic reminds me of Chris Mullin's. The kid can't get enough basketball. That's just the way Matt is. For him to be in a slump this year was disappointing, but tonight we saw him break out of it." (Pierce "pulled out of it" with a stellar, 15-point performance last week against East Bridgewater.)

"If Matt Pierce is playing the same type of games down the stretch as he is now, we're gonna be a very tough team to beat."

Pierce's sixth-man role last year helped lead the Skippers deep into the tournament, and this year appears no different as Pierce and his teammates are off to a 12-0 league start.

But Matt himself doesn't appear too impressed with his accomplishments. When asked about his performance against EB, his reply reflected more on the team than himself.

"Every game somebody has to step up and tonight, I guess it was me. The team as a whole played pretty poorly and I just happened to have a good game.

"I played pretty well at the beginning of the season and then I started to get into a slump. Now, I think I'm starting to come out of it."

Lest you think that he has no time for anything but basketball, you'll find Matt Pierce's name on the honor roll. The work ethic he displays in the gym goes for the classroom as well.

In response to a question about his work ethic, Pierce replied:

"I lifted weights all summer and I've worked hard to get where I am."

Chances are, the next time you go to Sullivan Gym at Cohasset High, you'll have the opportunity to watch Matt Pierce perfect his game.

Road Race by the Sea set for April 2

The 19th Annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea will be run Sunday, April 2, beginning at 1 p.m., at Cohasset Village, Cohasset. Check-in times at the Cohasset Community Center are Saturday, April 1 and Sunday, April 2, 9 a.m. to noon.

Registration fee up until March 28 is $10; March 28 and after, $12.

To get an application: Send a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Cohasset Road Race by the Sea, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025. Send completed application with payment to the above address, also.

For race questions, call Austy Lyne at (617) 383-6550.

their big scorers, Chris Brown and Seamus Reedy in the lineup and playing to their capability to go far in the state tourney.

If Brown and Reedy can combine for 40 points, the Sailors have a shot at beating anyone, including Cohasset.

But so far in their two meetings, the Sailors were not able to get the job done against the Skips. If the two teams meet again in the tourney, look out for Brown to have a monster game. But more than Brown will be needed for a win.

Just when you thought it was safe to break out the running shorts, Mother Nature dumped 49 inches of snow over the weekend.

The snowfall cancelled high school hockey games, gymnastics matches and even the track state relays. So much for Groundhog Day with Phil not seeing his shadow.

On the positive side, the snow provided much needed powder for New England ski slopes.

(A couple weeks ago a friend of mine went skiing somewhere in New Hampshire and ended up cross-country skiing for about 20 minutes and hitting the bar for the rest of the time.)

Anyway, the following are a few things you should remember when the snow hits.

1) Skating and sledding are always fun but remember, safety first.

Nothing ruins a day like falling through the ice of a nearly-frozen pond or whacking your coconut off a tree while flying down the hill on "Rosebud."

2) Driving in the snow is still not an Olympic event.

Sure it's cool to doughnut around a side street or race around the mall parking lot but car brakes don't work as well on ice and accidents will happen. Try explaining to an insurance agent about how you wiped out four mailboxes and a stop sign while driving to the store to buy a quart of milk.

3) Snowballs are fun to throw but always seem to find glass windows.

When you make a snowball, don't squeeze the white stuff until it turns into an Arctic Ice Ball.

Make a nice fluffy snowball and gently lob it at your target. Remember, it is more fun to hit than to break.

4) Use your lower body whenever you shovel snow or you could throw out your back.

Robert Parrish had to miss some Celtics games a few years ago after straining his back while clearing his walkway.

His technique was off and bam, twist and shout for the Chief.

Better yet instead of shovelling, hire a plow guy. It may run you $20 but it sure beats a back brace.

5) Finally, knowing New England weather, expect 80 degree temperatures by the time this column goes to press.

If that is the case, remember, sunscreen is your friend.

While most all high school events were cancelled on Saturday, the wrestling quad meet between Cohasset, Holbrook, Rockland and Middleboro was held at Cohasset High School.

The three teams slipped and skidded their way to the home of the Skippers. The day turned out to be a huge success for Cohasset as Torin Sweeney's squad, defeated Holbrook and Rockland, both nicknamed the Bulldogs.

After traversing Route 3A through blizzard conditions, getting thrown to the mat and squeezed into a full-nelson actually sounds pretty tame.

Scituate High's hockey team is having a banner season, but it's still no real surprise that Jim Sylvia's Hanover High squad has its ninth consecutive South Shore League title locked up.

Sporting the best first line in the league with Rick Elrick, Charlie Bean and Scott MacDonald, the Indians were able to withstand the pressure dealt them by the entire league. Hanover's lone loss in the SSL was dealt to them by the Sailors.

And as good a goaltender as Ron Sullivan was during the season, my choice as the SSL's best netminder goes to Hull's Mike Hendrickson.

The Pirates' sophomore goalie has been outstanding for Hull as the team is still battling for a tourney berth.

Arrest following B&E/MV

Police arrested a 19-year-old Marshfield man following a breaking and entering of a from a motor vehicle at Cohasset Knoll at about 9:30 p.m., Saturday (Feb. 4).

Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said Alan McDavid, 105 Castlegreen Apts., Marshfield, fled in his motor vehicle and was subsequently stopped by Scituate police who brought him back to the scene. Police charged McDavid with malicious destruction of property over $250 for slashing all the tires and front seat of a vehicle parked at the Knoll. Jackson said police recovered sunglasses and casette tapes and charged McDavid with larceny under $25. He was arraigned on the charges in Quincy District Court, Monday (Feb. 6).

Bullet proof vests coming

Cohasset police are being fitted for bullet proof vests, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

Noonan said all police officers in the department will have a vest at a total cost of about $6,600, which will be covered a state grant.

January status report

In his status report to selectmen, Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said the first month of 1995 was "fairly quiet." There were a total of six arrests, two for Operating Under the Influence of alcohol, and four were made on outstanding warrants. There were also three breaking and enterings reported during the month, one at a business and two at residences.

Noonan also noted increases in productivity at the police department in 1994. He said motor vehicle accident investigations were up 20 percent, traffic citations and parking violations issued were up 33 percent. Complaints received and investigated were up 28 percent, court fines and assessments received by the department were up 97 percent and monies received for the filling of false alarms was up 42 percent over 1993 levels.

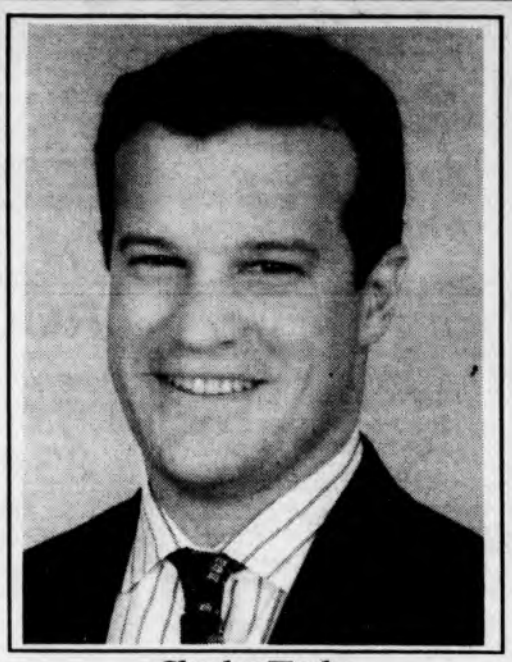
business notes

Chartis Langmaid of Cohasset has successfully completed Course 302 of the 1995 REALTOR Institute of Massachusetts. Upon completion of six 15-hour courses, Institute participants receive the nationally recognized designation "GRI" (Graduate, REALTOR Institute).

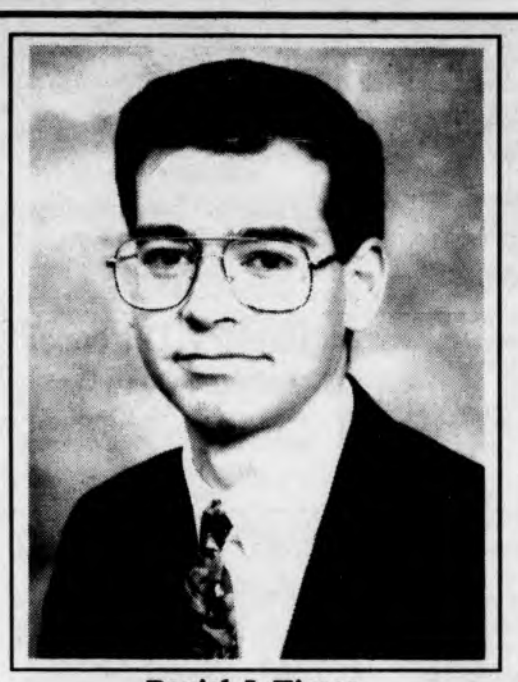
Langmaid is associated with Hunneman & Company/Coldwell Banker in Cohasset.

Charles Weeks, a Cohasset resident, has been appointed Reed & Barton sales representative in the Pennsylvania territory. He comes to the company from Merrill Lynch, where he had been a financial consultant since 1992.

Weeks is a cum laude graduate of Harvard University where he earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in history.



Charles Weeks



Daniel J. Kierce

Cohasset resident Russell Bonetti recently joined Cambridgeport Bank's Newton office as a mortgage originator for the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hanover, Scituate, Norwell and Marshfield.

Bonetti attended St. Anselm College in New Hampshire and belongs to the Government Island Study and Hagerty Property Committee, both in Cohasset.

Daniel J. Kierce of Cohasset has been promoted to assistant vice president of the Boston Financial Group.

Kierce, a graduate of Nichols College, will be responsible for investment acquisitions for the real estate investment firm.

Alice Robinson was recently awarded Jack Conway & Co.'s annual "Thanksgiving Award" for the [illegible]et sales office.

Robinson received the awa[illegible]e company's Thanksgiving Breakfa[illegible]held annually at Plimoth Plantation to thank employees for their efforts throughout the year.

Recipients are chosen by their colleagues, based on their spirit of cooperation, helpfulness and good will.

Mary Ellen Neagle of Jack Conway & Co.'s Cohasset office has been awarded an all-expenses paid trip to the Caribbean as part of the company's annual "Seminar in the Sun" incentive program.

Nearly 100 of Conway's top sales agents, managers and their guests departed Jan. 3 for grand Cayman Island. The business element of the trip included real estate sales seminars and group planning sessions for 1995.

The "Seminar in the Sun" trip is awarded each year to top-producing sales associates and managers.

Supermarket plans solve plaza woes, Shaw's says

By Sarah Cook
Mariner correspondent

The Corporate Offices of Shaws Supermarket believe that the proposed redevelopment of Cushing Plaza with Shaws as the focus represents a plan of salvation for Cohasset's struggling shopping center.

In a presentation of the proposed plans, hosted by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce at the Chart House on Feb. 15, Brian Leahy of Shaws Real Estate Division gave the project high marks.

"I have been involved with a number of projects, and this is the one project that I can say is a win/win situation," Leahy said.

Leahy said that current problems such as a poor septic system, zoning violations, inadequate parking, and poor drainage are all addressed in the proposed construction and are improved drastically. In addition, he said construction of the shopping center is economically feasible for Shaws as the property was

Two railroad reports sent for final exam

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

The 17-member Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC), which once voted unanimously to recommend revival of the Greenbush commuter rail line with a tunnel under downtown Hingham, came down on both sides of the issue last week.

This time they voted unanimously to send a minority report along with the old majority report to Trudy Coxe, the state environmental affairs secretary, who will make the final decision on the environmental aspects of the restored rail line.

The four signers of the minority report — Deborah Cook and Ed Fegreus, both of Cohasset, Richard Cook of Hingham and William A. Reed of Braintree — said they would not join the majority until "a multi-modal non-rail transportation alternative has been studied."

"We believe that the study format is deficient because each transportation mode is viewed as being mutually exclusive of each other transportation mode," said the

Budget slashed by $150,000

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

Selectmen pared $150,000 from the town's FY 1996 budget, leaving approximately $400,000 to be raised if voters approve a Proposition 2-1/2 override.

The amount of the override will be determined when the advisory committee meets Wednesday evening, after the Cohasset Mariner has gone to press.

The board noted that on the advice of Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth Ripley, the town will save $50,000 on debt service by paying down its outstanding loans.

It also decided to forego the purchase of a new car for the police chief, for a savings of $19,000.

Four thousand dollars was cut from the police overtime budget.

Fire chief Roger Lincoln said repairs to the forest fire truck can wait another year, and will take $9,800 out of the budget.

Selectmen decided against a four-wheel drive car for the fire chief, and said that by leasing a vehicle, $8,500 can be saved.

Other items cut from the budget were $2,500 for a computer printer in the town accountant's office, and almost $7,000 from the legal budget. Nine thousand

Cohasset's week

Correction is noted

A news story about school committee budget deliberations in last week's Cohasset Mariner was misleading. The phrasing of the story's lead incorrectly suggested the school committee conducted budget deliberations in executive session at its Feb. 9 meeting.

On the contrary, the committee reached a consensus about the budget in open session. It later went into executive session to discuss collective bargaining issues, which is allowed under the state Open Meeting Law.

The Mariner regrets the error.

PALS program gets grant

The school department received a grant for $4,541 from the Drug Free Schools Grants this year to fund its PALS for Wellness program to support the activities of Cohasset Police Officer Lisa Matos in her work with students in grades K-8.

Officer Matos received training last year in drug education prevention using the "Here's Looking at You 2000" curriculum program used extensively throughout the country, Supt. Stephen Hart said in a memo to selectmen. Matos will conduct conflict resolution programs at the Junior/Senior High School this school year.

Hart explained that again this year, the town was denied funds because it doesn't have an actual DARE program. PALS for Wellness does not follow the set DARE curriculum and is specially geared to the needs of Cohasset.

"Unfortunately, although we were considered for funding from the DARE grant program, we were not chosen as a grant recipient," Hart said. "We continue to be concerned about the exclusionary position taken by the Executive Office of Public Safety and would ask that you support us in our attempts to access this additional funding source for Cohasset.

"Perhaps a meeting with our local legislators would be fruitful."

Special ed plan available

The Annual Program Plan for Special Education in the Cohasset public schools is available for public review. The program plan is required of all public schools by the Massachusetts Department of Education.

Anyone interested in reviewing this document may make arrangements for an appointment by calling 383-6104.

Temporary office closure

The Board of Health has voted to close the Board of Health office to the public temporarily. The times of closure are: Thursdays from 1 to 5 p.m. beginning Feb. 16 and continuing each Thursday through March 9.

Prior to March 9, the board will review its decision and determine if the closures should continue beyond that date.

Parking ban lifted on Sundays

Selectmen voted Tuesday to modify parking restrictions around Cohasset Common but remind residents that the current policy will remain in force until new signs can be posted.

Parking was banned when police and fire officials said parked cars prevented emergency vehicles from passing on Highland Avenue, Jason Road, and Long Road.

However, the Rev. Clifford Cutler told the selectmen last month that he received many complaints from parishioners who were issued parking tickets.

On recommendation of Cohasset Safety Officer Clifton Jones, parking will continue to be prohibited on Jason Road, with the exception of Sundays on the south side of the street.

Long Road, where parking is presently allowed on both sides of the street, will receive new signs banning parking, again with the Sunday exception for the south side of the street.

Highland Avenue Extension will be unchanged, with no parking allowed on the east side of the street, and parking permitted on the west side.

Parking will continued to be permitted on both sides of Highland Avenue, with the exception of the area in front of the Town Hall. At that point, parking will be allowed only on the Town Hall side of the street. In this case, there will be no exception allowed on Sundays.

Laugelle trial date set

Joseph "Skinny" Laugelle is scheduled to go to trial on June 19 on charges that he molested two Cohasset girls.

Laugelle, 62, manager of the town's recycling center, pleaded innocent last year to two counts each of indecent assault and battery on a child under 14, indecent assault and battery on a person over 14, and of showing obscene material to a minor.

The incidents are alleged to involve two sisters between 1988 and 1991.

Frances McIntyre of the Norfolk County district attorney's office said the case will be prosecuted by assistant district attorney David Deakin.

Scituate hires consultant for train study

By Rob Rogers
Mariner staff

Selectmen are prepared to pay an independent consultant $22,500 to evaluate the possible environmental impact of the proposed reconstruction of the Old Colony Railroad's Greenbush line.

The board is asking the advisory committee for emergency funds to hire Cambridge consultants Camp, Dresser, and McKee to look over the MBTA's environmental impact report (EIR) on the return of the Greenbush line. The move follows selectmen's repeated statements in recent weeks that the MBTA has consistently ignored requests for concrete answers on the EIR.

Cohasset selectmen have recently asked the same firm to perform the same task for $14,000. Board chairman Joseph Norton assured his fellow selectmen that the two studies will not overlap.

"We need to sit down with selectmen from Hingham and Cohasset and pool our resources," Norton said. "I believe that at least 75 percent of our concerns about the train — the noise from bells and whistles, the threat to our wetlands — are shared by the residents of all of our towns. On the other hand, there are some vital differences. We don't have a Hingham Center, and they don't have a Greenbush intersection. We can't afford to look at this as a regional issue. We have to think about what this means to Scituate as far as our residents are concerned."

Selectman Kevin Kinsella suggested that the board might be able to dodge some of the cost of hiring a consultant by relying on resources within the town.

"What can Camp, Dresser, and McKee do with the EIR that we can't ask our own town employees to do?" Kinsella asked. "I don't dispute the necessity of getting answers about this project, but maybe the cost could be reduced by asking members of the department of public works and conservation commission to take a look at the project."

Norton replied that the importance of the proposed Greenbush restoration to Scituate meant that $22,500 would be a small price to pay if it could ensure that the project was done right.

"This is the single biggest project that will affect Scituate in the next 50 years," Norton said. "We may be able to cut the cost of a consulting fee to $18,000 or something like that, but ultimately I don't think it adds up to a hill of beans. Not to hire this consultant would be pennywise and pound-foolish."

The Mariner welcomes letters to the Editor.

Two railroad reports sent for final exam

minority report.

"We suspect that a non-rail multi-modal transportation system could provide a level of service approaching, or even exceeding, that predicted for the commuter rail alternatives, but without the harsh environmental impacts and at significantly less cost."

Another section of the majority report, which went unchallenged by the minority, recommended the Scituate landfill as the location of the line's terminus as opposed to the old Greenbush Old Colony Railroad site a few hundred feet down the Driftway.

The value of protecting the North River and the closure of the landfill, said the report, "far outweigh the value of the impact to the wetlands affected by the Scituate landfill station and layover alternative."

Joe Norton, chairman of the CAC, said the draft report will be released March 6 and advertised March 15, after which the public at large will have an opportunity to comment, both in person and in writing for 60 days, with a decision expected in mid-May.

Two public hearings will be held during the public comment period, one in the Transportation Building in Boston, a choice that led to the first verbal joust of last week's meeting in Weymouth Town Hall.

"Why hold the meeting in Boston?" asked Richard Cook. "People out here won't have a chance to attend."

"It is only fair to have a meeting that state officials can attend," said Joe Connor, the MBTA's project manager for Greenbush. "There will be other meetings."

Kevin James of Marshfield said the Boston hearing "is important to those of us who will use the train to commute. I urge you to keep the Boston meeting."

"All I ask is you pick a location that is reasonable for the public to attend," said Randy Young of Hingham, one of the founders of the anti-rail Coastal Coalition.

"We'll pick a convenient location in a Greenbush corridor community," promised Connor. "There will be at least 30 days notice."

"We believe that the study format is deficient because each transportation mode is viewed as being mutually exclusive of each other transportation mode."

— Minority Report

"Hingham High School is available," volunteered Alexander MacMillan, chairman of the Hingham Historical Commission and a member of the CAC.

Norton urged the public to comment during the 60-day period, preferably in writing.

"A written comment is important because not everyone will have a chance to speak at length at the hearings," he said.

Frank Langmeyer of Weymouth wanted to know why more written comments are needed when people have already written their comments to the committee.

"Don't those letters count?" he asked.

Connor said those letters should be resubmitted.

The vote on the majority and minority reports was the first action taken, after which Norton threw the meeting open to a free-for-all discussion, not all of it devoted to the environment.

Concerns were expressed on how much financial impact there would be on the towns by way of MBTA assessment hikes.

"The answer is zero or nearly zero under state law and Proposition 2 1/2," said Barry Faulkner, project manager for the consulting Sverdrup Company. "State law determines the formula the sets the assessment according to the number of commuters from the town. It is not affected by new stations."

Ann Hilbert of Weymouth pointed out that such assessments are deducted from the Cherry Sheet of local aid from the state and not subjected to Prop 2 1/2.

"The governor has appointed a commission to study it," said Connor. "Rep. Frank Hynes is on it. They'll deal with the issue you bring up. It's not in our realm to deal with assessments."

Frank Hawkins, a former member of the Weymouth Planning Board, said he supports public transportation but he is also concerned with safety.

"Since I was in junior high school I heard that grade crossings should be eliminated," he said. "Now 40 years later we're still taking about it. We have real safety problems in Weymouth."

Weymouth Selectman Peg Goudy also had concerns about grade crossings and the proximity of the tracks to homes.

Since 1959, when commuter service on the Old Colony line ceased, she said, "homes have grown up along the track and they are not used to trains going by."

"What do we have to do to get anyone's attention," she asked, her voice rising. "I have had to keep asking the T to come down here and talk to us. I've got major problems with the Greenbush line."

"Why," asked Sen. Bob Hedlund, "do we have such a high concentration of grade crossings?"

"The Rockport line as 27 grade crossings in 14 1/2 miles," replied Connor, "There will be a mitigation process."

Hedlund suggested that, under current state warning regulations "there will be one continuous blasting of horns and whistles."

A man from Cohasset — individual members of the audience had ceased to identify themselves by now — wondered why "Cohasset voted it down yet we are going to get a train anyway. The MBTA has made the decision and we are just going through the motions."

"That's why your comments are so important," said Paul Dello Iacono of the CAC. "It's the secretary of environmental affairs who will make the decision.

purchased from the F.D.I.C. after a complicated history of bankruptcy.

Shaws has responded to the four problematic areas addressed by Leahy as follows:

• The Solution to a Troubled Septic System

Proposed plans for the construction of a new septic system address the problems of one with a history of failure. In addition to the benefit of construction of a new septic system, the present septic flow of 16,000 gallons per day would be reduced to 6,500 gallons per day due to the proposed tenant mix of low water users.

Leahy explained that permits to redevelop the shopping plaza were dependent on the reduction of septic flow. As a result of this requirement, Shaws attempted to relocate as many tenants as possible. Current tenants using a large volume of water, such as Dunkin' Donuts and Papa Ginos, are being assisted by Shaws in the search for new locations.

Engineer Larry Wagner of Appledore Engineering reaffirmed the "big environmental benefit" in altering the water usage by means of creating a new tenant mix.

• The Issue of Zoning Compliance

Shaws addressed the issue of zoning compliance, Leahy explained, by purchasing extensive amounts of property surrounding the plaza. He stated that the property area will expand from approximately seven acres to 25 acres. In addition, he emphasized the fact that additional property will not be developed, but will be maintained as woodland and used for drainage purposes.

A decision of approval from the Cohasset Zoning Board of Appeals required a double row of plantings and a 12-foot fence on the rear edge of the plaza property. Shaws claims that this will serve as a benefit to neighboring residences as it will improve a situation that is negatively impacting neighbors at present.

Relief granted by the Zoning Board of Appeals to create a turn-around for trucks has become an area of concern for abutting neighbors. Leahy stated that Shaws sought the relief to construct the turn-around in an effort to comply with the desire of neighbors to limit truck traffic on Beechwood Street. He explained that in order for trucks to enter and exit from 3A, a turn-around area would be necessary to allow trucks to back up to loading docks.

Leahy clarified that the appeal of the Zoning Board's decision, filed by Shaws, was filed for the sole purpose of obtaining clarification of some of the conditions of the permit and not to request changes in conditions of the permit.

• The Fix for Inadequate Parking

At present, Cushing Plaza has 363 existing parking spaces, a number deemed inadequate when compared with the Town's required 613 spaces. Shaws proposes to increase the number of spaces to 489 and has requested that they be allowed to reserve area in which to create more parking space should the Town deem it necessary in the future.

• The End of the Drainage Dilemma

Drainage from the center is currently handled by an 18-inch diameter culvert under 3A. Heavy rain often causes a backup in the system and water simply flows down the side of 3A. A closed drainage system directing runoff to a two stage detention pond in the adjacent woodland area has been proposed as a viable solution. This detention pond would provide settlement treatment to eliminate sands and oils and would finally be discharged at a slow rate into wetlands to the rear of the property. A proposal package is to be filed with the Cohasset Conservation Commission, March 3.

Leahy asked citizens of Cohasset to express their support of the proposed project as it goes before the Planning Board and faces the Board's preliminary opposition.

Keith Knowles of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce closed the presentation commenting on the present problematic state of Cushing Plaza.

"If this project does not go forward, we are going to be confronted with a blight to the community," Knowles said.

Septic regulations could soak South Shore homeowners into effect on March 31, will require board of health inspections on septic systems in homes for sale within nine months of all title transfers.

Homeowners who take out building permits for additions and renovations to their homes will also be subject to inspection.

"Any time there is a transfer of property or there is and increase of flow rates, existing systems will be inspected," said Hingham Board of Health Agent Bruce Capman.

Title V rules are designed to improve water quality and protect ground and surface water, but could end up costing local home owners with cesspools and septic systems nearby surface water sources, wells and ground water supplies, a good deal of money, Capman said.

According to the law, septic and absorption systems cannot be located within 100 feet of a surface water supply, within 50 feet of surface water or a private well, or within four feet of groundwater.

Systems will be inspected by registered sanitarians, certified inspectors and professional engineers, Capman said, and the Department of Environmental Protection is currently holding training and certification programs for home inspectors and septic pumpers and haulers as well.

Systems that do not meet the state's standards must be upgraded within a year of the inspection. Local boards of health reserve the right to extend that period or shorten it if necessary.

"If the system is overflowing or backing up, the board of health will want it done sooner," said Capman, who noted that if the local board knows that the sewer is coming in, it can offer an extension of up to five years.

"The law gives a lot of control back to the local boards and "home rule," he said.

Capman said system upgrades can cost homeowners more than $10,000.

But in communities that adopt the state's Betterment Bill, there could be some help for homeowners hardest hit by the new rules. Capman explained that through the bill, towns and cities set aside funds through town meeting and can allow residents unable to get loans or cover the cost of upgrading or installing new system, to borrow from the town. The loans are then placed on the tax bill and can be paid back with interest over a 20 year period, Capman said.

"It's up to the town to adopt the bill," he said.

Currently there is an article without a dollar amount for this year's warrant, but Capman said there are a lot of factors that would have to be considered before adopting the legislation, like who would qualify to get the money, how great the need would be and how much should finally be appropriated at town meeting.

Along with the loan, the town would be responsible for hiring a contractor to do the work which raises several liability issues.

Capman questions the need for the bill when historically, Hingham residents have managed to upgrade their own systems when required to do so by the local board. Capman also pointed out that the town's standards already require inspections whenever a building permit request is made and the local board of health can have the work done and put a tax lien on the house until the work is paid for.

Capman suggests that all homeowners with septic systems and cesspools provide routine maintenance and have them pumped out regularly - once every three years for septic systems, and once annually for cesspools and homes with garbage disposals.

Local real estate agents having been gearing up for the change for many months.

Chris Ford of Hallmark 100 in Cohasset said the new regulations have forced many agents to become mini-engineers and scientists in order to counsel their clients.

In addition to making the agents' job tougher, Ford said for those trying to sell a home the new regulations and upgrading requirements can stretch out the transaction for many months and in areas where ledge is a factor, can cost up to $50,000.

Ford said the inspections alone can run homeowners $1,000.

"It's an extremely difficult problem," said Ford. "It's thrown cold water on the real estate market."

Innovative technologies, which are being more widely approved by DEP in coastal areas and other trouble spots, are offering some relief to homeowners. Ford explained that one client who faced a $50,000 repair job was able to replace his failing system with an innovative technology for just $15,000.

Still, the permitting process for these alternative systems is a lengthy one with a good deal of uncertainty at the local and state level.

Combined with rising interest rates, Ford said the new Title V regulations are creating several points of anxiety for anyone trying to sell a home.

The Hearing Center

Have You Heard?

Licensed-Certified Audiologist

TWO IS BETTER THAN ONE

Those who experience a significant loss of hearing in only one ear should not deceive themselves into thinking that good hearing in the other ear is sufficient. The fact that sound arrives at each ear at slightly different times is the basis for the sense of depth which we refer to as "stereo" sound. Thus, people with good hearing in one ear not only have difficulty in detecting the direction of sound, but they are deprived of sound's richness and fullness. In addition, it is difficult to hear soft conversation when someone speaks on the hearing impaired listener's "bad side" or when the telephone receiver is pressed against the "wrong ear." These are reasons enough to explore the help that a hearing instrument might provide.

If you have been experiencing hearing loss in one ear, please come see us at THE HEARING CENTER. Our knowledgeable and friendly staff will be happy to answer any questions that you may have, and show you the latest technology available in hearing instruments today. Our number one priority is commitment to your needs. To schedule your personal appointment, or for more information, please call us at 1-800-339-9316. Our offices are conveniently located at 306 Washington St. (Rte. 53), Norwell, and 470 Southern Artery (Rte. 3-A), Quincy. Mastercard and Visa are accepted. Ask about our complimentary battery club membership program. We would like to take this opportunity to wish our readers and their families a safe President's Day!

P.S. Not being able to detect sound's direction can be a safety factor in traffic and other situations.

editorial

'Tis the season

There's never been a better time for individuals to seek office. The challenges facing Cohasset need the talent and enthusiasm that some new faces in town government could bring.

So it's too bad there are no races in the April 1 town election. But apparently nearly all the incumbents here are itching to have another go and the electorate thinks they're doing a good enough job not to be challenged.

We know that few of us have much free time these days. That's means that many who may have considered running for office, didn't think they'd be able to put the hours in to do the job properly. And it does take time. We take our hats off to all elected and appointed town officials, past and present — for all their hard work for little reward except the feeling of making a difference.

So while we'll dispense with 'Question of the Week' this year — a question-and-answer format that only thrives when there's competition — we would like to offer all candidates the opportunity to submit short position papers on issues pertinent to Cohasset.

The candidates are also invited to submit a photograph of themselves along with a 250-word press release including reasons why they are seeking office. We think this is especially important for those who have not held elected office previously.

There are 15 available positions and we think Cohasseters would be well served by knowing more about the following candidates:

- Selectmen Michael Sullivan and Merle Brown;
- Health board members Thomas Cook and Robert Davenport;
- School committee member Ralph Kidder and candidate Maureen Jerz;
- Assessor Ross Rosano;
- Sewer commissioner Henry Rattenbury;
- Water commissioner Robert Kasameyer;
- Library trustees Barbara Power and June Hubbard and candidate Sarah Pease;
- Planning board member John O'Toole;
- Recreation commissioner Stephen Endris;
- Housing authority member Stephen F. Wigmore.

The school committee's role has changed under the state Education Reform Act passed last year — but what hasn't changed is the need for committed people to serve on that board. We're only starting to feel the effects of the new law which will impact everything from the amount of time students spend on core subjects to the length of the school day. We hope Mr. Kidder and Mrs. Jerz will submit their views on these important topics between now and the election

In addition to a myriad of other "health" duties, the health board will have the awesome challenge of coping with Title V and the state Betterment Bill, regulating septic system and cesspool up grades at the cost of thousands of dollars to the homeowner. We invite Mr. Cook and Mr. Davenport to comment on this issue.

And along with other duties, the planning board must grapple with mitigation measures surrounding the proposed restoration of the Greenbush Line and the magnet that Route 3A has become in drawing business away from the Village. Mr. O'Toole is welcome to comment here in the Mariner.

More than ever leadership is crucial to the board of selectmen as the town faces successive overrides. Let's hear what Mr. Brown and Mr. Sullivan foresee as a solution to the town's financial crunch.

We need public-minded people who are thoughtful and reflective as well as creative and innovative to find both short-term and long-term solutions to new questions and old, nagging problems.

The political season has begun. We hope the candidates won't sit back between now and the election, but will get involved and help educate their fellow citizens.

Train opponents ignore facts

To the Editor:

I left the Feb. 16 meeting on the Greenbush Line restoration at Weymouth Town Hall in despair at the savage nonsense that greeted the T representative and Citizen Advisory Committee members.

Emotional, irrational protests are so easy to organize these days and informed, objective presentation is almost impossible. I can only trust that the long-suffering CAC group can recognize the persuasion of the greatest good for the greatest number.

Totally ignored in the tirade of fears were these facts:

- The hearing process is not at all new or "at the last minute." There have been myriad hearings over at least 10 years. Most of the protesters either ignored them or were not in the area.
- These South Shore town centers prospered...many even were developed...for more than 100 years with a railroad running through them.
- And those were the days of "belching monsters;" not the sleek, silent equipment of today.
- For those years, and today in the T territory and across the nation, commuter rail has a recognized, admirable safety record. Grade crossings, though certainly not ideal, present no problem of safety or convenience.
- The North Shore and western suburbs consider commuter rail one of their greatest public services and would scream bloody murder at any move to abandon.
- South Shore towns are already paying for very little, if any service from the T, but protesters cannot seem to believe the cost increase will be minimal and balanced by increased property values.
- There is no comparison of the convenience and comfort of commuter rail with any of the alternatives proposed.

It is clear that the protesters cannot be converted but it is important that CAC members, town officials, and the T planning group be made aware that the vast majority of residents of this area endorse the return of the rail.

CHS teachers concerned about cuts

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Jr./Sr., High School teachers met in an emergency meeting Friday afternoon after school, Feb. 10, to express and discuss their concerns about the 1995-96 school budget cuts mentioned the night before at the School Committee meeting.

At this School Committee meeting, school faculty, School Council representatives and Parent School Organizers, learned for the first time that the Cohasset School Committee would be presenting a budget for the 1995-96 academic year that would include a substantial loss of services not meeting the level of funding necessary for the next year. This budget reflects an apparent compromise between the Cohasset Advisory Board's recommendation for a fixed 4 percent annual increase on all school budgets over the next five years and a suggested 8.6 percent budget increase submitted by the superintendent for this upcoming fiscal year.

The 5.4 percent budget recommended by the School Committee translates into more than a $200,000 loss of services as compared to the budget that was first proposed by the superintendent. Falling under the ax dollars was removed from the harbormaster's budget when the board deferred the purchase of new floats until after the harbor is dredged.

After initially deciding to cut $9,500 from the fire department budget by foregoing the purchase of new radios, the selectmen reinstated this item when the total cuts exceeded the $150,000 mark.

Highway surveyor Harold Litchfield said he will be able to withdraw a warrant article for the purchase of a new dump truck.

The dump truck currently in use "went through the Blizzard of '78," he said. The highway department only uses it now as a back-up, and does not take it far from the garage because it breaks down often.

Litchfield said he can use $60,000 from state Chapter 85 funds to purchase a new truck, since it will be used for road maintenance.

The board said it will support Litchfield's request to reclassify the highway department's clerk to allow for a 20-hour work week.

He assured the board that his department needs a clerk for the extra time.

"There's plenty of work for her," he said, adding, "I'm 60 years old and I'm not going to start typing now."

Selectmen were concerned that increasing the clerk's hours would make her eligible for benefits which would then increase the town's expense. Even though Litchfield said the clerk does not intend to sign up for health benefits, Selectman Jane Goedecke said any future employee might take advantage of the benefit.

By shifting funds from the department's casual labor account, the additional costs of the employee will be covered, Goedecke said.

Selectman chairman Michael Sullivan noted that the board was not adding a position to a town department but that this action was "an administrative move."

Tree, Park & Cemetery Supt. Peter Laugelle resisted the board's attempt to reduce his staff during the winter season.

Laugelle said he had level-funded his budget except for capital items. The department's workers are busy year round, he said, using the winter months to repair equipment as well as doing some outside work, repairing fences and taking down trees.

"We're cut bad enough now," he said.

Selectmen also expressed their frustration that they were cutting budgets over which they have authority while other autonomous town departments might not be doing the same.

The board said the town should look at restructuring its clerical staff, to create a "pool" of workers, allowing the staff to be moved among departments as seasonal work loads shift. This would provide greater efficiency and management if personnel are supervised by the executive secretary.

Chairman Michael Sullivan also said the board wants to form a committee to study whether the town should continue to have call firefighters. Elimination of the call firefighters could save $30,000, he said.

Selectman Peter Pratt said the town needs to investigate raising fees, such as permits for outdoor burning, for plumbing permits, and cemetery fees. In addition, the town "ought to think about the harbor as a revenue source," he said, adding that the town could raise an additional $40,000 annually by increasing fees.

Boards try to zero in on override figure

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

At an often contentious meeting Wednesday, March 15, members of the advisory committee, selectmen and school committee, failed to reach agreement on the amount of a possible Proposition 2 1/2 override.

They did appear to agree however — what the smaller the override amount is and that the more united town officials are in support of it — the greater its changes of passage.

The advisory committee presented selectmen with a list of some $170,000 in possible cuts made from the various budgets under the selectmen's control.

Nan Roth, advisory committee chairman, explained that the cuts were proposed after a meeting the previous evening (Tuesday, Feb. 14) which had lasted until midnight. She said the committee suggested the reductions to avoid an override request of $525,000.

If selectmen approve the budget reductions, the override amount would be $380,000, which Roth called "more appropriate."

Roth also explained that the advisory committee made its proposed cuts in haste because they did not receive the school committee budget until last week and had to act quickly because the budget must be at the printer in Rhode Island Feb. 27 or 28 to be ready in time for the upcoming town meeting. Town by-laws require that the town meeting warrant, which includes the budget, be mailed to residents at least 14 days before town meeting.

She admitted that the cuts were made quickly: "Because the school budget came in too late, we don't have time to think about it."

Roth added, however, that all proposed reductions were suggested to minimize a reduction in services.

"We get the message that people like the level of services that they have, but we also get the message that they don't want to pay for it," Roth said.

Selectmen did not like being asked to consider reductions to the budgets under their control so quickly.

"I think this is really unfair," said Selectman Martha Gjesteby. "We're supposed to be running things."

Roth said the committee had done the best it could have under the time deadlines.

"We've heard the budgets from every department," she stated, "and we have made our best shot at it and came with an override of $500,000. Then we made our second shot."

Roth also said the committee is reluctant to remove items from the capital plan which will only have to be added in subsequent years. She also said the committee is concerned that unless Cohasset starts doing some long range planning on budget items — including restructuring the public works and public safety departments, reconsidering all dept items and the creation of a stabilization fund — the town will face a $20 per thousand tax rate in five years.

Later in the meeting, Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan suggested that if that tax rate comes to pass, the average Cohasset tax bill will be over $5,000 and the town will no longer be considered affordable, thereby changing the character of the community.

The tax rate is now $15.30 per thousand dollar assessed value.

However other selectmen agreed with Gjesteby that they simply could not make cuts during the meeting.

"I'm not going to discuss this right now," said selectman Jane Goedecke.

"Jane don't be mad," replied Roth. "If you had only gotten the school budget last night, what would you do?"

Goedecke replied that more attention could have been given to the other budgets. But she stated she did not like the process, because in effect, the town side of government would be level funded.

"This is very unfair to our departments," she said in reference to the list of suggested budget reductions. "This is going to sound somewhat haphazard and I'm sorry. In order to have a $380,000 override, the budgets under our control will be level funded."

"This is our idea," said Roth. "Now you tell us your idea."

Gjesteby said: "You'll have the municipal employees very bitter toward the schools. It'll be very divisive."

School department officials noted that the department eliminated three employees, pointing out that the proposed education budget has in fact been reduced.

"We'll be doing some cutting," said selectman Merle Brown, "but it'll be less than you want it to be."

About half of those in the room raised their hands when Sullivan asked how many people in the room could support an override request of $450,000.

Selectman Peter Pratt said the town needed to develop a five-year budget plan and look at the structure of the government. Currently, he said the department heads simply submit a budget and spend what they are allocated.

"We budget very well," he said, "and we don't look at output."

Roth said that the advisory committee has had a difficult time in the past getting information from certain departments about exactly who does what.

Mall walkers have a great time for a great cause

By Rob Rogers
Mariner staff

On Saturday, March 4, hundreds of South Shore residents will put their best feet forward and demonstrate their support for a worthy cause — by walking around a mall.

Organizers of the fourth annual Hanover Mall Walk hope to raise at least $75,000 to benefit Hospice of the South Shore, a group that provides quality-of-life care for terminally ill patients. The 1995 Walk will feature raffles, prizes, celebrities, and surprises for those who participate. Many walkers, however, believe the best reason to walk is to honor those who can no longer walk beside them.

"A lot of people walk in memory of their loved ones," said Marshfield volunteer D.D. Pierce. "My own husband was diagnosed with cancer 11 years ago, and received hospice care for over four months. That's basically the reason why I want to keep raising money for them. The best way I can think of to do that is through a real upbeat kind of celebration like the Mall Walk."

"Our chairman for the Walk this year, Carole Ringer, accepted the chairmanship after both of her parents were diagnosed with terminal cancer within a day of each other," said South Shore Visiting Nurses Association representative and Mall Walk coordinator Myrna Walsh. "Thanks to Hospice, her parents were able to spend their final months together in their home."

"Hospice provides care, comfort and support to people who are facing terminal illness," Walsh said. "It also provides support to families during their year of bereavement. We accept clients from all walks of life — parents, children, people with AIDS — anyone, regardless of their ability to pay. We don't turn anyone away. Last year, we provided approximately $171,000 worth of care to 550 families on the South Shore. The Mall Walk is our major fundraiser."

Volunteers from each of the 15 towns South Shore Hospice provides care for will work to collect pledges over the next two weeks in preparation for the big day.

"Many people do the walk strictly as a donation," Pierce said. "But we also have a lot of enthusiastic walkers. We have people coming of all ages and sizes, from school groups to older walkers. Some companies in the area are even sponsoring teams. We also have a baby-sitting area, where parents can leave their kids — ages two through six — while they walk."

"There's no excuse for anyone not to come down," Walsh said. "There will be clowns and exercise experts, free cholesterol screenings for those who want them, and gifts, goody bags, and collectibles for those who walk. We'll be raffling off a number of great prizes, including a $350 shopping spree at the mall, a $200 gift certificate to Jordan's Furniture, and a getaway weekend for two to the Chatham Bars Inn, donated by Fallon Ambulance Service. And people who walk in memory of their loved ones, and let us know in advance, will receive a free keepsake name tag with that person's name on it."

Last year's Mall Walk raised $65,000 for Hospice, up from $45,000 the year before. Pierce believes that this year's walk has the potential to be more successful — and more fun — than ever before.

"It's going to be a really fun day," Pierce said. "There will be clowns, and wonderful drawings — we have 10 grand prizes, and none of them are chintzy. Bottled water will be available for everyone who walks, and everyone who brings in over $100 in donations will receive a free T-shirt."

"We're expecting between 700 and 1,000 people to come down," Walsh said. "Churches, Boy Scout troops earning their hiking badges, and all sorts of other people will be coming out. We have some celebrities coming, too — people who provide inspiration to the rest of us. George Conway, a 92-year-old Olympic walker, will be coming, as will Amy Webb of Webb's ProFitness in Norwell. Amy suffered a devastating illness, and the doctors told her she couldn't walk again. In fact, she'll be leading us in our warm-up exercises."

The Walk will take place between 7 and 10 a.m. on Saturday, March 4. Walkers are encouraged to collect sponsorships as soon as possible, and to bring their donations with them on the day of the walk. To obtain sponsor sheets, or for more information about the walk, contact D.D. Pierce at (617) 834-6351 or Dot McCann at (617) 834-9432.

CHS teachers concerned about cuts

are much needed traditional positions such as the entire Business Education department, a key math lab aide assignment, and central office personnel.

New positions such as the Adjustment Counselor for the high school, the eighth grade team leader, and the Writing Lab aide positions have been dropped from the budget after several years of planning for these programs.

In addition, supplies, tutoring, testing, library contracted services, capital outlay, miscellaneous maintenance and technology will be reduced. Although not included in the discussions about the budget, the English department's current faculty will also be reduced in order to make room for reassigned staff.

Joan Wool and Laureen White of the Business Department voiced their opposition to the elimination of their department by citing the fact that over 180 students currently enrolled in Business Education courses would have no alternatives for these programs.

The department had just begun a new grade seven keyboarding program at the request of the community and the School Committee, and a study of recently graduated alumni has indicated a continuing need for Business accounting and management.

School Council members decry the lack of funding for the Adjustment Counselor at the high school, a new position sorely needed over the past several years.

Despite Superintendent Stephen Hart's suggestion that the restructuring moves are in response to state reform demands and budgetary constraints, teachers feel that an already excellent Cohasset School System is in danger of losing valuable programs that contribute to its competitive edge. During the meeting, many staff vented their frustrations over the double whammy of declining state funding and multiplying reform demands that are producing a curriculum crisis at C.H.S. Teachers expressed the fear that we, like so many other communities, are being pushed to change for the sake of fiscal expediency.

The teachers at the high school concluded that the Advisory Board's ceiling of a 4 percent budget increase remains unrealistic in the light of the school system's 15 years of a no frills budget since the advent of Prop. 2-1/2. For the first time in years these dedicated teachers of Cohasset voiced that all is not well in their schools.

Osgood basement witnesses a transformation

By Alison B. Shyer
Mariner correspondent

On the lower level of the Osgood School, along a 40-foot hallway that was once exposed brick and lit by an occasional dim lightbulb, is a bright and colorful mural of the nature trail behind the school where the students study science.

The art work, which depicts the trail in all four seasons, is only a small part of the renovations that have been taking place in the basement of the Osgood School over the past four years.

From a cellar of cinder blocks, darkness and unfinished floors, John Jacobucci, the director of maintenance and special projects for Cohasset Schools, turned dead space into offices, a conference room, a library and a computer lab.

All of the work, according to Principal Linda Whitney, was done by Jacobucci, "using the resources we had." Furniture was donated by the PSO and taken out of storage at the Deer Hill School.

Whitney said that the new offices, while clearly an improvement, are not a solution to the shortage of space at Osgood. "We are just making the best of what we have."

The lower level is not handicapped accessible. There are no windows and only one emergency exit, between the library and computer lab. With what Whitney called "creative ventilation" and guidance from the fire and health departments, the basement meets air quality standards, but can only house small groups of children at once.

The library and the adjacent computer lab are the only places on the floor in which classes can meet. The library was once stored in a classroom and was only accessible when no class was scheduled.

The basement had been empty and unusable, except as storage space, for almost 10 years. Before that it housed an active rifle range and air raid shelter.

According to Arthur Lehr Jr., the town's emergency manager, the police, Boy Scouts and a local rifle and pistol club all used the range on a regular basis. It was the police who ended that by "shooting their high caliber guns and blowing holes in the pipes." Lehr says that the Boy Scouts, who never shot with anything higher than a .22 caliber, were blamed, and the range was closed and eventually dismantled.

The air raid shelter has been out of use for over 20 years but is still used for emergency evacuation storage.

David Wadsworth the curator of the Cohasset Historical Society, said that on the day after Pearl Harbor, when he was a student, the children were not allowed to go home after school and were brought dow' stairs to the shelter. It turned out, he said, that there had been a rumor that there was a German aircraft carrier off the East Coast.

"Of course, the Germans never had an aircraft carrier," he said.

Coast Guard station slated for shutdown

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

For sale: Large 10-bedroom Depression Era colonial revival home with huge kitchen, laundry, billiard room on three acres with water view and easy access to the harbor. Detached three-bay garage and large boathouse. Excellent condition. Property will be sold to highest bidder.

No one wants to see such a notice published, but the above-described property — Coast Guard Station Scituate — is one of three properties in the First Coast Guard District that is slated to close at the end of the fiscal year — Sept. 30, 1995 — in an effort to save $6 million.

Last week, Coast Guard officials met with U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds (D-Cohasset) in his Capitol Hill office and gave him a detailed briefing of the proposal which calls for closing not only the Scituate station but the small-boat station at Menemsha on Martha's Vineyard and another one in Boston.

In addition, according to Studds' spokesman Brendan Daly, the Coast Guard proposes keeping the Provincetown station open on a seasonal basis. However, most of that station's calls — and deaths at sea in the area — occur in the wintertime, Daly said. "It doesn't make sense."

The personnel and vessels would be transferred to the Coast Guard station at Point Allerton in Hull and the station at the Cape Cod Canal.

News of the proposed station shutdown shocked Scituate selectmen chairman Joseph Norton, who has called for a meeting Tuesday, Feb. 21, to discuss what can be done. He added he was dismayed that the town was not asked for public comment about the proposal.

"There are economic concerns to be considered as well as the overriding issue of safety, not only for our fishing fleet but our large community of recreational boaters," he said.

Marshfield selectmen chairman Faith Jean said she, too, is concerned the closure could put the lives of Marshfield's recreational boaters and commercial fleet at increased risk.

"There can be no doubt that this (shut down) could frequently be a matter of life and death," she said. "Where is help going to come from now?"

"I think it's terrible the Coast Guard is going to leave," said Scituate Fire Chief James Breen, who also serves as the town's civil defense director.

The Coast Guard has been of immeasurable help during the major northeast storms — the Blizzard of '78, the October 1991 Halloween Storm and the Dec. 11, 1992, nor'easter — helping evacuate coastal residents and providing security on the roads, said Breen.

The Coast Guard responds to boat fires as well. If the station is closed, harbormasters will have to carry firefighting equipment and foam on his boats.

"The harbormaster and assistants aren't trained to fight fires, and I don't want to put them in that situation," said Breen.

The Scituate station, with its 41-foot utility boat, 44-foot motor lifeboat and 28-foot rigid hull inflatable, LeCompte, cover the area from Black Rock in Cohasset to Marion Rocks in Manomet.

It has an $80,000 operating budget, but fuel costs and salaries are not included in that amount, said Senior Chief Boatswain Mate William Lockhead.

"The Coast Guard is under very tight budget constraints," Studds observed, "but before they go through any plans to close, I want to be absolutely sure we are not jeopardizing safety . . . We want to make sure SARs (search-and-rescues) will always be there."

Although Studds is not directly involved with Coast Guard matters, which are handled by the Committee on Transportation, chaired by U.S. Rep. Howard Coble of North Carolina, he will follow the matter.

"There are so many stations (in the 10th District), we'll keep on top of it," said Daly.

The station is authorized for staffing by 24 men and women. An additional 14 Reservists are assigned to the Scituate station, and the Coast Guard Auxiliary and the Sea Scouts also use the facility.

Last year, according to Lockhead, the Scituate Coast Guardsmen responded to 173 search-and-rescues and boarded 240 vessels. A year earlier there were 155 search-and-rescues and 273 boardings. In 1992, when the Coast Guard was mandated to give every boater a safety lecture, the Coast Guardsmen boarded 640 vessels. That year there were 168 search-and-rescues.

During the past decade, there have been 10 fatalities at the New Inlet, the last occurring in 1992. That area where the North and South rivers converge and flow into the Atlantic is believed to be one of the most treacherous areas of water along the eastern seaboard.

"This is a multi-mission building," said Lockhead. "Our primary missing is search-and-rescue and enforcement, but it also is responsible for some aids to navigation — especially in the North River — for protection of the marine environment in the event of oil spills and for a right whale survey in the Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary.

Land for the Scituate Coast Guard station on First Cliff was acquired in 1937 through purchases from Enos Stoddard and J.H. MacDonald, although the station was not built until 1938.

According to Lockhead, the Coast Guard had an option to buy the whole peninsula at that time; instead, the government purchased three acres and obtained a 28-foot-wide right-of-way to the harbor.

Back in 1938, men working for the Works Progress Administration built the stonewall around the building.

In February 1984, a fire ravaged the building, burning everything but the core. At the time, private contractors were on site building pavilions on either side of the structure. The Coast Guardsmen were housed in nearby trailers.

Everything was rebuilt, except for the cupola, which was no longer needed as a lookout tower.

Last year, the Coast Guard spent $200,000 to refurbish the boat house and another $349,000 for a new pier.

Library story hours

Registrations are currently being accepted for the spring series of preschool story hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The series will run from March 16 to April 27, Thursdays, at 10 a.m., and from March 17 to April 28, Fridays at 10 a.m. There will be no story hour during school vacation week. Each 45-minute program consists of several picture book stories and simple fingerplays, songs and crafts. Children must be at least 3-1/2 to participate.

To register, call the children's librarian at 383-1348.

Democrats to hold caucus

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus on Saturday, March 4, at 2 p.m. to elect delegates to the 1995 Massachusetts Democratic Convention, which will be held on June 10 at the Mullin Center in Amherst. Cohasset will be electing three delegates and three alternates, equally divided between men and women, to send to the convention.

Randall Nash, vice-chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, will call the caucus at Trueblood Hall, First Parish, Cohasset. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in Cohasset as of Dec. 31, 1994. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must be present, voting and give their written consent to be nominated. Each nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the caucus. All ballots will be written and secret.

Indoor golf for kids offered

The Cohasset Enrichment Programs is sponsoring "9 Holes on Wheels," an indoor miniature golf range, on Thursday, Feb. 23, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Deer Hill School. The cost is $3 per person for nine holes or $5 per person for 18 holes. To reserve tee time call 383-6860.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

LANDSCAPING AND VALUE

QUESTION: I am buying a newly built home. How can I improve the landscaping without paying a lot of cash up front?

ANSWER: Good landscaping can enhance the appearance of a new house and make it look "established." It can compliment the design, provide a pleasant atmosphere, create privacy and reduce noise. It will also add to the value when selling time comes.

But good landscaping can cost a lot of money. If you want more than the minimum that builders usually provide, have it installed when you buy the house and add the cost to the selling price. This way, you pay it in the mortgage rather than up-front cash.

CDC presents 'Earnest'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "The Importance of Being Earnest" on March 10, 11, 17, 18, 24 and 25 at 8 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall, Highland St. A March 15 performance will benefit the Amarylis Foundation/Robin's Nest and proceeds from a March 22 presentation of the play will go to the Cohasset Appalachia Services Project.

"Earnest" is a masterful Oscar Wilde drawing room comedy.

Tickets, which are $8 per person, or $6 for groups of six or more, are available at Cohasset Hardware, Buttonwood Bookstore in Cohasset, Front St. Bookstore, Scituate, and at the door. For further information call 383-2151.

Spinners Guild to meet

The South Shore Spinners Guild will meet on Thursday, March 2, from 7 to 10 p.m. at Old South Union Church, 25 Columbian St., South Weymouth, for their annual Fashion Show of items made and modelled by members.

Call 331-1493 for further information. New members are welcome to attend.

Five choirs to sing

Five local Unitarian Universalist parishes will gather for the first time at First Parish in Cohasset, on Sunday, Feb. 26, at 10:45 a.m., to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the adoption of the Principles and Purpose Statement of the Unitarian Universalist Association.

Participating congregations include First Parish in Hingham, First Parish in Norwell, Second Parish in Hingham, First Parish in Scituate and the host, First Parish in Cohasset. Ministers and laypersons of the five participating parishes will address each of the seven Unitarian Universalist principles and purposes.

All five parish organists and a combined choir of more than 50 voices will sing four anthems. Carolyn Curtis, music director for First Parish in Cohasset, has noted that this will be a memorable gathering of talented musicians and singers, many of them professionals.

The music will include the thoughtful Thoreau anthem, "Seize on Today," the jazzy "Glorious Music of Life," and the nature-inspired anthem, "Share . . . Dream."

Cabaret '95 at First Parish

The First Parish Church in Cohasset will present "Those Were the Days," Cabaret 1995, on Saturday, March 18, at 7 p.m. and Sunday, March 19, at 3 p.m. at the First Parish House on Main St.

This year's show, co-produced by Jeanne Scammel and Mike Nakishima, will be rich with nostalgia, talent and variety and will feature selections from "Music Man," "Hello Dolly" and "Damn Yankees." The Gay '90s theme will invite audience participation.

Other highlights of the show will include a traditional barber shop quartet and an all-women quartet. The live musical accompaniment will include a synthesizer and percussion.

On March 18 a lavish reception begins at 7 p.m., followed by the music revue at 8 p.m. Sunday's 3 p.m. matinee will include numbers by the parish's junior choir and mini singers. Child care for those not yet interested in theater is available on request.

Local businesses and professionals have been invited to advertise in the program in support of the work of First Parish, which includes community-wide educational programs and free transitional shelter for homeless women and children. Calling card size ads are $25, and full-page ads are $100. Other sizes are available.

Tickets, on sale Feb. 27 at the church office, are $20 (including the reception) for Saturday, which features reserved seating, and $10 for adults and $5 for school-age children on Sunday, which is open seating.

Members of Saturday's audience who attend again with their children Sunday will be admitted free. For further information call 383-1100, Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., or stop by the church office at 23 North Main Street.

Buckley works to put crew on Cohasset map

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

With its bone-chilling winds and freezing temperatures, winter is usually the down time for the sport of crew.

But Cohasset High teacher and crew coach, Jack Buckley, is already thinking ahead to raising the sport to another level, both in Cohasset and throughout the South Shore.

A resident of Hull, Buckley said Cohasset's seaside setting, the strong relationship with Hull's Lifesaving Museum and access to its boats and the "accessibility to the Boston Harbor Islands," makes the town a perfect launching pad to introduce the sport to a greater number of people.

"It makes sense to take advantage of that," Buckley said. "It has so much to offer everybody. People are constantly learning from the environment."

Buckley is organizing team at the club level now, before elevating the club to an official varsity sport.

He said crew teams are "very common in private schools and colleges," but such is not the case in high schools.

"It's uncommon for high schools to have an ocean team," Buckley said.

He said Cohasset will be racing Hingham and Hull "for sure" and is hoping to line up other teams throughout New England, including the youth squads of various crew clubs.

For now, Buckley and those Cohasset students interested in crew work on getting the boat into racing shape by scraping, refinishing and painting it. He plans to get back on the water in April, though the spring is not the competitive crew season.

Winter isn't either, at least outside. In private schools and colleges, ergonmeters — indoor rowing machines — are utilized by the athletes to maintain their fitness for the competitive season. Indoor races of 2,500 meters are held throughout the winter and Boston plays host to the world championships every year. The competition, which consists of an international field, is held in the field houses of Harvard and M.I.T.

"There's a whole world in crew the Cohasset kids haven't experienced in crew," he said.

Buckley is working closely with the museum in Hull to create an eight-week, spring rowing camp. The camp would meet twice per week and take place in Hull. The Hull Lifesaving Museum has allowed the Cohasset squad to use their boats and help promote the sport.

Buckley is now in the process of securing permits from the town to restore the historic boat house and name the structure the Cohasset Maritime Institute.

Along with storing the boats in the structure, Buckley said he would like to use the structure as the "umbrella for coordinating organization."

His grand plan includes tying in navigational studies to the high school curriculum, recreational rowing for both youth and adults, and running a summer program, the nature of which has yet to be determined.

"They're all interconnected but they're all separate," Buckley said. "Some may enjoy faster growth than others."

Buckley sees many "academic challenges" in the navigational studies with several concentration of studies involved. He participated in a five-week, seamanship nautical science educational program during the summer in Woods Hole. Buckley spent 10 days on the open seas. Through the experience, he further realized schools needed to learn to teach subjects using a "hands-on" approach.

"It was a great program and has given me a lot of material I can use in school," Buckley said. "That just strengthened my belief there are many academic challenges for students in and around the waters.

"There are incredible academic applicants."

One fear Buckley does have is the possible perception by parents that they'll see the program as a "luxury" because the students wouldn't be in the school all day.

One question mark Buckley faces in getting the institute off the ground is figuring out a way to generate an annual revenue rather than rely on donations, though he said the money has been greatly appreciated.

"People in town have been generous and supportive," he said. "And people involved in the the institute are very appreciative. I think everyone's pleased with the direction it's taking."

Buckley would like to see part of the money come through membership to the institute and he his hoping for continued support through the school department, but stressed "the Cohasset Maritime Institute is a community resource."

Hopefully, it will become as popular as sailing and other water sports. Ultimately, that's what Jack Buckley would like to see.

Friday was all-star night at Norwell High as the best basketball players from the South Shore League took on the best from the Atlantic Coast League.

The girls' teams played at 6 p.m. while the boys' squads tipped off at 8 p.m.

In the end the South Shore League won both games but the real winners were the fans.

Anyway the following are some Extra Points Awards bestowed on some of the participants at Friday's games.

Three-Point Award: to Norwell's Bill Lynch, who won the boys' three-point contest and Plymouth North's Nicole Dias, who won the girls' shoot out.

Both players pulled out Bird-like efforts to claim first prize during the half-time contests. The fans at NHS even got into the act counting off each Lynch hoop.

The Oops Award: To Cohasset boys' coach Ron Ford for holding a practice earlier in the day thereby making his three all-stars (Joe Slotnick, Peter Bishop and Tom Allen) ineligible to play in the game. Ford, who led the Skippers to the league title this year and was the SSL all-star coach, got some ribbing from some of the other SSL coaches for his oversight. Oh well, I bet he won't have an afternoon practice next year on the day of the game.

Best Dunk Award: To Scituate High's Chris Brown. After the crowd chanted for his return, Ford put Brown back in for the final minute (A good move on Ford's part) and the SHS forward came through with a jam. On the dunk, Brown caught an outlet pass near the right baseline, drove to the hoop and slammed home a two-hander for the game's final basket. The crowd went nuts.

Best Twins Award: To Norwell High sophomore all-stars Meg and Amy Barao. Both played solid games for the winning SSL team (Meg wanted to win so badly she committed a foul that Dennis Rodman would have been proud of against Rockland's Kim Kelsey when the ACL guard had a lay-up with only seconds to go in a close game.) By the way, hoop fans can now tell Meg and Amy apart by their socks. Meg wears black socks at each game while Amy has on white.

Quickest Player Award: To Nicole Dias. The junior point guard picked the pockets of several SSL guards for easy lay-ups off steals during the game. She also drove past the SSL frontline for several driving hoops. She's a big reason why Plymouth North is 19-1 on the season. By the way, she is only a junior. Watch for her at a Division I college school in a couple years.

Best Prime Time Performance: To Scituate High's Seamus Reedy. Everyone knows about the talent of his teammate Chris Brown (voted the SSL's top player by coaches) but Reedy really came through with a standout effort at point guard for the SSL team. He set up teammates, drove to the hoop and played his usual relentless defense. He was the top point guard in the game. His only problem - the announcer totally botched his name during the pre-game intro's. Can you say rehearsal?

The Final Game Award: to Hingham High's Corey Farina. With his team missing a state tourney berth this season, Farina ended his high school hoop career at Norwell High on Friday. However, Farina is no stranger to all-star teams. He is a two-time football, basketball and soon to be baseball all-star.

The No Jitters Award: To Scituate Jessica Blanchard.

Playing in her first all-star game, the sophomore point guard held her own against players like Dias and had some fun along the way. She also found time after the game to add her two cents about a recent Extra Points column. Keep up with the reading and all the great play, Jess.

The Where Are They Now Award: To Mickey Curley and Bill Deftos. Last year Duxbury center Curley and Marshfield guard Deftos led the ACL to a big overtime win against the SSL.Curley now plays hoops for the Boston College Eagles while Deftos plays soccer at Seton Hall. Both were sorely missed by the ACL crew on Friday night.

The Toughest Omissions Award: Hingham guard Melissa Christino and Marshfield guard Renee Gilarde, who were both left off the all-star team by coaches. Freshman Christino helped the Harborwomen reach the state tourney while Gilarde was the leader for a hard-working Marshfield club. Both should have been there but nobody asked me for my vote.

The Clueless Award: To the Old Colony League for not having an all-star game. The SSL stars play the ACL stars in hockey and basketball among other sports while the OCL simply names an all-star team. I know there are only three leagues in the Pilgrim Conference but maybe the OCL could have the league champion team in each sport face a group of all-stars in a game. It would be a great honor for all the players involved and it would also generate some excitement in the sport.

Here's a few fearless state tourney predictions.

*In Division II hockey watch both the Marshfield and Hingham High teams. Both could end up facing each other in the EMass finals in a replay of the '92 season where the Harbormen went on to win the title.

*In Division I hockey, the Silver Lake hockey team will make injured alumni Kevin Stevens proud by advancing into the later rounds. It is the first post-season bid for coach Bill Donovan and he said the team (12-6-2 mark) has still not played it best hockey this season.

In Division III hockey, you gotta love Scituate. It is their first post-season bid since Reagan was in the White House and coach Cooney and the boys are on a huge winning streak. However, the Hanover Indians will be hungry for post-season success this season in their first year in the smaller division.

*In Division III girls basketball, watch out for four teams: Archbishop Williams, led by Kingston sharpshooter Shivonne St. George, Norwell, with the Barao twins, Scituate with standout center Laura McGlynn and hard-charging Abington. Any of the four could get hot and win the whole thing.

And in Division III boys' basketball, everyone believes Cohasset can win it all and I don't disagree. However, if Chris Brown and Seamus Reedy are on their games and the rest of the Sailors play well, they could beat any team as well.

Let the games begin.

Sports Illustrated's most anticipated issue of the year — at least with the male population — hit the newsstands last week. And as is the case every year around this time, SI will be bombarded with letters, the majority of which are from females, vowing to cancel their subscriptions after flipping through the bikini issue.

I don't have a subscription to SI, but I never miss the hubba-hubba photos of some of the most beautiful women in the world. Still, I do have some problems with the bikini issues, and especially the cheesy, behind the scenes TV special, that I just can't keep bottled up. So, rather than spring for the 32 cents and send my gripes to SI, I figured I'd share them with the Extra Points readership.

1) Kathy Ireland's voice: She's a visual beauty, but Ireland's voice would make a boiled dinner run for cover.

2) The haggard director: Now we know what Marge Schott has been doing to fill her free time with the baseball strike still unresolved.

3) The beauties complaining the water's too cold: I'd wear a Speedo at the north pole for the money they're making.

4) Cheryl Tiegs: There's no doubt she's a specimen for a woman her age, but there are better looking girls at the Hanover Mall.

5) The emphasis on the exotic locations: SI could photograph them on the shores of Wollaston Beach at low tide for all I care. I don't get the issue to look at white sand and parrots.

6) The models who say they don't worry about what they eat: The only women who say that are those who write SI to cancel their subscriptions. Long live Oprah!

7) The introduction as to what goes into the elaborate issue: Supposedley, the final product takes a year to plan, photograph and get printed. Now just how tough can it be to pick an exotic location, a half dozen goreous women with one name and a ticket to stardom?

'Skeleton crew' fares well at gymnastics sectionals

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

When Cohasset High's girls gymnastics team was introduced at Saturday night's Division 3 South Sectional meet there something that didn't look quite right.

The Skippers didn't resemble the menacing team that rolled through the South Shore League with a perfect 13-0 record and second consecutive league title.

With two of Cohasset's All-Stars on the sidelines because of sickness, and three others away on vacation, head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni could field just six girls for the meet.

But despite the fact the Skippers had what Ardizzoni termed a "skeleton crew"

No surprise in Freeman's tourney showing

By J[illegible] Reardon
Mariner staff

The only aspect of Cohasset High's zanily successful wrestling season that was expected was the continued domination of senior Ryan Freeman on the mats.

"I knew Ryan was going to do what he did but I didn't expect the season we had," said head coach Torin Sweeney. "I couldn't be happier."

In last weekend's Division 3 state finals, Freeman qualified for the All-State meet for the third consecutive year and all three Cohasset wrestlers placed as the team finished 10th overall.

The 10th-place finish among the 45 squads marked the fourth straight season the Skippers have broken into the top 10.

Freeman will compete in this weekend's meet, courtesy of his second-place showing in the 130-pound weight division.

For awhile it looked as though the personable senior might breeze through the competition. He won his first match handily, 12-1. Freeman then pinned his second opponent and went on to defeat Athol's Mark Caccolifi in the semifinals, 4-2.

It was the finals, however, that provided Freeman's best competition and closest match.

Matched against Wayland's Jake Pequin, Freeman scored a stunning takedown with one second left in regulation time to overcome a two-point deficit and force an overtime period.

Unfortunately, Freeman lost his footing halfway through the match and Pequin managed to pull off a two-point take-down and the victory.

Freeman will be seeded fourth at Saturday's All-State competition.

Kevin Duffy wrestled well and took a fifth place in the 125-pound bracket. He finished 4-2 for the weekend and defeated rival Ben Houston of Rockland on a last-second reversal.

Freshman sensation Tucker Gledhill became the first freshman in Cohasset's wrestling history to place in the state meet. Gledhill finished 3-3 in the 103-pound division, good for sixth place.

Sweeney credited assistant coaches Peter Buckley and Rick Rourke for much of the team's success this winter.

Buckley, the team's first paid assistant coach, spent the first hour of every practice working on the conditioning part of the wrestlers' programs. "That was extremely helpful to me this year," Sweeney said. "It was tremendously important and made a big difference."

Rick Rourke, Sweeney's other assistant, wrestled on the team while attending Cohasset High. He graduated in '86 and has served as a coach for the past nine years.

Nothnagle's lighter side fuels hoopsters on court

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

Dave Nothnagle's leadership capabilities are displayed off the court as well as on by keeping his teammates focused on the game, but loose as well.

With a nickname and a smile for everybody, Nothnagle shows that you don't have to act seriously to be successful in high school basketball.

Head coach Ron Ford commended Nothnagle on his contribution to the Skippers.

"David works extremely hard," Ford said. "He's a solid scorer and could start for other teams and be a top scorer for them. He has done a great job backing up the forward spot, which is filled by two guys who will play at the college level (Joe Slotnick and Jared Hardwick). He's got a great attitude about it and he makes everybody better in practice. You can also see when he comes in that he can fill the role. He's a great scorer. He put in 15 to 20 points a game on the JV level and he's made a big sacrifice playing for us, but he works hard to make the team better.

"Dave's also a kid with a lot of talent in other areas. He was outstanding in the school musical this year and he's got a great sense of humor. A guy like Dave is really valuable to a team. He fills his role, fills it well, and he doesn't complain about it."

Nothnagle's start against Hanover embodied his contribution to the team, as he chipped in his points and defense, but also kept things lively in the locker room before and after the game.

"I thought I played pretty well for my first start of the season," Nothnagle said. "I came out a little nervous, though. The team got off a little slow, but we got it moving in the end with some high and low post moves. We did well and we're looking to be undefeated with two big games left, Hull and Carver."

Nothnagle is a true renaissance man, starting off the year with a strong soccer season, where he has been a four year varsity player for Cohasset. He drew rave reviews for his performance in the school musical, "Guys and Dolls." His basketball season has been excellent and he will be the captain for the third year in a row on Cohasset's strong sailing team.

'Skeleton crew' fares well . . .

compete, she was pleased with the team's 114.7 finish in the competition.

"Considering we had five gymnasts out, I think we did very well," said Ardizzoni. "I think if we had our full lineup we would have finished sixth or seventh.

"Cohasset is not a 114.7 team."

Along with the three team members who could not compete because of family vacation plans, the Skippers had to make-do without All-Stars Megan Pratt and Erica Hettstrom.

Both girls had been ill leading into the meet. Hettstrom missed nearly two weeks of training and was found to have mononucleosis. Pratt had come down with a bad case of the flu.

Ardizzoni was left with the task of figuring which girls would compete where. Normally a team can have six girls in an event with the top-four scoring. But with the Skippers short-handed, every gymnasts' score would be critical.

"It would have made a difference if we had a full team," Ardizzoni said.

She went on to explain the scores appeared low because Cohasset drew the first lot to compete and judges rarely give out very high scores because there are so many gymnasts to follow.

For example, on the floor routine the Skippers had a season average of 8.5. In the sectionals Tara Hettstrom garnered a 7.85, Lauren Genovese followed with a 7.8 and Jodi Colwill and Tafana Fiore scored 7.45 and 7.15, respectively.

Colwill, who averaged 8.1 in the vault during the regular season, finished with a fine 8.0.

Ardizzoni looked on the bright side of the situation. The team remained healthy during the regular season and had five All-Stars, the most ever. And unlike last year, when the Skippers were co-champions with Scituate, this year they beat the Sailors twice and claimed the title for themselves outright.

The team will conduct an exhibition on Wednesday, March 1, at Cohasset High beginning at 6 p.m.

Indoor golf lesson registration

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner level instruction in golf, to be taught by golf pro Dan Neary. Classes are held Thursday evenings, at the Cushing School gym, Scituate, beginning Thursday, March 2.

Openings remain in the 7 and 8 p.m. classes and each session consists of five, one-hour classes. The cost for this program is $60 per person, per session, for all area residents.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size and registrations will be accepted on a first-call enrolled basis.

Special Olympic Games

Exxon employees and retailers from around New England will once again support the Special Olympics Winter Games scheduled for February 27-March 1 at Eastover Resort, Jiminy Peak and Williams College.

During this ski season, participating Exxon dealers will award a $3 discount coupon for lift tickets with each eight-gallon Exxon gasoline fillup; customers then can combine up to three coupons for a total $9 discount.

Participating New England ski areas include: Loon Mountain (NH), Smugglers' Notch (VT), Shawnee Peak (ME), Ski Sundown (CT) and in Massachusetts, Brodie and Wachusett Mountains.

Symbolically, the highlight of the Ski with the Tiger campaign happens February 27-March 1 at Eastover Resort, Jiminy Peak and Williams College when dealers and employees alike will assist at the Winter Games by helping out at events, awarding medals and encouraging and cheering for the athletes.

More than 1,000 Special Olympians will compete in nordic and alpine skiing and other winter sports activities. Special Olympics provides many individuals the opportunity to develop physical fitness, and gain a sense of accomplishment through year-round sports training and competition.

Teen center update

Students of the Social Awareness Organization of Cohasset have made a $50 donation to the Cohasset Teen Center. These students earned the money by recycling bottles and cans at the high school. The teens of Cohasset thank them for their support. Also, a special thanks to Village Fare, Strawberry Parfait, and Hernan Salon for welcoming the Cohasset Teen Center by offering coupons.

A bake sale fundraiser is scheduled for March 5 at St. Anthony's Church. Baked goods can be dropped off anytime Saturday at Betsy Connolly's (1248) or Rosemary O'Connell's (6552).

An important teen meeting is scheduled for Sunday, March 5, at 4 p.m., at the teen center to plan a dance-a-thon. Any interested teens (7th-9th) who can help with this fundraiser are welcome to attend.

Drama workshop at DHS

Deer Hill School will be offering a Drama Workshop to interested students beginning in March, following a performance by Wheelock College's Story Troupe.

Members of Wheelock's staff and troupe will provide workshop training and will oversee the beginning of the program, which is to be an on-going drama group. Any parent or junior high or high school student interested in volunteering to help organize and oversee the project should call Diana Kinch (383-2948) or Deer Hill Reps: Linda Bolster (383-6140) or Helen Garber (383-0119).

The workshops will take place on Thursday afternoons from approximately 1:50 to 3:30 p.m. The goal will be story dramatizations based on literature being taught or discussed within the curriculum.

College Academy program

Area students attended College Academy, a three-week summer program for bright students [illegible] four through eight at Stonehill College last [illegible]. Younger children attended College Gate, a pro[illegible] bright children in kindergarten through grade three at Plymouth River School in Hingham.

Applications for the 1995 sessions of both programs are available now.

Since their beginnings in 1979 and 1982 respectively, both College Academy and College Gate have received the endorsement of educators, administrators, parents, and bright and talented students. College Academy will be at Stonehill College and College Gate will be at the Plymouth River School in Hingham from July 10 to 28. Bus transportation is available to Stonehill College from the South Shore. For additional information or an application, people may call the College Academy office: 617-828-9283.

'New' word on tunnel is old news for train watchers

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

"Building a tunnel is costly and doesn't appear to make any sense," State Secretary of Transportation James Kerasiotes said Tuesday.

Kerasiotes was commenting on alternative 6A, the $95 million short tunnel option for the proposed $214 million restoration of rail service to the Old Colony Greenbush Line, an option he has said on other occasions is "too expensive" and therefore "not viable."

Restoration of rail service with a 3/4- mile tunnel under historic Hingham Square is one of nine transportation alternatives under consideration by the MBTA to serve the coastal South Shore and is supported by a majority of members in the state appointed Citizens Advisory Committee. The endorsement of 6A by the CAC was a long fought for compromise among the representatives who come from towns all along the Greenbush corridor, but it has not won over Kerasiotes who considers the price tag for this compromise too high.

The "T" is expected to release its environmental impact report within a few weeks, after which a 60 day public comment period, to include two public hearings, will begin.

In preparation for the release of the long awaited report, Cohasset will spend $15,000 to hire consultants Camp, Dresser and McKee to analyze the study and

Cohasset native soars onto National Safety Board

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

Former Cohasset resident Robert Francis is still flying high from his recent presidential appointment to Vice Chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board (NSTB).

And while his aviation work has taken him all over the world, Francis said his heart still belongs to Cohasset.

Francis is a Derby Academy and Williams College graduate, and even though he left here more than 30 years ago, still considers himself very much a "New Englander."

Having lived all over the world, when asked where he comes from Francis has a wide selection of cities and countries to name, but instinctively says "Massachusetts."

"We're very much based in New England psychologically," said Francis, who keeps his Cohasset connection and returns here two or three times each year for fishing, sailing and lobstering.

Francis left the South Shore in the early '60s and from 1964 to 1971 worked for the State Department in Washington D.C. and Algiers.

Returning to the states briefly, Francis offered support to Derby school chum Gerry Studds, who was running for Congress for the first time.

Studds lost the 1970 election, and Francis went back to Algiers only to return a couple of years later to serve as Studds' administrative assistant and chief of staff, following his first successful bid for Congress, from 1973-1977.

Through his work with Congress, Francis met several aviation officials and found a way to combine his interest in aviation and skills in international language in working for the FAA.

Starting off as a Congressional relations officer for the FAA during the Carter Administration, Francis later worked as a special assistant to the Director of the European Office in Brussels, and as manager of the Southern Region's Policy Plans and International Office. Francis also led safety and security aviation seminars in South and Central America, as well as having regulatory responsibility for foreign air carriers serving the United States.

In his 20 years in aviation, Francis, a pilot himself,

Call is out for firefighter review

Selectmen Jane Goedecke and Merle Brown will be heading a new committee that will provide a comprehensive analysis of the Cohasset call firefighters.

The board is looking for three other residents to serve on the committee with them, along with the fire chief, a permanent firefighter, and a call firefighter who will serve as ex officio members.

Executive secretary Gregory Doyon said the board wants a committee to look at how the call firefighters are used and trained, as well as how many are needed.

Doyon explained that Cohasset now has 22 permanent firefighters on regular duty, and 21 call men who respond to emergencies when extra manpower is needed.

Ambulatory items sought

The Rotary Club of Cohasset in cooperation with Rotary International and the Rotary Clubs of Hingham and Los Angeles, California are participating in a project that will bring much needed medical supplies, beds and ambulatory care items to the country of Costa Rica.

For their part of the project, the Cohasset Rotarians will be soliciting donations of used ambulatory care items such as crutches, canes, walkers and wheelchairs. The club will send a Rotarian to pick up any items that Cohasset or surrounding community residents have that they wish to donate. For added convenience, there will be a Cohasset Rotarian at the Lightkeepers House on Government Island the morning of Feb. 25, from 10 a.m. to noon, to receive any items that residents wish to deliver.

To schedule a pick-up, call Austin Lyne at 383-6550, Ron Goodwin at 383-6355 or Brian Noble at 749-5565.

Wire Supt. protests new hours

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

A frustrated Wire Supt. Stephen Wigmore prevailed on selectmen to save him from a budget cut that would reduce his hours from 40 to 35 each week.

"For 28 years, the advisory committee has held a gun to the wire department's head," Wigmore said when he arrived at Monday's selectmen's meeting after watching it on cable television.

Wigmore said he was willing to reduce his overtime budget by $2,568 and cut funds for temporary employees by $1,500.

Selectmen originally planned to recommend the overtime cut only, maintaining the temporary employee funds, reasoning that Wigmore needed another worker from time to time. But the superintendent assured the board that when he needs extra help, he has been able to call on the highway department.

Selectmen were sympathetic, noting they had voted a recommendation asking the advisory committee to make the cuts Wigmore proposed.

"Overtime, you can have it all," he said.

As superintendent, Wigmore is the town's electrician. The wire department, which at one time had three workers, also maintains the town's fire alarm system and traffic lights and inspects residential wiring.

Wigmore asked the board to support his regular hours for 18 months "and then I'll go out on retirement." He added that he did not want to beg for funds from town meeting.

He told the board Monday that the wire department has absorbed a disproportionate share of budget cuts over the years.

"There are lots of departments that haven't been touched like the wire department," he said.

New election hours proposed

Town meeting voters will be asked to approve a by-law amendment that will allow the selectmen to reduce the town election polling hours.

Monday, selectmen approved the amendment that could allow the polls to be open for as little as four hours, at the board's discretion. The polls are now open for the town election from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Although the change would not go into effect for this year's town election, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said the town could save money if there is another uncontested town election in the future.

However, Selectman Martha Gjesteby said the regular 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. hours should be continued to give the voters "consistency."

Selectman Merle Brown noted that the by-law change continues to allow the board to set the hours and would only allow the the option of reduced hours.

Cohasset native soars onto National Safety Board has had significant experience in accident investigation, including the Korean Air Lines flight 007 shot down over the Pacific Ocean in 1983, and the Pan Am flight 103 bombing over Lockerbie, Scotland.

Currently he participates in the Flight Safety Foundation sponsored ICARUS committee, a group of world-wide aviation experts who gather informally to share ideas on reducing human error in the cockpit.

Still, Francis maintains that "statistically, flying is the safest way to travel, and we're always trying to make it safer."

There is no conclusive proof that any one airline is safer than another or that jumbo jets are safer than commuter planes, he said.

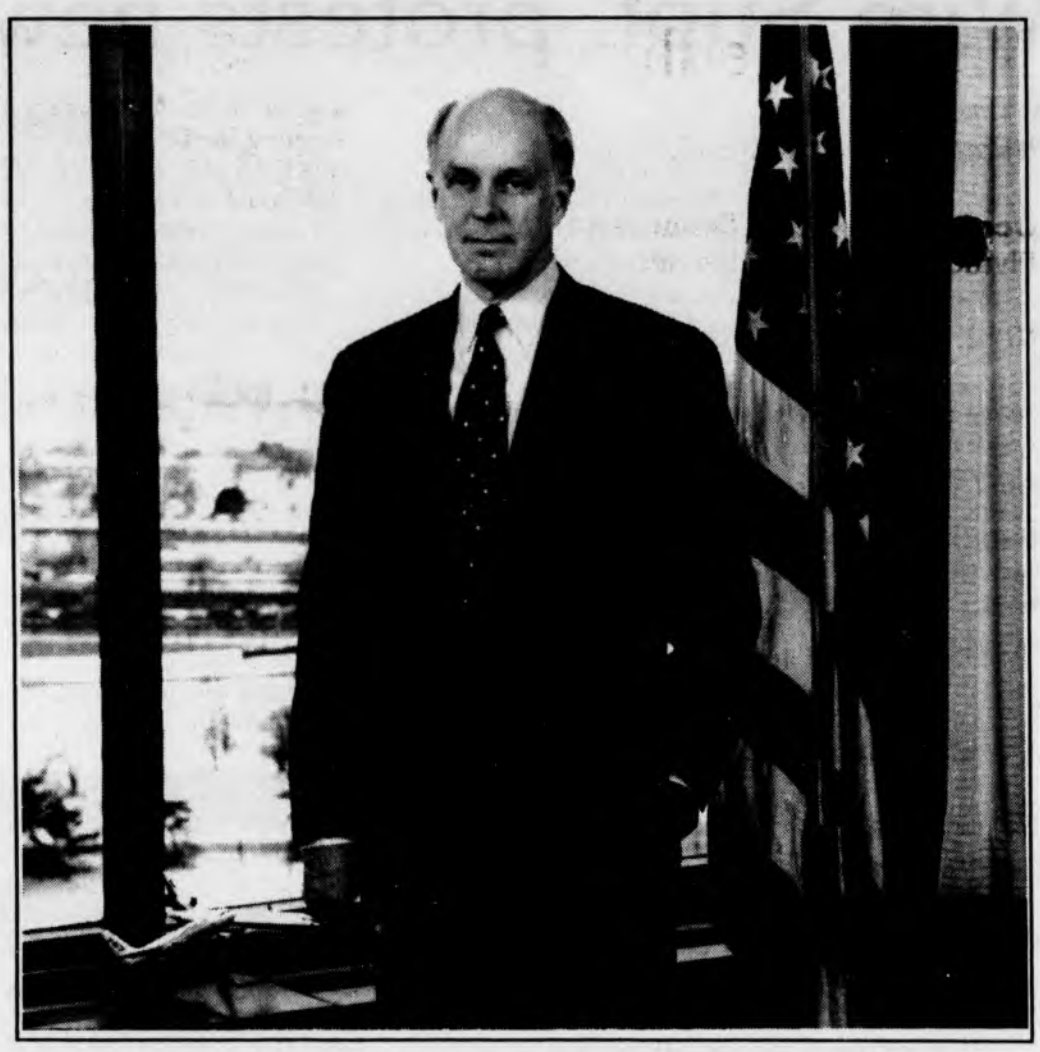
"Airplanes are becoming remarkably reliable with increased automation, auto pilots and computer navigation systems," said Francis, who noted that investigations often lean more toward man/machine interface issues.

Francis also maintained that there is no evidence that deregulation has been a factor in compromising safety and maintenance in planes, but noted that the FAA does look more closely at carriers having financial difficulties as a precautionary measure.

As vice chairman of the NTSB, Francis will be involved with safety issues in all modes of transportation - everything from trucks and trains to buses and boats.

For aviation, he will now conduct accident investigations in cooperation with the FAA, and make recommendations to improve safety.

Just last week at an NTSB board meeting, Francis made a recommendation to require that the FAA increase the recording length of the cockpit flight recorder - the notorious "black box" - which, Francis pointed out, is actually orange so that in case of an accident, it can be more easily found amid the wreckage.



Robert Francis

Currently, the recorders tape for 30 minutes and then tape over the preceding minutes, gradually erasing the previous half hour. Francis said it would be helpful to have more than a half hour of tape to go on in solving an investigation.

Having worked with the FAA, Francis will have a valuable perspective to offer to the NTSB and said there is nothing to the jibes from his fellow board members that he will be "soft" on the FAA.

"If you're working for the government, you're working for the taxpayers," he said.

Francis, who said he was both pleased and surprised by the appointment, will serve a five-year term on the board which expires Dec. 31, 1999.

If he does not seek reappointment, Francis may exchange his wings for a fishing rod, and return to Cohasset's rocky coast. But he admits he's also considered Gloucester, which he noted has an advantage to his former home town: "It has a train into Boston."

News from SSAC

The South Shore Art Center is currently displaying the 1995 New England Juried Photography Exhibition, with a featured gallery artist's exhibit, through March 26. Free docent talks are scheduled for March 12 and 19 at 2 p.m.

Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m. The gift shop is open during gallery hours and features crafts by area artists, pottery, gourds and jewelry.

Registrations are being accepted for spring and summer courses and vacation art camps. Children's classes for the new term include papier maché, painted wood sculpture, clay, pottery, exploring with video and photography.

Adult courses offered include watercolor, oil painting, papermaking, monoprinting, oriental brush painting, art welding, photography, clay and pottery.

A "Take Credit for Your Art" class will be offered June 26 through July 14 for qualifying high school students. The course includes instruction, exhibition and Massachusetts College of Art credits. For a complete catalog, fees or to register call 383-ARTS.

'New' word on tunnel is old news for train watchers

help prepare the town's response to it. And while a tunnel will not run through Cohasset, its neighbor's push for the tunnel option has delayed the process, raising more questions among residents and a board of selectmen which is split on the issue.

A final decision on a preferred transportation alternative is expected some time in May.

"We remain in a public process," said Kerasiotes who noted that if something in that process demonstrates that the tunnel option makes sense, "I'm here to be convinced."

But Nancy Buckley, founder of the anti-train Coastal Coalition is not sure Kerasiotes can be convinced of anything.

"His statements fly in the face of the democratic process," said Buckley. "I'm astounded by his statements. There is no justification for this administration to approve a train project with or without a tunnel."

Buckley, a Hingham resident, said earlier that if the "T" decided on the train, she would support the tunnel option to protect Hingham Square.

Kerasiotes' statements were not news nor were they surprising to William Grimes, a CAC member and founder of the Pro-train Back on Track movement.

"I've never heard him (Kerasiotes) praise the tunnel," Grimes said. "I'm not surprised. Many people question both the cost and the need for a tunnel."

But Grimes said he will continue to support the CAC's decision which he pointed out "sends a strong message to the state, but is not binding."

Grimes said he wants to remain involved in the process which ever way it turns.

"I don't want to sand the flames or put more fuel into it," he said. "We have to follow the process and stay calm."

Equally unsurprised by Kerasiotes' comments was Hingham Historical Commission Chairman and CAC member Alexander Macmillan, who said that this was nothing that Kerasiotes had not said before.

"It's not surprising," he said, adding "the MBTA wants to build the railroad as cheaply as possible."

But Macmillan, who has been charged with protecting Hingham's historical assets, pointed out that the final decision will not be made by the state.

"His (Kerasiotes) position is clear and predictable, but it is only one factor," said Macmillan, who maintained that the Federal Transportation Administration will choose any alternatives.

In Cohasset, Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said the town is playing the waiting game in this slow process and noted that several town boards are working on specific areas and issues and are considering the impacts to the town. Doyon said that there will be a public meeting scheduled to discuss the town's concerns about the train, after the report is released.

In Hingham, both Macmillan and Grimes have suggested the benefit of building a united front, a town-wide consensus on the tunnel option to better convince the state that it is the best solution to the region's transportation needs and one that Hingham can live with.

Kerasiotes will not give Hingham any false hopes where the tunnel is concerned.

"While some will say this is an irresponsible thing to say, it's honest. You've got to be straight with people," he said, adding "it would be irresponsible of me as a public official to say the tunnel is a likely option. There's no justification for the dollars that would go into it."

State closes Briggs Harbor clam beds

By Rob Rogers
Mariner staff

Rising levels of pollution have prompted the state to close one section of the Cohasset Harbor clam flats it opened earlier this year.

Officials from the Department of Marine Fisheries (DMF) have closed the tangled mass of river inlets known as Briggs Harbor to clamdigging for the remainder of the year. The area was conditionally opened on Oct. 1, 1994 for winter clamming only, and was scheduled to close on April 30, 1995. DMF biologists say an unusually warm winter may have contributed to the rising levels of fecal coliform bacteria detected in the harbor.

"Because of the warmer winter water, we had expected that the levels in that area would not meet with our approval, and they did not," said DMF head shellfish biologist Frank Germano, who ordered the flats closed on Feb. 23. "The levels in the area are not high — about 22 or 23 colonies per 100 milliliters, or half a glass of drinking water. You wouldn't think about closing an area to swimmers unless the levels were at least 200, and the state doesn't mandate closure to swimmers until they reach 1,000. Our standards for shellfish are very high, however, because they are filter feeders who tend to accumulate pollutants. Any bacteria levels over 14 could pose a health risk to someone who ate them."

The rest of the recently-opened Cohasset Harbor clam flats, stretching from the Glades to Bassings Beach, remain open for clamming. Another section of shellfish beds near the mouth of the North River is scheduled for conditional opening in December of 1995.

"These were seasonally opened clam beds that have been prematurely closed," said Scituate clam warden Joseph Strazdes. "We don't anticipate that pollution levels will prevent us from being able to open the flats next year on Oct. 1. In the mean time, there are plenty of flats in the harbor that are still open for clamming."

Authorities have not yet determined the cause of the pollution that has raised bacteria levels in the harbor area. Officials initially believed the contamination may have been caused by runoff from the Hatherly Country Club area, the sometime home of flocks of Canada geese.

"We suspect it may have to do with the runoff generated by waterfowl," Germano said. "When we measure fecal coliform levels, we don't differentiate between bacteria caused by animal waste and that caused by human waste. A single Canada goose can produce up to three and a half pounds of waste per day. If there's a lot of runoff from the golf course where they congregate, that could be what we're picking up."

Yet observers report that few geese have remained in the area to pollute the golf course over the winter.

"It's very difficult and very expensive to pinpoint the source for this kind of pollution," said North and South Rivers Watershed Association director Debbie Lenahan. "I can't imagine that there is a significant Canada goose population over there right now. If there was, it would certainly be a contributing factor."

"We don't have any geese in the area right now," said Don Peshil, maintenance mechanic for the Hatherly Country Club. "During the summertime, we may have a couple hundred or so. Even now, we may have a few on the back side of the course. But there have been none on the side where the clam beds are. They tend to stay in the woods and out of the fairways, anyway."

"One way to find out if the pollution is coming from birds is to test for streptococci bacteria," Lenahan said. "The human gastrointestinal system tends to contain a lot of e. coli bacteria, while strep is much more common in birds. Unfortunately, it's a very costly test to perform."

Determining other sources of pollution in the area may be just as expensive, Lenahan warns.

"One common source of pollution is failed septic systems," Lenahan said. "To find out, you have to track the flow of pollution from storm drains , come up with a map of the septic systems in the area, and then try to follow the pollution back to its source as accurately as possible. It's a costly, time-intensive search process. That could be difficult for a town with one health agent to do. But it's something they have to do. If it's too much work for one person, they should hire other people who can do it. The DMF will obviously do the best they can to help with the situation, but it isn't really their job — it's the town's responsibility."

Strazdes and Scituate health agent Jennifer Sullivan says the board of health plans to mount an investigation of the situation once the cold winter months are over.

"There is an obvious pollution source in the area in the form of the Cohasset waste water treatment plant," Strazdes said. "But there are also a number of birds and animals in the area who could be contributing to the pollution, as well as several non-point pollution sources, such as septic systems, of which we have no visible signs at the moment. We plan to look further into the issue of non-point sources at a later date."

The Cohasset Harbor clam beds have been a source of controversy since their reopening last October. Cohasset selectmen have criticized Scituate for forcing Cohasset residents to purchase out-of-town licenses to dig in an area adjacent to their harbor and patrolled by Cohasset police. Scituate selectmen have refused to grant Cohasseteers in-town licenses on the grounds that it would open the gates for residents of other neighboring towns to ask for similar treatment.

Several professional diggers from the North Shore have also been arrested in the area for attempting to remove more than their legal limit of clams from the flats.

Support Daffodil Days

The American Cancer Society's popular Daffodil Days project will bring a touch of spring to the South Shore with the delivery of thousands of the bright yellow flowers on March 21-23.

Advance orders for daffodils will be taken until March 10. The goal this year is to sell as many as 150,000 of the flowers. Proceeds will support the Cancer Society's program of education, research and service in the fight against cancer.

Orders for the flowers, at $5 for a bunch of 10, may be called in to the office of the South Shore Unit of the Society, (617) 341-4210. Matching vases are also available for $5. Orders for three or more bunches will be delivered to a home or business, with pick-up available at several CVS stores and other locations.

Many Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Weymouth and Scituate residents are participating in Daffodil Days, under the leadership of Pauline and Dennis Sweeney of Quincy, whose teams have consistently set records among all Society units in the state in the past.

The flowers are grown on the West Coast and harvested in bud form. They are flown to New England in a temperature-controlled environment and delivered to distribution centers where they are picked up by volunteers. The buds burst into bloom when placed in water overnight.

A long-time active worker for Daffodil Days is Al Odermatt of Cohasset, who takes advance orders, arranges pick-up spots, sells the flowers at supermarkets and delivers them.

The American Cancer Society uses the proceeds to fund such activities as free mammograms, seminars for health professionals, public education programs in schools and businesses and free transportation for cancer patients needing daily treatment.

When you read about Abby McAdams last week, did you wonder who it was? With good reason!! It should have read Abby (Adams) Greer! Anyway, Abby is hopeful that her husband, Ken, will be a member of the San Francisco Giants. He is in Scottsdale, Arizonia for try-outs—course, a lot depends on when the strike is settled too, so there is another thing to hope for! Anyway Abby, sorry for the error !

Tuesday, February 21st, the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset treated the residents of the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home to a delightful tea. Flowers adorned the pink linen covered tables and each resident was given a floral corsage or boutonniere. Everyone was wearing a festive straw hat of course! A touch of spring was in the air, that's for sure! The tea sandwiches and goodies were elegant, and a good time was had by all. What a wonderful idea!

Sr. Anne Monica, Principal of Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, is pleased to announce the honor roll for the second marking period of the school year, and two Cohasset residents "made the grade". Congratulations go to Julie Catalano, who made the Principal's List, and Danielle Nohe, who made First Honors.

We also heard from Xaverian Brothers High School, where honor roll students were recognized at a ceremony for their efforts. Matthew K. Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kevin F. Lewis, earned himself First Honors, and he should be very pleased with himself!

Just to let you know how far reaching the train controversy has reached, read on! The current todo has gone to Florida! From coolish and too rainy Florida, Connie Parker, longtime Cohasset resident and long prominent in the Cohasset Historical Society, has been following developments in the Mariner and called a friend here to recall how the railroad helped get her family going in the morning! "The train about quarter of seven meant 'Wake up'; the one at seven o'clock meant 'Get up'; and the one about quarter past meant, 'get going or you'll miss the school bus,'" Connie said, minimizing safety concerns. For many of her years in town, Connie and family lived in a number of locations near the railroad. Real old-timers remember her father, Gus Petersen, as the leading local realtor of the first quarter of the century, and the founder of the family real estate business prominent until a few years ago.

We were in Boston last week, and while there went by the site of the Brinks robbery. We were talking about the event, and our granddaughter became so interested that we decided to go to the Paul Pratt Library when we returned home, to research it for her. Since I know nothing about computers, I went to the desk to ask for help, and could not believe how helpful (and knowledgeable) everyone was, especially Sue Pope. She not only looked up the information for us, she reserved some books for us, and was very happy to help! Another reason to be glad that we live in our little town of Cohasset!! Thank you, Sue.

Our hats go off to Cheryl Sargent this week, what a super person she is!! As many of you know, Cheryl's son, Jesse, has been fighting a brave battle against Hodgkin's disease and Sharon was unable to find a support group to help both of them handle the ordeal. She will be reinstituting an inactive chapter of Candlelighters Childhood Cancer Foundation. Its first meeting will be March 8 in South Shore's Hospital Pratt 5 North Conference room. The group will offer support, information to local families dealing with cancer, and sharing experiences with one another. Candlelighters will meet every month for two hours, and Sharon has lots of ideas and hopes for the group. For more information call Sharon at 383-1878. We wish you every success with your endeavor Sharon, you are some gal!!!

Now that things are back to "normal", why not take the time to give me a buzz and let us all in on your news! We'd all love it!

First Parish Cabaret is rich in harmony

There is nothing like the sound of music, of sweet voices blending together in harmony, to lift the dragging mid-March spirits. First Parish's Cabaret '95 – "Those Were The Days" will do just that with performances March 18 and 19, featuring two selections of barbershop harmony by a cast of talented singers.

When have you last heard the romantic tune "Lida Rose"? This tender reminiscence of love will be sung in the traditional four-part harmony by the Kornet, Kornet, Raltner and Nakashima Quartet.

Both John Kornets know about the connection between music and romance. John II met his wife Pokey when his Dartmouth Injunaires did a joint concert with Pokey's school. John III, a former member of Dartmouth's Glee Club and Dodecaphonics, met his wife in London while attending a music foreign study program. Both first met "Lida Rose" when they sang this song in eighth grade.

John II will sing lead for this performance and John III will harmonize with his Dad as the quartet tenor. The enormous musical talent of this Cohasset family is known to many, and it is always a treat to hear them perform.

Teaming up with the Kornets is Dan Raltner, whose love for and experience with music is slowly becoming known to the community. Formerly the bass player for a band called Guys With Ties and currently a member of the choir at First Parish, Dan first appeared as Professor Harold Hill in a performance in Cincinnati some years back. He will sing bass in the quartet.

"The quartet has a sort of Greek Chorus role in 'Music Man' weaving in and out," says talented baritone Mike Nakishima. 'Lida Rose" is a song about a woman Professor Harold once knew. It's a sweet song about love. I've always wanted to sing 'Lida Rose' in four-part harmony and this year's Cabaret is my chance." Mike is a member of the First Parish choir. He has sung with the Unicorn singers as well and is co-producer with Jeanne Scammel of this year's show. Jeanne will sing the female response to the men's barbershop harmony.

Women always seem to be doing four things at once, so it makes great sense to hear women's voices come together in four-part harmony. Leaving the song of love to the men, they will sing a jazzy rendition of "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Melodic strains overheard at a recent rehearsal were so alive and delicious, it's hard to wait for the show in three weeks. The harmonists, a double quartet plus some, are led by Anne Reel, a tenor and the group's artistic director. Reel is a veteran Sweet Adeline (female barbershop harmony singers) who now blends her love of music, her community activities and her First Parish choir singing with mothering two young children.

Sine Pounder, known locally as the former owner of the Bread Shop and who still bakes wonderful Scandinavian goodies, is also a choir member and the director of Quincy's Afterschool Childcare Program. Sine and Jeanne Scammel, a marvelous church soloist and member of the Unicorn singers, will team up to sing the lead.

The lovely voices of seventh-graders Erin Johnson and Grace Gardner, also from the choir, will carry the tenor tune. DeeDee Rousseau, with a voice as pretty as the many gardens she designs; Anny Newman, a retired professor who mothers, grandmothers and, with Rousseau, sings with the Broad Cove Chorale; and our own former school committeewoman and choir member Barbara Bliss, will carry the bass. Lisa Koed, Tricia Morse and Chartis Langmaid, all members of the First Parish choir, will weave their baritone harmony in with all the mothering and community and professional work they do at Talbots, Lotus and Hunneman, respectively, as well. Each voice on its own is a fine musical instrument. The combination of these voices in four-part harmony is stunning.

These two acts and more will be performed at Cabaret '95 – "Those Were The Days." Two performances are scheduled, the first for Saturday evening, March 18, beginning with a lavish reception at 7 p.m., followed by a sparkling music revue at 8 p.m.; and Sunday afternoon, March 19, at 3 p.m. at the First Parish House on Main Street in Cohasset. Sunday's matinee will include numbers by the parish's junior choir and mini singers. Child care for those not yet interested in theater is available on request. Tickets, on sale at the church office, are $20 (reception included) for Saturday, reserved seating, and $10 for adults, $5 for school-age children on Sunday (open seating). Members of Saturday's audience who attend again with their children Sunday will be admitted free.

Local businesses and professionals have an opportunity to advertise in the program and support the work of First Parish, which includes community-wide educational programs and free transitional shelter for homeless women and children. Calling card size ads are $25. Full page ads are $100 and there are other sizes as well. It is an excellent opportunity for advertising the talents and services of local businesses as well as enjoying the entertaining talents of others. For information, call 383-1100 between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m., Monday through Thursday, or stop by the church office at 23 North Main St., Cohasset.

A coast unguarded

The federal government's plan to scrap Coast Guard Station Scituate is a mistake of potentially tragic proportion.

As part of big government down sizing the First Coast Guard District, at the prodding of the House Committee on Transportation, aims to save $6 million by snapping shut three of its stations. The Scituate, Boston and Martha's Vineyard closures — slated for Sept. 30 — combined with a winter, seasonal shut down of the station at Provincetown, will leave the area thinly covered and in all likelihood unable to respond to simultaneous calls.

We recognize that the Scituate closing may fall under the shadow of the proposal to shut the South Weymouth Naval Air Base. Indeed, the function of the Coast Guard in Cape Cod and Massachusetts bays differs from the duties of stations elsewhere and may not always garner national attention. But while Florida's fleet is boarding vessels crammed with illegal aliens or firing a warning shot across the bow of suspected drug smugglers, the men and women of Coast Guard Station Scituate may well be saving the life of a fisherman or recreational boater.

Since 1992, the Scituate station has responded to nearly 500 search-and-rescue calls in the area between Black Rock in Cohasset and Marion Rocks in Manomet. In that same time, they have boarded more than 1,100 vessels, averting potential tragedies by pointing out safety violations, arresting drunken boaters and enforcing new fishing restrictions.

Even with the added presence of the Coast Guard, 10 boaters have perished in the turbulent waters of the New Inlet since 1983, swallowed by swirling currents where the mouths of the North and South rivers butt.

Just last week, the call was out to rescue two Scituate fishermen whose boat had iced in in Plymouth Harbor. While the men were ultimately airlifted by Air Station Cape Cod, the Scituate fleet was the first to respond.

Without the service of the Scituate station, lives and property will be lost, boater education programs and spot checks will lag, and fishing regulations vital to the protection of our lobster and Atlantic groundfish stock will go unenforced. Harbormasters will be forced to undergo firefighter training to combat boat fires, and in times of severe weather coastal residents will be left to reckon with one less contingent of safety personnel.

In the Halloween Storm of 1991, Coast Guardsmen who were unable to get back to their station because of flooding joined local firefighters in rescuing a half dozen residents from Cedar Point in Scituate, braving broken gas mains, flying debris and chest deep swells. Over the years, coastal dwellers have attributed hundreds of such stories to the men and women of the Coast Guard.

And if the safety aspects aren't convincing enough, consider that last year alone nearly $550,000 of federal tax dollars was spent refurbishing the station's boat house and pier.

There is little question that government must learn to "grow down." But such hasty decisions, with little advance study and no local input generally cost more then they set out to save. Let's urge our representatives in Congress to rethink this issue.

McNabb not running

John K. McNabb, Jr., has announced that "I'm not running for the Board of Health at this time." He did not return his nomination papers by the 5 p.m. deadline Monday, Feb. 6.

"After I did not get the temporary appointment from a majority of the selectmen and board of health," said McNabb, "I reevaluated my time commitments for running a campaign and for serving on the board in the next year. I'll be too busy. I had been considering applying to law school, and now hope to attend nights part time starting this fall. Also, I am busy with my consulting business and other personal commitments.

"Since the board of health will need to work closely with the board of selectmen on many important matters in the upcoming year, their vote against my appointment was not a vote of confidence in myself nor a good sign that we could work well together.

"I am still vitally concerned about how the BOH will deal with the Cohasset Heights landfill, but feel I can still be effective, as I have been for the last few years, dealing with CHL from the outside as a member of SAFE."

Foundation sponsors teacher program

By Jim Kinch
Cohasset Education Foundation

The Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) announced a grant of $4,000 to sponsor the Skillful Teacher Program, a program designed to support professional excellence in Cohasset public schools. This project provides teachers with an expansive set of instructional tools and methods to meet the diverse learning needs of all students.

School committeeman Jim Kirk called the program, "An investment in the professional software of our system and an important step in preparing Cohasset's teachers for the challenges of the 90s."

The Skillful Teacher training program was initiated with a pilot seminar for 10 teachers in early 1994, followed by the first phase of implementation, training for the Cohasset High School teachers. The CEF is helping to underwrite in the second phase, training for 22 teachers from the Joseph Osgood School. The course has garnered significant support. One of the attractive and most rewarding components is the response of the teachers themselves:

"One of the best courses I have ever taken in terms of professional development..." (Ed Leary, High School faculty)

"'Understanding Teaching' has been a godsend... the most practical course I have ever taken...provided support and solutions that have directly improved my classroom performance.." Jack Packard, HS faculty)

"The course has direct impact ... I have incorporated many of the strategies. As a supervisor I have more open and constructive discussions with my staff regarding teaching kids with varying learning styles. " (Dorothy Wondolowski, HS Faculty Supervisor)

This enthusiasm and positive feedback was the compelling fact in the decision to expand the pilot program. The utility of the skills prompted School

commentary

Superintendent Steve Hart to note, "... the course is the most popular we've ever sponsored... it has met with near universal acclaim within the system."

One of only a handful of similar programs ongoing in Massachusetts, the course, offered by Research for Better Teaching, consists of a three-hour weekly lecture from 3 to 6 p.m. Running a total of 10 weeks, the course is the equivalent of three graduate credits.

Teaching is a craft. Like crafts people, teachers develop competence and artistry through a combination of practice and research in their specialty. The students are always challenging the teacher and the teacher must develop new ways of keeping the student involved and engaged. However few teachers have the time or opportunity to take courses which teach the science of teaching. This training is intended to be part of a cycle of continuous improvement of teaching and learning in the Cohasset Public Schools.

Rick Shea, the President of the CEF, stated, "This program offers Cohasset's teachers new tools and techniques for the classroom. We are pleased to lend our support to such a practical hands-on approach to teacher training." The CEF sees this program as an important component in the continuing effort to enhance the quality of the learning experience within the Cohasset school system.

The Cohasset Education Foundation is a non-profit local education foundation created in 1992 to support and promote academic initiative and excellence in the Cohasset public schools. To learn more about these programs and goals of the CEF and how you can assist write Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O. Box 224, 02025, or call 383-2833.

DHS has new CD Rom

The Deer Hill School computer lab now has a new CD Rom, thanks to those who filled out certificates for the Investment in Teaching Program, sponsored by the Bank of Boston.

The school's next goal is a camcorder. Residents are encouraged to fill out certificates when conducting business at the bank. DHS will receive 100 points toward the camcorder for each certificate that is filled out. The deadline is March 30.

For further information call Linda Bolster (383-6148) or Helen s (383-0119).

Drama workshop delayed

The Deer Hill Drama Workshop scheduled to begin in March under the direction of Wheelock College's Story Troupers, will be postponed until April due to the inability of a few of the actors to participate in March. The new dates will be announced next week.

Parent and junior and senior high school student volunteers are still needed to help direct the workshop. It is hoped that DHS will be able to offer the class as an on-going workshop this year and in the future.

The Wheelock staff will be on hand during the first month to guide the process of putting together a performance, as well as offering instruction in acting techniques, movement, stage managing, prop building and script writing to any interested Deer Hill student.

Junior and senior high school students will work with Deer Hill children on a weekly basis, tentatively on Thursdays, from 2 to 3:30 p.m. On early release days the workshop will be scheduled from 12:45 to 2:30 p.m.

For further information call any of the following people: Diana Kinch (383-2948), Linda Bolster (383-6148) or Helene Garber (383-0119). The project is being sponsored by the Cohasset PSO.

PSO auction is bluesy affair

The Cohasset Parent/School Organization will hold its silent auction Friday, March 3, from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Chart House Restaurant with special entertainment provided by award winning blues performers The Susan Tedeschi Band.

Light hors d'oeuvres will be served at 8:30 p.m. with finger desserts and coffee to follow. Valet parking is limited so early arrival is encouraged.

A sampling of silent auction items includes a ski weekend getaway, diamond tennis bracelet, a Notre Dame football jacket, and a print signed by artist Jean Replogle.

Admission is $20. For tickets call Kate Abbruzzese at 383-9317, Ed Connolly at 383-1248 or Ellen Sanchez at 383-6911. Proceeds will benefit the Deer Hill, Osgood and high schools.

Teen center update

Students of the Social Awareness Organization of Cohasset have made a $50 donation to the Cohasset Teen Center. These students earned the money by recycling bottles and cans at the high school. The teens of Cohasset thank them for their support. Also, a special thanks to Village Fare, Strawberry Parfait, and Hernan Salon for welcoming the Cohasset Teen Center by offering coupons.

A bake sale fundraiser is scheduled for March 5 at St. Anthony's Church. Baked goods can be dropped off anytime Saturday at Betsy Connolly's (1248) or Rosemary O'Connell's (6552).

An important teen meeting is scheduled for Sunday, March 5, at 4 p.m., at the teen center to plan a dance-a-thon. Any interested teens (7th-9th) who can help with this fundraiser are welcome to attend.

PAC to meet March 7

The Parents' Advisory Council will meet in the Deer Hill library on Tuesday, March 7, at 7:30 p.m. Alicia Shea, director of student services for the Cohasset public schools, will introduce the new Individual Educational Plan form and will discuss the Annual Plan for Special Education in Cohasset schools.

For further information call Joann Pilczak at 383-0268 or Ann Whiteley at 383-9310.

CDC presents 'Earnest'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "The Importance of Being Earnest" on March 10, 11, 17, 18, 24 and 25 at 8 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall, Highland St. A March 15 performance will benefit the Amarylis Foundation/Robin's Nest and proceeds from a March 22 presentation of the play will go to the Cohasset Appalachia Services Project.

"Earnest" is a masterful Oscar Wilde drawing room comedy of "manufactured" mistaken identity and the farcical foibles of upper crust London circa 1890. The play was first performed on Feb. 14, 1895.

Tickets, which are $8 per person, or $6 for groups of six or more, are available at Cohasset Hardware, Buttonwood Bookstore in Cohasset, Front St. Bookstore, Scituate, and at the door. For further information call 383-2151.

From front, Chris Mahoney, Laura Lee Hupprich, Roland St. Clair Barrie and Jennifer Burns, join (back row) Jessica McDonald, Charles Dattola, John Rice, Betty Miessner and Bruce Wilson in the Cohasset Dramatic Club's performance of the "The Importance of Being Earnest" opening on March 10 at Cohasset Town Hall. For ticket information call 383-2151.

SSAC hosts opera event

The South Shore Art Center, in cooperation with the Boston Lyric Opera, is offering a creative opera event on Thursday, March 9, from 7 to 9 p.m., featuring a seminar on "Candide" with opera scholar Richard Beams.

A ticket to the sold-out performance of "Candide" on Sunday, March 19, at 3 p.m. at the Emerson Majestic Theatre is included in the event.

Richard Clement and Lisa Saffer star in this satirical opera. The music of Leonard Bernstein brings the story to life.

Beams is a nationally recognized scholar of the opera, renowned for his ongoing opera class at Pine Manor College. The seminar, to be held at the SSAC, will include listening to key parts of the opera and discovering underlying themes to make the performance more meaningful.

For reservations call (617) 383-ARTS. Admission for the seminar and opera is $55/member, $65/non-member. Admission to the seminar only is $12/member and $15/non-member.

MBTA is railroading residents

To the Editor:

Please find below my comments made at the most recent CAC meeting in Weymouth regarding the Greenbush commuter train. It sums up my experiences and was well-received by the audience that crowded into town hall that night:

Despite the fact that Cohasset and Hingham voted down the train, it appears we will get it anyway. This, despite a projected low ridership of 1,336 new riders (by the year 2010). Despite the high annual operating costs of more than $20 million, which will further burden towns with higher fees, we will get this train.

Despite the fact that 105 decibel-110 decibel horns/bells will ring from the Scituate/Cohasset border to Weymouth, though 25 plus grade crossings, we will have this train. Despite a projected two percent reduction in Boston-bound traffic, we will get the train.

Despite lingering Safety and Environmental issues...we will get the train. And despite the proven success of the Hingham water shuttle, we will still get the train.

It appears now that the scheduled Pubic Hearing sessions are a "joke" as the MBTA has already made its decision. Our thoughts won't be very important at that point.

On May 4, 1994, Mr. Haley of the MBTA responded to a question about the possibility of a lawsuit brought by the town of Hingham to ensure that a commuter rail tunnel be built. He maintained that if it went to court, it would last only a few months. At that point, the MBTA would win its case and begin at-grade construction. Basically, the T would out-spend the people of Hingham and go ahead with plans not acceptable to the town.

I must conclude, after attending several meetings regarding the Greenbush line, and listening to the members of the T and the CAC, and reading the EIR, that this unpopular project will go forward ONLY because of bureaucratic inertia, public confusion about the facts and arrogance on the part of the MBTA.

Peter Robb
Beechwood Street

PS. I did not mention that this new EIR, TEN YEARS in the making, has a great number of flaws and misleading assumptions. For instance, all noise calculations are based on technology that is only experimental and may never be used. This severely skews noise levels as well as mitigation figures and costs. There's more, much more I could challenge. Unfortunately, the general public does not have the time to really study this document (at least in time to affect the ultimate decision).

Student protests class cuts

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to protest the elimination of the Business Department at Cohasset High School. These cuts will restrict my options as I prepare to apply to Bentley and Babson colleges.

I had planned a course of study appropriate to a business major. In 1994-95, I am studying Business Management, which is using a college-level text.

In 1995-96, my choices include Accounting and Computer Applications and an Independent Study in Business Management.

My request is for the School Committee to allow me to voice my opinion. I am presently in Business Management doing A work. My other grades are B's and A's, but Management is the only course that interests me.

There are many students who would like to be heard.

Respectfully submitted,

Hettstrom is an All-Star beyond the gym

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

It's called the "Triple Solto Pass" and not all high school gymnasts bother attempting the difficult move with its fatiguing series of back-handsprings that leave one's lungs burning for oxygen, the arm muscles heavy with fatigue.

But for Cohasset High's Tara Hettstrom, the Solto was the ace she pulled out of her sleeve that helped earn selection as one of the South Shore League All-Stars for the floor routine.

"That's my first tumbling pass," said the 5-foot-2, 105-pound Hettstrom, whose older sister, Erica, was the top all-around gymnast in the league last season. "It just goes on forever. The first time I ever tried it I landed off the mat."

The 14-year-old eighth-grader finished with an 8.5 average for the season and set a personal best of 8.6. Hettstrom's average tied that of Scituate's premier gymnast, Ginny Stone. Together they shared the best average of all the gymnasts in the league.

Hettstrom's All-Star selection not only capped off a season that saw her set personal bests on the floor, beam (8.0) and bars (7.5), and equal her best vault score (7.9), but also made her the first Cohasset eighth-grade All-Star since Michelle Hartley accomplished the feat 12 years ago.

She also garnered All-League honors by grabbing third place in the all-around behind Hanover's Kim Richardson and Stone.

But probably more important than what Hettstrom accomplished in the gym was how she accomplished it: Pain free.

Hettstrom went through a series of operations to relieve a serious sinus problem that kept her from reaching her full potential for several years. Still, Hettstrom was more than competent on the various apparatuses despite, pounding headaches and dizziness that affected her breathing.

Hettstrom, however, believes the ordeal made her all the stronger as a gymnast.

"It helped me because I had to try that much harder," she said.

Hettstrom's accomplishments also impressed those people who know her well and appreciate how much work she puts into gymnastics.

"It was amazing to see the improvement she made over last year by overcoming her obstacles," said Cohasset High head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni. "Tara doesn't have fear. If you tell her she can do something she'll try it. Tara has enough trust in me to know I'd never ask her to do something I didn't think she could do."

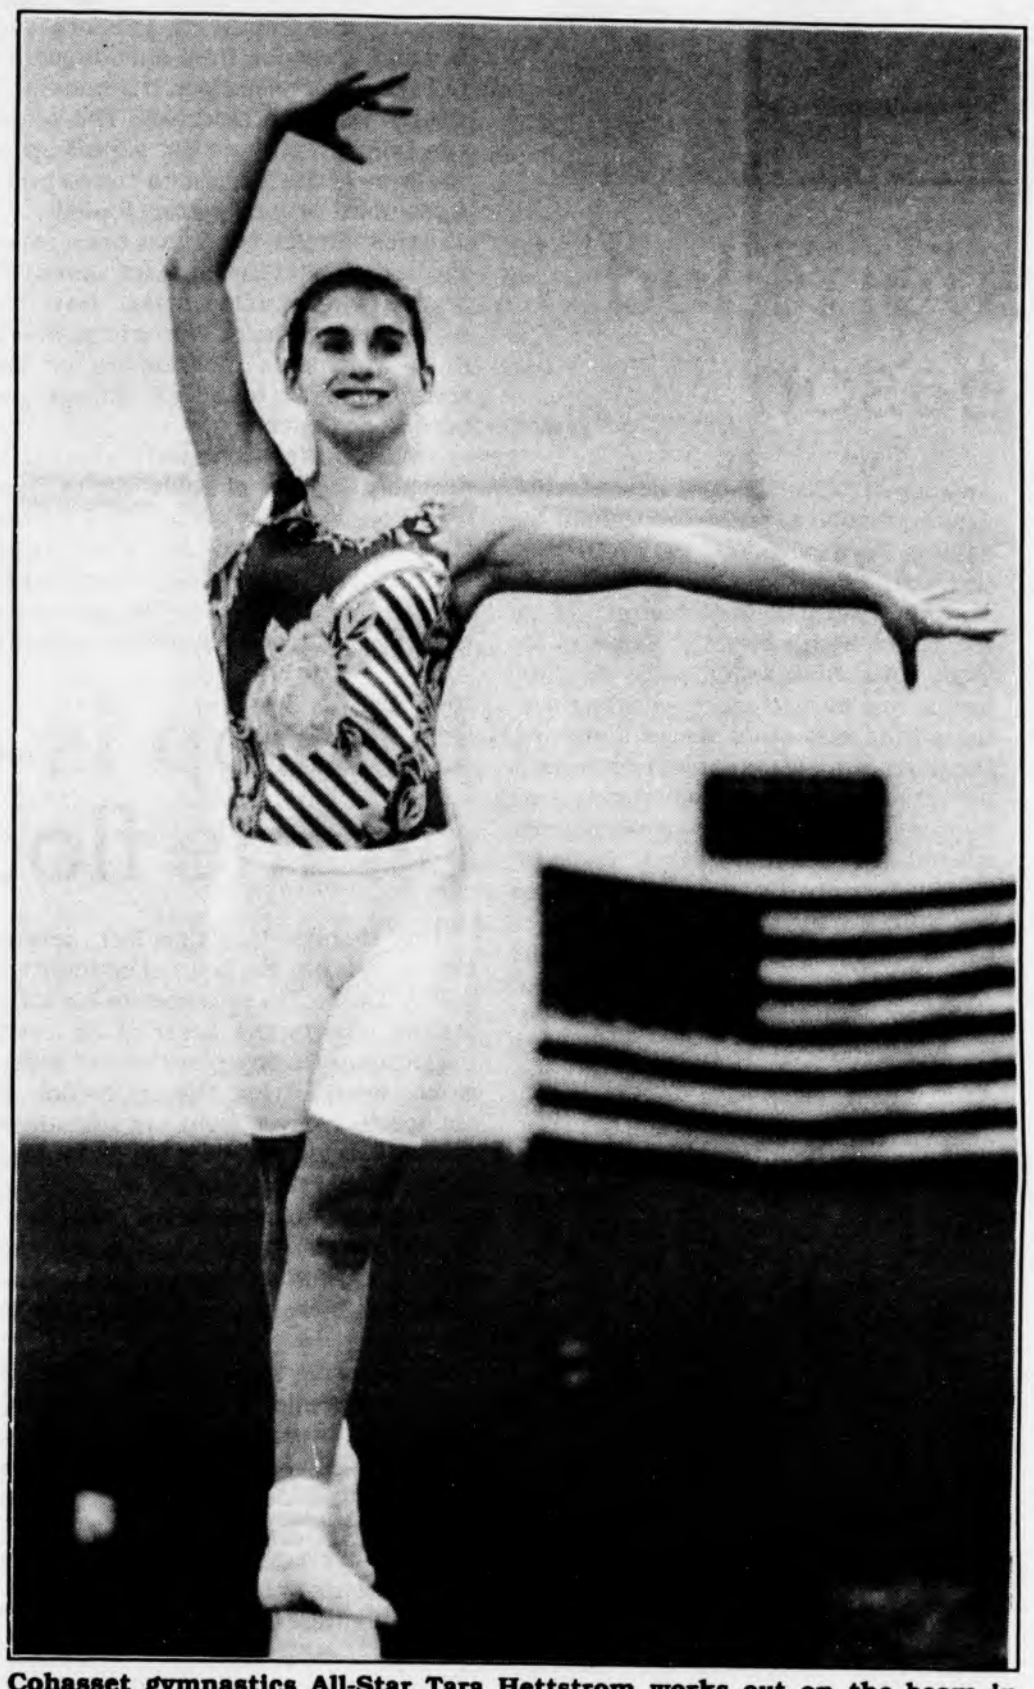
Along with the rest of the team, Hettstrom returned for the start of the gymnastics season with added muscle and body tone. Ardizzoni emphasized the importance of strength training and Hettstrom took to her words immediately.

"We knew that it would help us," Hettstrom said. "We used to dread it, but we started to do it more and got used to it.

"I don't think I could have done the triple without the conditioning."

And Hettstrom doesn't rely on her talent alone to get by in the competitions. Ardizzoni said Hettstrom "faithfully" kept up a routine during the offseason, working out at the Community Center gym 3-4 days per week.

"She's got a ton of natural ability," Ardizzoni said, "but she worked really hard to get where she was. Tara's a joy to work with. She doesn't dance, but has the style, grace and poise of a dancer. Tara's a very valuable member of the team."



Cohasset gymnastics All-Star Tara Hettstrom works out on the beam in preparation for a meet. Hettstrom has overcome a series of physical maladies to become one of the top gymnasts in the South Shore League.

The respect Ardizzoni has for Hettstrom is mutual.

"I don't think I would have kept it (gymnastics) up if it wasn't for Ruthann," Hettstrom said. "She makes it fun for us and is as much a friend as a she is a coach."

The fact that Hettstrom's sister is one of her teammates makes the sport all that much more fun for her. Tara said the horror stories you hear of sisters turning into bitter rivals when competing against each other in the same sport when it comes to Erica and herself.

"I love it because she's always there to support," Tara said. "People look at us and think we must always fight and it's real competitive. It's not like that at all.

"I sometimes get more nervous than she does when she does her routine than when I do mine."

Much of Hettstrom's improvement this year can be attributed to being able to relax more and concentrating on what she had to do, instead of the fear of doing something wrong.

As a seventh-grader in her first year at the high school, Hettstrom was a bundle of nerves and self-doubt. She constantly worried whether or not she'd be able to juggle her school work and the amount of time it took to perform at the level she set for herself in gymnastics.

Slowly, Hettstrom made the adjustment by budgeting her time and making the most of her studying and workouts.

"Since it was my second year I felt a little more comfortable with the meets and having to go practice every night," Hettstrom explained. "Last year it was like, 'I can't do this, practice every night.'"

Along the way, Hettstrom learned not to set any limits for herself, though she admits there were times as a seventh-grader when the intensity of the sport briefly gets to her.

"There's always a point where you don't think you can do it any more and you get stressed out," Hettstrom said. "This year I could handle it better."

The same was true for the entire team in its quest to beat Scituate for a second time last winter and claim the SSL title

The state tourney is upon us.

As someone who has played in and watched many state tournament games, the following is a list of 10 things that teams have to watch out for in the post-season.

1) Being too starry-eyed.

Many teams that barely qualify or are in the tourney for the first time in a long time seem to be happy just to be there and this shows in their play.

The fire and hustle of the regular season has been replaced with a 'deer caught in the headlights' look. This problem is usually remedied by a quick time out and a verbal lashing by the coach.

2) The long layoff.

Most coaches line up scrimmages but those are not the same. Often the layoff can stifle the momentum a team has put together in the regular season. In fact many coaches want to play immediately after the regular season ends.

The only good thing about a layoff is a team can rest its injured players.

3) Prime-Time Fever.

Being in the state tourney sometimes leads to startling transformations in players.

The stay-at-home hockey defenseman who had a plus-10 rating during the regular season suddenly tries to make coast-to-coast rushes that Bobby Orr would have been proud of.

Or the basketball power forward whose job is to rebound and set screens on offense decides to launch three-point bombs that hit nothing but air.

Teams and players must stay within themselves in the tourney. Go with what worked in the past or else it will be a quick exit.

4) Underdogs can bite.

You play on a team that has gone 20-0 during the regular season without too much worry and suddenly a 10-10 team is within two points and there is only five minutes to play in the game.

If an underdog team gets close, don't sweat it. Do your thing and hopefully the cream will rise to the top.

5) Choking.

The top-scoring hockey forward suddenly can't hit the side of a barn with the puck or the hoop team's leading scorer just picked up his third foul in the first half.

Panic is not the answer. The answer is faith.

If you have confidence in yourself and the team then it will be just a matter of time before you execute like you can. Keep plugging away.

6) Games in strange and hostile places.

In the movie Hoosiers, coach Gene Hackman has his players measure the hoop and the foul line when they enter a huge arena to play for the state title.

The message of Hackman: The hoop is still 10-feet high and the foul line is still 15 feet away. The same is true in hockey, the game is still played on ice with a red line, two blue lines and a goal.

7) Bad seeds.

Individual efforts led to banner season

Cohasset's boys varsity basketball team is preparing for the State Tournament after a season-ending Hall of Fame Tournament title, earned by defeating Division 1 teams Oliver Ames and BC High.

Finishing with their best record in years, the Skippers started well and finished even stronger, pulling together as a team for the final stretch run.

Tom Allen was the team's distributor, picking up 15 assists in the Carver game. But Allen's basketball talents aren't limited to passing. His three-point shooting has saved the Skippers on many an occasion. Allen's game reminds one of Walt Frazier, because of their similar shooting, defense and passing skills.

Peter Bishop, another senior, is the towering force of Cohasset's stellar front court and, at 6-foot-seven, a presence to be reckoned with on defense. One of Cohasset's co-captains, he is also a calming presence on the bench, yelling instructions and offering advice.

Ryan Bishop, Pete's younger brother, checks in at 6-foot-8, but looks like he could still grow. Bishop's finest moment of the season came during the final moments of the February 3 Abington game. Ryan stepped up and showed the Green Wave how to play ball on both ends of the floor. On defense, he blocked shots and rebounded. On offense he grabbed several rebounds and tapped them back in. Only a sophomore, Bishop's first season on varsity is only an indication of what we could see in the coming years.

Senior Dorian Bryant, a four-year varsity starter, is one of Cohasset's underrated stars. Bryant's biggest asset is his rebounding capability. Dorian wipes the boards at both ends of the court and has thrown an astounding number of outlet passes that have started fast breaks this year.

Andy Fitzsimmons, a senior forward, is one of the hardest working Skippers. Despite playing behind a strong corps of swingmen, "Fitzy" has given head coach Ron Ford solid minutes throughout the season. Ford calls the program "hard to imagine without him here."

Jared Hardwick is Cohasset's, if not the entire South Shore's, rookie of the year. This high-flying, slam-dunking junior has earned more standing ovations than any other player simply by breaking away down court. Hardwick is an explosive player, often running off four or six points in a row while making spectacular defensive plays. Look for Hardwick to give Cohasset 10-15 points per game during the tournament.

Jim Magner, affectionately known as "Beezer," is a card-carrying member of Cohasset's vaunted backcourt. Boasting five members, the group would not be complete without Beezer, whose long-range prowess will be used as a major weapon when Cohasset gets into close games in the tournament. Magner's good ball movement decisions should also help to calm the nerves if CHS gets rattled.

Jerome "Beej" Marion is another necessary component of Cohasset's team, specifically the backcourt battalion. Marion throws himself into every play, whether in practice or in games. This senior was all over the floor during the first Hanover game, pickpocketing three Hanover dribblers, igniting fast breaks, and knocking down jumpers.

Dave Nothnagle is another senior role player who provides Cohasset with great depth off the bench. He capably steps in when a starter needs a breather and can hit the jump shot. Ford will need Dave to come off the bench down the stretch of some tournament games.

Matt Pierce emerged from an early season slump to give the Skippers 10 points a game very consistently for the rest of the season. Pierce has been a whirlwind of positive force for Cohasset, whether it be grabbing a rebound that has miraculously escaped the grasp of Cohasset's frontcourt, shutting down a defender, or picking up two points with his trademark, textbook, pull-up jumper. Pierce, yet another senior, will be a steady player for Cohasset in the tournament.

Joe Slotnick is the final member of the Skippers' much publicized front three. Slotnick is a complete player, one of the most well-rounded on the Skippers. Fundamentally, he is nearly perfect and a weapon from outside, with a high-percentage jumper, but even more dangerous when he drives. The senior can stop on a dime for a pull-up or continue to the hole, often converting a three-point play by getting fouled.

Jeremiah Stevenson has been called the best shooter in Cohasset. Jeremiah is always an outside threat, from beyond the three-point line or from inside it. He abandons pleasantries on the court by playing tenacious defense and hard-nosed offense.

Listing all of Cohasset's players is probably the best possible way to show why Cohasset carries an 18-2 record (16-0 in the division) into the tournament. Chosen by writers and coaches to do well this season, the Skippers have never given anyone any reason to doubt their ability.

One of the most impressive stats of the year is that Cohasset has won 27 league games in a row, a streak that dates back to the '93-'94 campaign. Another thing that makes the Skippers unique is their surplus of swingmen. Fitzsimmons, Hardwick, Nothnagle and Pierce can all fill a role in at least two positions each. This gives Ford the flexibility when he uses his bench that other teams don't have.

Ford predicted a tough but beatable field that Cohasset must contend with.

"We're going to be playing against the best competition," Ford said. "Our drawing in the tournament was very tough. Every night we're going to have to come to play our best game. Then the next night, we have to play better. Hopefully we're at the point where we can to that. But our division (Division 3) is loaded this year.

"This team could not be any more ready for this tournament. It's just a matter of going out and doing it."

Cohasset will face Canton in the second round of the tournament Thursday night at home.

Bishop is easygoing off the floor

Pete Bishop stands six feet, seven-inches tall, but the man affectionately called "Dinka," in reference to his lofty stature, sports the heart of an even bigger man. Bishop plays all out every game, never giving the opposition a chance to recover from his relentless attack. Playing pivot for the Skippers, Dinka is also the team's co-captain.

He averaged 12 points per game during the regular season and is a fierce rebounder, both offensively and defensively. His mere presence in the lane is a factor.

Considering his easygoing manner and quick smile, it's easy to see why Dinka was chosen as one of the team's captains. He keeps his competitive drive in check, but uses it on the floor to outclass the opposition.

Pete isn't one to brag about his achievements, however, and, characteristically, discussed the team before himself.

"As a team we've played the most talented teams and the least talented teams," Bishop said. "We've played the top of Division 1 and some of the bottom of Division 3. We've dabbled in almost everything and we've been tested at every level."

Prompted to discuss himself, Pete was modest but honest in his reply.

"I've played better in some games than in others. I feel that I stepped up in the BC High game and against Abington. I feel that there's also a lot of room for improvement. I think that it's important for me to do well in the tournament and try to play at a high level."

Head Coach Ron Ford credited Bishop with being the team's most valuable player and commended his leadership.

"Peter is a leader; he's the big man," Ford said. "He's been our MVP this year. He's unstoppable in the middle, shooting over 60 percent from the field. He's got a wide range of weapons in his arsenal. Pete's a leader for us, but quiet. He's like 'The Chief,' Robert Parish. He doesn't speak that much; he just gets the job done. He leads us in blocked shots, rebounds, points, many other categories as well. He's been a force this year. I don't think that there's anybody in the South Shore League who can stop him. He hasn't been stopped yet this year. The big thing is that he's been very consistent."

Bishop is also involved in peer counseling, a program which allows juniors and seniors to provide advice for younger students, the Appalachia Service Project, and works at Good Sport, a sporting goods store.

Bishop's presence speaks volumes. It could be in the locker room, in the paint, or in school hallways. The presence is noticeable, but the actual person can't be missed. And Pete's good to see...unless you're trying to get a lay-up past him.

Massachusetts Special Olympic Games

Exxon employees and retailers from around New England will once again support the Special Olympics Winter Games scheduled for February 27-March 1 at Eastover Resort, Jiminy Peak and Williams College.

During this ski season, participating Exxon dealers will award a $3 discount coupon for lift tickets with each eight-gallon Exxon gasoline fillup; customers then can combine up to three coupons for a total $9 discount.

Participating New England ski areas include: Loon Mountain (NH), Smugglers' Notch (VT), Shawnee Peak (ME), Ski Sundown (CT) and in Massachusetts, Brodie and Wachusett Mountains.

Symbolically, the highlight of the Ski with the Tiger campaign happens February 27-March 1 at Eastover Resort, Jiminy Peak and Williams College when dealers and employees alike will assist at the Winter Games by helping out at events, awarding medals and encouraging and cheering for the athletes.

More than 1,000 Special Olympians will compete in nordic and alpine skiing and other winter sports activities. Special Olympics provides many individuals the opportunity to develop physical fitness, and gain a sense of accomplishment through year-round sports training and competition.

Hettstrom is an All-Star beyond the gym

for their own. The initial win over the Sailors was, at the time, regarded by many as an upset win — a team of youngsters who had the meet of their lives, catching the real champions off guard in the process.

When Cohasset met Scituate for the second time, they were the less confident of the two teams. And it showed as the Sailors came away with the victory and a share of the league championship.

"Last year we just psyched ourselves out going into the meet," Hettstrom said. "This year we were there to have fun."

"Fun" translated into a school record of 125 points, all but assuring the squad of a league title. This time, however, Scituate wouldn't be sharing it with Cohasset.

Even with the amount of dedication she has put into the sport, Hettstrom knows there will be those annoying meets where she has a poor routine. Rather than get upset and drain precious energy, Hettstrom analyzes the mistakes she made and tries to correct them immediately.

"I tell myself 'I'm going to try twice as hard next time," Hettstrom said. "But that's what gymnastics is. There's the chance you can go out there and have a bad routine. You have to shake it off because there are other events that follow.

"At the same time you do get upset and disappointed."

The respect Hettstrom has garnered goes beyond her accomplishments as a gymnast, but through her community service as well. In the Cohasset Mariner's citizen of the year voting, Hettstrom was the youngest town resident to receive votes for the the award.

Hettstrom said a friend of hers who read of the voting in the Mariner told her about the results and the votes she received. Hettstrom said it must have been a misprint.

"I never heard of the award," Hettstrom said. "I had no idea anyone would nominate me for that. It was a good surprise. I've never looked at myself that way."

Much of Hettstrom's volunteer work is done at the Beechwood Congregational Church in Cohasset. Steve MacLean, the church's assistant superintendent said Hettstrom has done "all sorts of volunteer work," ranging from working the dog show in the fall, to watching the children in the nursery while the service is being conducted.

"Based on everything she's been through from the physical side, she's a tremendous example for all of us," MacLean said.

Hettstrom also has a calm quality about her around children which she uses to help make them feel more relaxed when they are crying.

"She has tremendous patience with the children," MacLean said. "When a child gets upset, she'll grab a book and read a story to calm him down."

But that's just Hettstrom being herself. Besides the gymnastics, handsprings, All-Star selections and volunteer work, Hettstrom is just a nice, down-to-earth girl. And that, more than anything else, is what people like the most about her.

extra points

the way you want things to start out in the postseason.

Last year everyone made a big deal when the Phoenix Suns lost to the Houston Rockets in the early rounds of the NBA playoffs. Many said it was a disaster for the Suns.

Well, the Rockets went on to win the NBA title and all those experts looked a bit silly regarding the Suns.

If you draw a strong team and lose, blame the seeds.

8) Early celebrating.

You jump out to a three-goal lead in the final period or hit four straight three's and it looks like the game is in the bag.

Well, before you know it, the other team catches fire and ties the game while you're high-fiving your brother in the crowd.

It ain't over til it's over and you have to play hard right to the final horn. Several area schools have been burned when they've counted their chickens before they've hatched.

9) Intimidation.

A few rejected shots that land in the fifth row or several body checks that rattle players to their teeth can really throw off a team.

If you start worrying too much about where your opponents are, you will find yourself way behind on the scoreboard.

10) And finally, too much talent.

Hard work and a great attitude sometimes isn't enough. You can be pumped sky high and have the best pep rally in the world but you know there is no way you can win unless you highjack the opponent's bus. Always remember, crime does not pay.–David McKee

Animal control officer identifies lost puppy

Quigley, the homeless hound, has been saved from certain doom by the timely arrival of a sharp-eyed animal control officer.

The dog — originally discovered at the Cohasset Stop and Shop by his namesake, animal control officer William Quigley — had been slated for probable euthanasia after Scituate veterinarians found a bite mark on the animal's body. With no knowledge of Quigley's origins, and no room at the animal shelter to quarantine an active 7-month-old dog, shelter workers were afraid they would have to put the perky, brown-eyed beauty to sleep.

But Quigley's owners have been found, thanks to an all-out publicity campaign by the Scituate Animal Shelter and the lifesaving memory of an unidentified animal control officer.

"An animal control officer from another town came in Monday and recognized the dog," said shelter director Joan McCafferty. "We can't say which town, because we don't want to reveal the identity of the dog's owners. The officer was able to verify for us that Quigley had received his rabies shots, which means that he no longer needs to be in quarantine."

McCafferty said that she did not expect Quigley's owners to reclaim the dog, adding that the cost of the dog's board could be a prohibitive factor.

"However, we've had at least five calls so far from people who wanted to adopt him even before we knew he didn't have to be quarantined," McCafferty said. "We expect to get even more now, since he's such a lovable dog, who gets along fine with other dogs and even seems to like cats."

Pet owners who board their dogs or cats at the shelter must pay $9 per day for their care and feeding. Anyone who wishes to adopt a cat or dog only needs to pay $20, however.

Shelter workers will choose the home they feel will be best for Quigley, "probably one with a fenced in yard," McCafferty said. "

"It's possible he could go home by Saturday," she added.

The animal control officer who saved Quigley's life also revealed that the long-eared, short-legged, brown-and-black puppy is not a Beagle/Doberman mix shelter workers previously believed. He is, in fact, a pure-bred coonhound.

"We're really glad he didn't end up somewhere that would have put him to sleep right away," McCafferty said. "It's nice to have a story with a happy ending."

Library story hours

Registrations are currently being accepted for the spring series of preschool story hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The series will run from March 16 to April 27, Thursdays, at 10 a.m., and from March 17 to April 28, Fridays at 10 a.m. There will be no story hour during school vacation week. Each 45-minute program consists of several picture book stories and simple fingerplays, songs and crafts. Children must be at least 3-1/2 to participate.

To register, call the children's librarian at 383-1348.

'Magical Moments' for Garden Club members

This year three Cohasset residents will participate in the 1995 New England Spring Flower Show.

Genevieve Good of the Cohasset Garden Club and Annette Sechen and Vivien Bobo of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will contribute imaginative, artistic creations to "Magical Moments," the floral design section of the show hosted by the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc.

The Flower Show will run from March 11-19 at the Bayside Expo Center in Boston.

Quilts on display

The Second Congregational Church of Cohasset will hold its second annual Quilt Show and Luncheon on Saturday, March 11, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

More than 50 handmade quilts will be displayed. The luncheon will feature shrimp or vegetable souffle and an elaborate dessert cart.

Guests will be invited to participate in the making of quilts of comfort for children with AIDS.

Tickets are $8 and are available by calling 383-0345. All proceeds will benefit the Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust and the Children's AIDS Program, Mattapan.

Club hosts chili cookoff

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers' Club will heat up winter on Saturday, March 4, at 7:30 p.m. with a chili cookoff at the home of a member in Cohasset.

Current club members as well as newcomers to the area are invited to cook a batch of their best chili for the tasting and dining pleasure of all attending. Salad or dessert may be contributed instead of chili. Beverages will be provided.

All new residents of Scituate and Cohasset or residents seeking individuals with shared interests are invited to join the club. For further information about the cookoff or the club call 383-1676 or write to Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers' Club, P.O. Box 623, Cohasset 02025.

All Paws Rescue to meet

All Paws Rescue, Inc. is looking for volunteers to care for cats and kittens in the Weymouth Cat Shelter or to join the All Paws Fundraising Team to help raise money that will be used for rescuing and taking care of homeless animals.

The All Paws Rescue Fundraising Committee will hold a meeting on Tuesday, March 7, at 7:30 p.m. in the Whiton Room of the Hingham Public Library.

All Paws will hold its bimonthly members meeting on Tuesday, March 14, at 7:30 p.m. at the Days Inn in Rockland.

For further information or to volunteer call All Paws Rescue at 749-0968.

Spinners Guild to meet

The South Shore Spinners Guild will meet on Thursday, March 2, from 7 to 10 p.m. at Old South Union Church, 25 Columbian St., South Weymouth, for their annual Fashion Show of items made and modelled by members.

Call 331-1493 for further information. New members are welcome to attend.

Joseph M. Cunning

A funeral Mass was celebrated Saturday, Feb. 11, in St. Anthony's Church for Joseph M. Cunning, 54, of Cohasset, a product design manager, who died Wednesday, Feb. 8, at home of cancer.

Mr. Cunning worked as a product design manager for Holmes Products Corp. of Milford.

He earned a degree in engineering from the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, N.Y.

He was born in Marshfield and graduated from Marshfield High School in 1958.

He lived in Cohasset since 1979.

Mr. Cunning leaves his wife Ellen M. (Russell) Cunning; two sons, Sean C. Cunning and Michael J. Cunning both of Scituate; and his father, James Cunning and brother, Frank Cunning both of Marshfield Hills.

Burial was in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Donations in the memory of Mr. Cunning may be to the charity of one's choice.

Jane M. Robbins

Jane M. (Marr) Robbins, 58, of Cohasset, died Feb. 21 in Colonial Nursing Home, Weymouth, after a brief illness.

Born in Boston, she lived in Braintree where she graduated from high school. She lived in Norwell before moving to Cohasset.

Mrs. Robbins was an administrative assistant at Robbins Garage and a volunteer at South Shore Hospital.

She was a graduate of Fisher Junior College and was a legal secretary at Grabill, Ley & Mason in Boston for 10 years and a former secretary at the Mary Hitchcock Hospital in Hanover, N.H.

Mrs. Robbins was the wife of Wayne H. Robbins and leaves a son and daughter, Wayne H. Robbins Jr. of Cohasset and June R. Lippard of Duxbury; a sister, Edith M. Vokey of Chatham and two granddaughters.

A memorial service was conducted by Rev. Dick Dutton in the First Baptist Church in North Scituate.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Robbins Family Fund at the First Baptist Church, 656 Country Way, North Scituate 02066 or to Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Drive, Braintree 02184.

Rosemarie Mercurio

Rosemarie (Coccimiglio) Mercurio, 42, of C[illegible], a former teacher's aide, died Tuesday, Feb. 28, [illegible] Israel Hospital, Boston, of complications relating to breast cancer.

Mrs. Mercurio was born in Weymouth and raised in Hull. She was a graduate of Hull High School.

She lived in Cohasset 18 years. Mrs. Mercurio was a member of the board of directors of the Cohasset Community Center and volunteered as a teacher's aide at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools.

She leaves her husband, Joseph Mercurio; three sons, Marc Mercurio, Daniel Mercurio and Christopher Mercurio; a daughter, Andrea Mercurio all of Cohasset; her parents, Santo A. Coccimiglio and Rose Coccimiglio both of Hull; two brothers, John Bonanno of Westport and Richard Bonanno of Scituate; and three sisters, Anna Lucia of Cohasset, Mariann Friece of Canton and Grace Lentini of Hull. She was the mother of the late Amanda Mercurio.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated in St. Anthony's Church Friday, March 3, at 10 a.m. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

Visiting hours are Thursday from 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, One Summer Street, Cohasset.

Donations in the memory of Mrs. Mercurio may be made to the Hubert Humphrey Cancer Center c/o the Dean's Office Boston University School of Medicine, 80 East Concord St., Boston 02118.

Fees don't deter false alarms

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

When Cohasset instituted its policy of assessing fines for false burglar alarms, police expected the number of false alarms to decrease.

Instead, the number has increased, which has meant more fines collected by the town.

Police Chief Brian Noonan said this week that in 1993, there were 587 false burglar alarms and $1,370 in fines. Last year, the town collected $1,950 for 622 false alarms to which police responded.

The false burglar alarm fine policy

Garage project needs paring

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Selectmen asked the town's DPW garage committee to go back to the drawing board and trim about $1/4 million off the proposed price tag of a proposed, new 16,800 square-foot garage.

The committee told selectmen Monday that the total cost of constructing the garage at the town's transfer station is about $975,000 which is about $225,000 more than original estimates.

The new number was not palatable to selectmen who don't think town meeting voters will go for a $1 million facility even

Happy hound finds a home

By Rob Rogers
Mariner staff

An abandoned puppy whose life nearly came to a tragic end has found a new home in Cohasset, thanks to his friends at the Scituate Animal Shelter and a family who believes in love at first sight.

Norfolk Road resident Susan Cunningham had no intentions of becoming a dog owner before she heard the story of Quigley, the six-month old coonhound found at the Cohasset Stop and Shop by his namesake, Cohasset Tourney Tough!

CHS center Peter Bishop, #51, skies for a rebound during the Skippers opening round win against Canton. And as the buzzer sounds, forward Joe Slotnick raises his arms in celebration. After the Canton win, the Skippers topped Dover-Sherborn to reach the Division III South semi-finals against top seed Apponoquet.

Skippers hang Dover-Sherborn to dry in tourney play

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

Continuing their safari through the post season jungle that is high school basketball, the Cohasset Skippers punished rival Dover-Sherborn Monday night in the second round of post season play.

Dishing revenge to the team that knocked them out of last year's tournament, Cohasset delivered a searing 74-61 performance as they continue their way toward the top.

Even before the buzzer, the Skippers appeared ready for the challenge.

Dorian Bryant, who collected 12 points, started the game for Cohasset with an offensive rebound and put back. Peter Bishop (eight points, 17 rebounds) scored in the same fashion. Matt Pierce, with 18 points, knocked down two free throws and Jeremiah "Downtown" Stevenson's three pointer put the Skippers up to stay.

Jared Hardwick, another double digit scorer, drove the lane for two of his 16 points. Bryant picked up to more with a lay-up. Joe Slotnick, who also pitched in with nine rebounds, hit a textbook turn-around jumper, making it 15-7 in Cohasset's favor, one of the few times that the team has pulled out to a sizable early lead this year.

Tom Allen, who amassed 13 points by himself, nailed a free throw, and Bryant

Cohasset's week

Duxbury plan backed

Duxbury will consider offering its senior citizens $500 credit toward their real estate taxes in exchange for 100 hours of town-related work. John and Kathleen Dwyer, 55 Old Pasture Road, wrote to selectmen last week to suggest Cohasset give it a try.

"Many of us would like to see a similar program offered in Cohasset," the Dwyers wrote.

Bill payment approved

This week selectmen approved payment of $5,158 to town counsel Richard A. Henderson for professional services provided the town for February.

Resignation is accepted

Council on Aging outreach worker Susan Connolly has resigned to accept a full-time position with South Shore Elder Services, a regional agency benefiting the area's senior citizens. In accepting Connolly's resignation, selectmen thanked her for her work for the town.

'A' in recycling awarded

Cohasset has a recycling rate of 30 percent which translates into a grade of A, according to the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA). This compares with a state-wide recycling rate of 28 percent, giving the state a B grade. Of the 351 municipalities, there were 54 A's, 74 B's, 121 C's, 24 D's, 12 F's, and 66 incompletes.

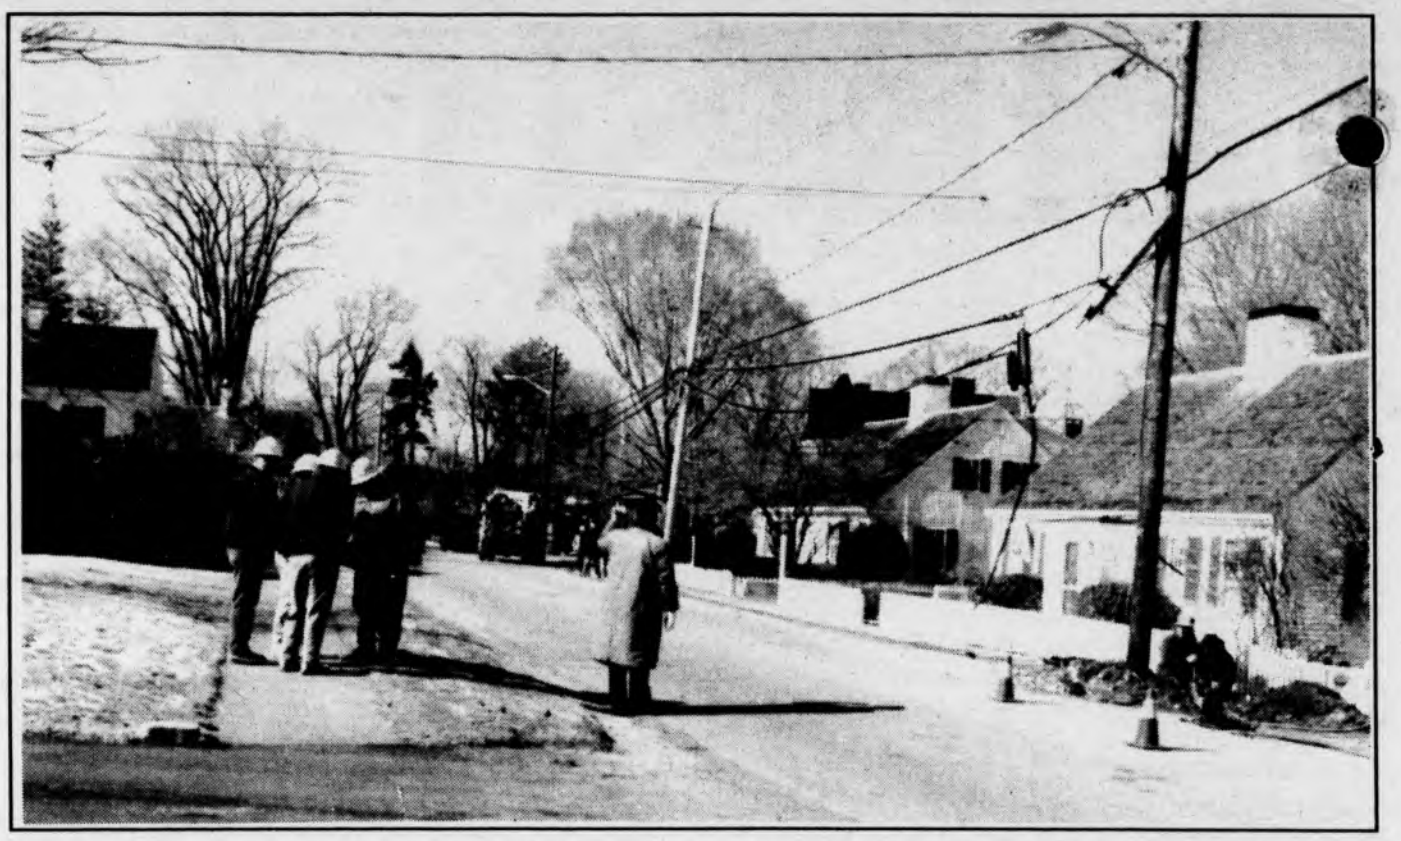
The recycling report card is a tool to encourage towns to meet the state's goal of a 46 percent recycling rate by the year 2000. By encouraging recycling and composting, Massachusetts will reduce environmental and public health risks and enhance a thriving recycling industry, according to the EOEA. Today, this industry's value to the state's economy exceeds $600 million and represents more than 10,000 jobs. The EOEA provided $3.1 million of recycling equipment grants in FY'95 to assist towns to reach the 46 percent recycling goal.

Septic system advisory

The Cohasset Board of Health recently voted to require that all (residential and commercial) real property transfers occurring after March 31, 1995 must have inspection done in accordance with Title 5. 310 CMR 15.00 Standard Requirements for the Siting, Construction, Inspection, Upgrade and Expansion of On-Site Sewage Treatment and Disposal Systems and for the Transport and Disposal of Septage; effective date — March 31, 1995. All inspections performed to date will be invalid after March 31.

Inspections must be conducted within nine (9) months prior to the time of transfer of title to the facility being sold.

Persons who may perform these inspections must be licensed by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection. At the present time only professional engineers with a concentration in civil, sanitary or environmental engineering, registered sanitarians and certified health officers may perform the inspections. Others such as septage haulers, septic system installers, professional home inspectors, board of health members or agents, engineers in training concentrating in civil, sanitary or environmental engineering may also inspect once they have passed an examination given by the Department of Environmental Protection.



Repair crews worked night and day for 22 hours last week at the intersection of North Main Street and Jerusalem Road to replace a telephone pole and fix power lines following an accident at about 1:30 a.m., March 3. A Hingham man was arrested by police following the incident. A piece of the sheared-off pole is still visible at right. For story, please see page 21.

Temporary office closure

The Board of Health has voted to close the Board of Health office to the public temporarily. The times of closure are: Thursdays from 1 to 5 p.m. beginning Feb. 16 and continuing each Thursday through March 9.

Prior to March 9, the board will review its decision and determine if the closures should continue beyond that date.

School budget readied for town meeting

By Alison B. Shyer
Mariner correspondent

In a meeting last Thursday night (March 2), the school committee voted to approve the final draft of the 1996 school budget, at $6,806,918 or 5.1 percent increase from last year.

Last month, after substantial cuts to the original 8.6 percent increase that was requested, the committee presented the budget to the advisory board at a 5.4 percent increase. The advisory board requested an additional cut of $20,000 from the athletic department, which will try to raise the money through user fees and gate receipts, the school board said. The cut brought the increase down to its current proposed level.

Because the town is projected to have an operating budget deficit next year, a Prop. 2-1/2 override will be needed.

Committee chairman Nancy Sandell said that the budget, as proposed, "certainly does not cut any services to our students.

"I feel comfortable supporting this budget," she said.

Schools Supt. Stephen Hart reminded everyone to remember that the override had not yet passed and to anticipate problems if it doesn't.

Sandell said that sometime after the town meeting on March 25, a committee would be formed to "work for a successful override, " which would include the publication of what would be lost if further cuts are made.

"A united front is better for successful passage [of the override,]" Sandell added.

Hart got a few laughs when he presented the budget in books of three shrinking sizes, "regular, a smaller size, and pocket-sized" he said. The smallest was about 2 x 3 inches.

The committee will meet again on March 16.

Survey results to be given

At the School Committee meeting on Thursday, March 16 at 8 p.m., members of the committee will present results of the community survey.

Questionnaires covering a number of school-related topics were mailed to all registered voters. The data and comments collected from answers to this survey provide valuable information that will be useful in the School Committee's long-range planning.

All interested residents are invited to meet at the high school on March 16 for a presentation of this information.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

WATCH THOSE STATISTICS

QUESTION: I have sold my home and plan to move out of state. The median home price is $170,000 in the new town. I can't afford to spend over $155,000. Do you see any ray of hope?

ANSWER: By all means! When you see MEDIAN home prices quoted, you have to remember that this is the middle price. If the median is $170,000, it means that half the homes sold for more than that figure (like $190,000) and HALF SOLD FOR LESS (like $150,000).

The best way to know what is available is to contact a local Realtor there (we can help) and see what individual homes are valued at. You are only interested in ONE home.

Happy hound finds Cohasset home at last

Animal Control officer William Quigley.

Affectionate and gentle, with big brown eyes and floppy ears, Quigley broke the hearts of volunteers at the Scituate Animal Shelter. That's why when a routine veterinary examination turned up a set of bite marks on Quigley's body, rescue workers opted not to put the six-month-old coonhound to sleep — even though the American Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals recommends euthanasia for active dogs who have been bitten and whose inoculation history is unknown.

Instead, shelter volunteers mounted an all-out publicity campaign to find Quigley's owner, a campaign that met with success weeks later when a sharp-eyed animal control officer from a neighboring town was able to identify the dog. Although Quigley's former owners did not offer to reclaim the dog, they were able to verify that Quigley had received his rabies shots. That meant Quigley could be adopted by any family willing to provide a good home for him, and was no longer in any danger of being put to sleep.

The news came as a welcome surprise to the Cunningham family, who had hoped to adopt the dog even before his medical condition became known.

"I wasn't even looking for a dog," said Susan Cunningham. "But I read the story and saw the picture of Quigley, and something inside me melted. It just grabbed me. Before I knew it, I felt my feet carrying me downstairs to show my husband the article about this dog. He agreed with me right away."

"My sons and I had been lobbying for a dog for a long time with no success," said Robert Cunningham. "We didn't tell the kids at first what we were planning — just that we were going to the animal shelter to do 'something good.'

My son Robin thought we were going to clean the cages, take the dogs for a walk, something like that. He and Quigley played for a while, and then he looked up at me and said, 'Dad, whose dog is this? Is this our dog? Is this our dog?' "

"When we finally told the kids it was like a Disney movie, with the two kids and the dog frolicking around together," Susan Cunningham continued. "Since he's been home he's learned to sit, to beg, to come when he's called. He knows where his bed is, but he'd rather sleep with us. We haven't given in that much, though, at least not yet. He's even learning to get along with our cat, Fluffy. They sleep next to each other."

"He's been good," said 12-year-old Robin Cunningham. "Actually, he acts just like any other dog, except that he behaves well."

Robert Cunningham added that the care and professional attention Quigley received at the Scituate Animal Shelter eased his transition into a new home.

"I was really impressed with the shelter," Cunningham said. "They told us to try him out for a week, to see if he 'fit,' before making a final decision. They weren't just trying to shove their animals out the door."

"I guess Quigley really got to be a popular guy down at the shelter," Susan Cunningham said. "They really had a hard time saying goodbye to him."

Already feeling as though they've gained a new member of the family, the Cunninghams plan to spend plenty of time in the next few months getting to know Quigley better.

"Originally, the people at the shelter weren't sure what kind of dog he was," Robert Cunningham said. "They thought he might be some kind of a mixture. Now that we know he's a full-blooded coonhound, we want to find out more about the breed, to see what they're like.

"The only thing we know so far," Cunningham added, looking nervously around his garden, "is that he likes to dig holes."

Garage project needs paring

though one is badly needed to house the town's trucks and equipment which are now scattered at various sites across town.

"We need to pare this back down again under $975,000 that's for sure," Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan said. "I'd like to get $250,000 out of it."

The original estimate did not include the built-out cost, Garage Committee Chairman Terry Atherton said.

Sullivan asked the garage committee to present plans for the "absolute minimum" garage that still accomplishes the objective. The committee will seek input on how to best trim down the garage from the tree & park, highway, and transfer station department heads, whose departments will eventually be consolidated in a proposed Department of Public Works

Garage committee member Ben Blake warned that trimming the size of the garage down may not save that much money.

"The interior finish is the most expensive part," he explained. "Cutting down the size of the building cuts garage space which is the least expensive."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said the town should opt for the bigger garage because adding on later will be practically impossible.

"Cohasset takes 100 years to build something else...conservatively," she said jokingly.

Selectmen asked garage committee members to prepare two scenarios for town meeting for a 17,000 and 13,000 square-foot garage and explain how they arrived at the costs..

Selectmen are also concerned that construction costs will continue to rise if the town does not give the go ahead for a DPW garage this year

Last year, the garage committee prepared plans for a DPW garage at the gravel pit off N. Main Street but that measure was withdrawn at town meeting when it was revealed the area lay in a watershed protection district.

The Hearing Center
Have You Heard?
by Nancy Allonen-Allie, M.S., CCC-A
Licensed-Certified Audiologist

A LOOK INTO THE FUTURE

What form might the hearing instrument of the future take? One company has come up with the idea of eliminating the amplifier and replacing the speaker used in a traditional instrument with a magnet. Only two millimeters in diameter, the tiny magnet is mounted on a silicone disc and held in place against the eardrum with a thin film of oil. Wearers then use a wireless microphone (either worn in the ear or on a necklace) that picks up sounds and converts them into magnetic signals that make the magnet vibrate. As the eardrum vibrates in sympathy with the magnet, it works as it would normally in the natural hearing process. This novel idea may reach the production stage after testing.

At THE HEARING CENTER, we keep up to date with all of the latest breakthroughs in hearing instruments. We offer state of the art hearing aids, but keep our commitment to having old fashioned friendly service. We know that you will have a lot of questions when you are purchasing a hearing aid, and we want you to feel comfortable talking to us about all of your concerns. If you would like more information on how hearing aids may be able to help you, please call us at 1-800-339-9316. Our offices are conveniently located at 306 Washington St. (Rte. 53), Norwell, and 470 Southern Artery (Rte. 3-A), Quincy. If you are unable to come to our office, we will make nursing home and home visits.

P.S. Another experimental hearing instrument uses an implanted magnet that bypasses the eardrum and middle ear.

Fees don't deter false burglar alarms went into effect in May, 1993 but had been an unenforced law since 1989. The year before it was implemented, Noonan said, police responded to more than 660 burglar alarms, of which "99 per cent were false."

Under the by-law that permits the town to assess fines for the false alarms, Noonan said homes and businesses with electronic burglar alarms are each allowed three "free" false alarms per calendar year. The town then assesses a $25 fine for each subsequent false alarm to which it must respond. There is leniency for alarms that are activated following a power failure, he added, when the sudden restoration of electricity can cause the alarm to activate.

He estimates that there are approximately 200 Cohasset households and businesses with burglar alarms. The actual number is difficult to determine, because the alarms are connected to private security companies which notify police if the alarm is activated.

Noonan said he believes the increase in the number of false alarms could be attributable to an increase in the number of homes with security systems. The cost of the systems has decreased and more people may have installed them, he said. He added that there are probably some homes with security systems that the police do not know about because officers have never called to false alarms there.

Conversely, one local business had "25 or 30" false alarms last year, the police chief said. The owner has paid the fines.

In some cases, Noonan said, alarms have been activated through carelessness of the building's owner. Police have responded to alarms to find a family's dog or cat was the culprit, or a door was not secured. In other cases, the alarm was not set properly or required service from the security company.

In 1993, when Noonan first advocated imposing the fines, he said it takes two police officers approximately 30 minutes to respond, investigate, and clear from a call. Two officers are dispatched for safety reasons. Responding to false alarms is not the most efficient use of police manpower, especially with the financial demands placed on the town.

When a fine is charged after the third false alarm, the resident or business owner is served the violation in hand by the police. The by law also allows for notification by registered mail, but to keep the costs down, the officers deliver the violation in person. Fines are due within 30 days, paid to the town treasurer, and deposited into the general fund.

Residents have been cooperative in paying the fines, and the amount of outstanding fines from the last year is "insignificant," Noonan said.

He expects the number of false alarms and, therefore, the fines, will ultimately go down "once people realize we're going after the fines." He added, "It takes a few years to take effect."

The intent of the false alarm fine policy is not to make money but to reduce the number of alarm calls to which police must respond, he said.

According to Cohasset police records, of the 25 break-ins in town last year, two were into buildings with alarm systems. In those cases, the security system was by-passed or had malfunctioned. In one case, items with an approximate value of $50,000 were taken after the alarm system wires were cut, indicating to police that the break was the work of professional thieves.

Selectman chairman Michael Sullivan said the fines are "a reasonable for a service that's being provided."

The selectmen expect to review a similar proposal from the fire chief, to charge a fine for false alarms answered by that department, he said.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said his department classifies three different types of alarms: false, accidental, and malfunctioning. He is presently working on a preliminary report for the selectmen but expects it will be several weeks before he can present it to the board.

The fire department addresses different public safety issues, and routinely sends more men and equipment when responding to a call, Sullivan said.

"I think the same concept holds true for the fire department," he said, adding he wants to hear the fire chief's report.

Tree trimming plan wins approval

Selectmen accepted an offer from Eastern Edison to help rid the town of dead and diseased branches in old trees which are causing some of the problem with the town's electrical outages during storms.

Tree Supt. Peter Laugelle told selectmen this week that dead branches are being blown across the street and hitting power lines.

Laugelle, who presented an eight-page survey with 142 locations needing attention, told selectmen that Eastern Edison will trim the town's trees on public and private property with permission from the homeowner.

Although concerned that the outages problem be solved, Selectman Peter Pratt said Edison would have to take the utmost care.

"I don't want to slash and burn any of our scenic streets," Pratt said.

Laugelle said Edison, which provides the service for free and will also donate $2,000 to the town's new tree account, would not cut anything without his knowledge.

Public urged to protest Coast Guard station closing

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset selectmen will join their Scituate counterparts in appealing to the state's Congressional delegation to oppose the proposed shutting down of the Coast Guard station in Scituate.

Selectmen said the station closing would translate in diminished safety for the town's boaters and fishermen.

"It would leave a gaping hole as far as safety," Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan said. If Scituate closes, the nearest Coast Guard station would be Point Allerton in Hull which is ten miles away.

Harbor committee chairman Fritz Pfaffman said it is also important that concerned townspeople sign petitions and write to the state U.S. Congressional delegation to object to the closing.

He noted that the town will need more harbor manpower and equipment if the base closes and that will cost money.

"We can't just send one man out on a search and rescue," he said.

The Harbormaster's 17-foot boat would not be sufficient for rescues in difficult conditions, Harbor Committee member Domenic Baccari said.

President Adrian Tinsley of Bridgewater State College has announced that the following Cohasset students have achieved dean's list status for the 1994 fall semester: Megan T. Staunton of 30 Rustic Drive, and David M. Walsh of 270 North Main Street. Congratulations to both of you!

Here's news from the business world about one of Cohasset's own, Charles Weeks. He has been appointed a sales representative for Reed & Barton in the Pennsylvania territory. Previously Charles worked at Merrill Lynch as a financial consultant.

Anne Bell of Milton (formerly of Cohasset), Mrs. John Chase (Pat), and Polly Logan flew to Philadelphia Saturday to attend the preview dinner of the Pennsylvania horticultural flower show which has been held since 1829.

The theme is "Moments In Time ... A Galaxy of Gardens" and leaps from a Roman emperor's villa to a 1940 Victory Garden to a Space Station Garden set in 2095. The old Philadelphia families with their estate gardeners enter rare plants like Arisaema Sikokianum, the Black Japanese Jack-in-the-Pulpit. The one million raised supports about 2,000 gardening projects in the city. They also will attend the Barnes Foundation, the finest collection of Impressionist, Post Impressionist and Early Modern paintings ever assembled by one individual, at the Philadelphia Museum of Art. The exhibit scored the largest art attendance figure in the history of Paris: 1.5 million. In Japan, 1.1 million stood in line to see it.

Polly Logan makes the news on the political scene, she was recently elected an officer as vice chairman of the Republican State Party. As vice chairman, Polly will be responsible for overseeing, promoting and insuring the effectiveness of the Standing Committee of the State Party, but Polly said her main concern will be to encourage candidates to run for office, to recruit and train campaign managers, and to train citizens to be activists in getting out the vote and working for candidates. Polly is also state committeewoman for the Plymouth/Norfolk District which includes Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury. Polly has been active in Republican politics and recently raised $10,000 to retire Senator Bob Hedlund's senatorial debt. She also was a member of the Weld/Cellucci transition team and Treasurer Joe Malone's Inaugural Committee. As former National Committee woman she has served with President Gerald Ford, President Ronald Reagan and President Bush. Logan also has been chairman of Division 5 of the State Committee and coordinator for Barnstable, Bristol, Plymouth and Norfolk, and has been succeeded by Rita Kechejian of Brockton.

Polly is also active in civic and community affairs and was selected to study the electoral process in El Salvador where she met with civic and political leaders. She is also a board member of NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, Inc., officer and director of N.E. Republican Council, former trustee Old Sturbridge Village, Mass Women's Political Caucus, Thursday Caucus, Ford Hall Forum and former member Harvard College Board of Overseers Committee and Museum of Fine Arts.

Polly was founder and executive vice president Doric Dames, volunteer guide service at the State House, founder Ladies Committee USS Constitution and member of New England Farm and Garden Association, Hingham and Cohasset Garden Clubs, World Affairs Council and former advisor to Kappa Kappa Gamma Fraternity.

Well done, Polly!

Here's some news guaranteed to make you "think spring." Applications for the 19th annual Cohasset Roadrace By-The-Sea are available now. The date for the race is Sunday, April 2, the time is 1 p.m., the place is Cohasset Village, the distance is 10K (6.2 miles), and the check-in will be at the Cohasset Community center. Pre-registration closes March 28 and costs $10 (shirts are guaranteed for the first 700 registrants to check in); post registration fee is $12. The Cohasset Rotary Club is sponsoring this NEAC sanctioned race, see any member for more details.

We hope that Joan Cameron is on the mend as she reads this, she is recovering from recent hip surgery. We sure do miss seeing you walk "around town," Joan!

Happy birthday greetings go to Edie Quigley; she turned 80 March 2. Although she now resides in Florida, she will always be a "Cohassetite" in her heart (ours too). We hope you had a wonderful celebration, Edie, and here's to many more!

A get well message goes to Angela Parisi this week, we hope that your bout with pneumonia is all over as you read this.

Here's something to make everyone think spring, the first robin was spotted on Red Gate Lane last week, a great big chubby one! Oh, yes! Forsythia is next!

Finally, don't forget that the Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "the Importance of Being Earnest" this weekend (March 10 and 11) at the town hall, with the time of performance being set at 8 p.m. The cost is $8 per person ($6 for groups of six or more). You can buy your tickets at the door, or at Cohasset Hardware or Buttonwood Bookstore.

William J. McKenna

William J. McKenna, 27, of Cohasset, died March 3 in Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, following a long illness. Born in Washington, D.C., he lived in Cohasset most of his life.

Mr. McKenna was a 1986 graduate of Cohasset High School and also graduated from Manhattanville College, New York, in 1992. He was a graduate student in Boston University's School for the Arts.

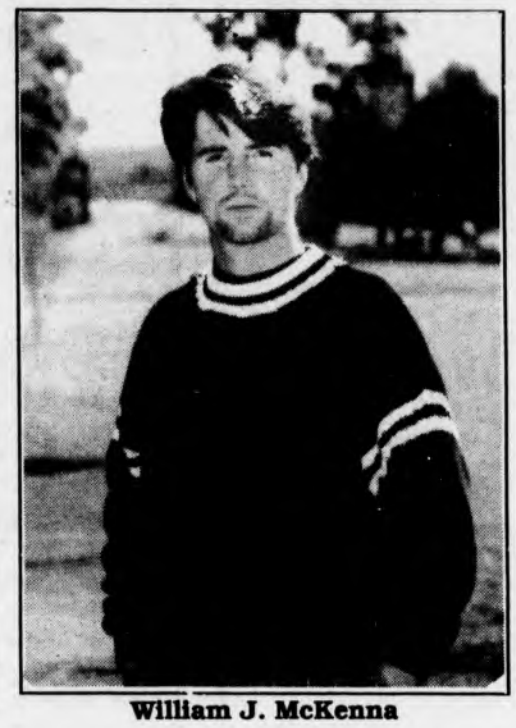
He was an all-star high school and college soccer player and he coached several soccer teams.

He won many awards for his paintings and sculptures.

He leaves his parents, William A. McKenna Jr. and Roselyn (Walsh) McKenna of Cohasset; two brothers, Christopher McKenna and Kevin McKenna, both of Cohasset and two sisters, Jennifer McKenna of Cohasset and Anne McKenna of Greenwich, Conn.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church on March 6. Burial was private.

Donations in his memory may be made to a memorial scholarship, Cohasset High School, c/o Stephen Hart, Superintendent, 143 Pond St., Cohasset 02025.



William J. McKenna

I Wonder

...a poem that Jennifer wrote to Billy in the hospital

I think about you all the time,
And I wonder, do you feel pain?
Do you get scared?

Do you hurt as much as we do?
When we lost hope, somehow you drew from within us.
Do you use that hope to smother the pain?
Do you smother the things you feel?
Do you still feel anymore?

You were strong. You had dreams.
You had so much hope.
Then why has it turned into just a goodbye?

You will never be just a goodbye.
You will be forever in our hearts.
Because I think about you all the time.

(Jennifer is Bill McKenna's sister.)

Daffodils for Cancer

Scores of volunteers, headed by an award-winning veteran leadership team, are calling businesses, hospitals, schools, professionals and individuals, to make sure that spring will be greeted on the South Shore with "a host of golden daffodils" in support of the American Cancer Society's popular Daffodil Days, March 21 to 23.

Last year's record-breaking performance brought in $61,500 to help fund the work of the Cancer Society on the South Shore. Advance orders are at $5 for a bunch of 10, or $250 for a box of 50 bunches. An attractive vase, with the Daffodil Days logo and useful year-round as a bud vase, is available at $5. Orders for three or more bunches will be delivered to the home or business

Orders may be placed by calling the Cancer Society's area office, (617) 341-4210.

Lyme Disease is topic

The South Shore Chapter of the Massachusetts Lyme Disease Network will present a public information session on Lyme Disease on Tuesday, March 28 at 7 p.m. in the Emerson Conference Room at the South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Anyone who has been afflicted with the disease or those interested in learning more about the prevention, symptoms or treatment of Lyme Disease are welcome to attend.

A video, "Lyme Disease, What You Should Know," will be shown, followed by a question and answer period. Contact hours for nurses will be offered.

For further information call Glenn or Margaret Mannke at 337-4097.

Overriding concerns

Cohasset selectmen need your input.

The town will be in a deficit position for the next several years. By press time, just how much of that red ink should be attacked this year is a matter that's still on the table.

Prop. 2-1/2 is a state law that caps the amount of money the town can raise through property taxes to 2-1/2 percent more than the prior year.

For example, if a town collects $10 million in property taxes in FY'95, it can only collect $10-1/4 million the following year. The town can cope only if salaries, inflation, and a host of other expenses stay within the 2-1/2 percent limit.

When expenses outstrip revenues, an "override" can provide voters with the option of raising more money through taxation.

Since only selectmen have the authority to put an override figure on the ballot, we think it's a good time to suggest that you call them and let them know what you think.

How much can you afford?

Should the town go for a larger override this year or try for lesser overrides over successive years?

No one likes taxes and voting to raise your own may seem like a bizarre concept. But this is America and what could be more democratic than that?

Without a successful override this year, the town will certainly be faced with cutbacks and layoffs. So it's important that you communicate with your selectmen who need to get a sense of what you "Joe Public" feels this year.

Selectmen's telephone numbers are listed and we're sure they'd like to hear from you. So don't be shy, call them and tell them what you're thinking.

Go Skippers!

Let's hear it for the Cohasset High School Boys Varsity basketball team which at press time is in the state Title hunt! Be sure to read the sports pages this week for the basketball roundup with Mariner correspondent "extraordinare" Jim O'Sullivan. Jim, an eighth grader at Cohasset Junior/Senior High, has been doing a terrific job covering the team for us. Like the CHS hoopsters, Jim is talented and a hard worker — an unbeatable combination!

Train's positives top negatives

To the Editor:

As I watch the debate on revival of the train service to the South Shore, I cannot help but remember the enormous convenience the Cohasset train stop provided for someone who had to be in Cambridge by 9 a.m. every day, and also needed — and who doesn't? — some daily time for reflection and catchup. The trail was ideal — located in the center of town, comfortable in all weather conditions, conducive to reading or relaxing after a day's work, and centered at South Station for convenient transport — in short, precisely the qualities that make commuter train service indispensable for people in most civilized countries other than the United States.

One of the reasons for choosing the house we now live in was, ironically, that it was within easy walking distance of the train station. Ironically because, in a great leap backward, the authorities shortly axed the train service, leaving us to the daily nightmare of rush-hour driving.

Last month I happened to attend a meeting in Switzerland, staying at a hotel less than a half-block from the railroad line. Trains passed by at least every half-hour, with minimum disturbance to anyone. To the Swiss and other Europeans no less rich and advanced then ourselves, it would be unthinkable to be deprived of efficient, regular train service so people can get from suburb to city center without stress, pollution or gridlock. All experience suggests that when service here is at last restored, folks will be quickly reassured that the advantages overwhelmingly outweigh any possible disadvantages.

Cohasseters are all train abutters

To the Editor:

The pro-train faction has attributed the anti-train sentiment to "newcomers and abutters." Perhaps it is the newcomers who have a better appreciation for what the South Shore offers. Perhaps those of you who have lived here for years simply take it for granted that nothing will change. Don't be lulled into such a sense of complacency; the proposed "rehabilitation" of the Greenbush train will literally bisect the very heart of Cohasset. The pattern of daily life here will be changed irrevocably.

As for the abutter argument; every citizen who uses the town center is an abutter. Every family that has a child in school is an abutter. Do your laps at the swim center, you'll be an abutter. Try learning to paint at the art center as the diesel engine roars by, mere feet behind the building with whistles blowing and horns sounding at the grade crossing there 24 times a day. Stop by Village Gourmet for a sandwich or a cup of coffee, and your conversation will be interrupted every time a train goes through what is now the town's central parking lot. Perhaps it is only the abutters who can appreciate what your lives as "abutters" will be.

Think long and hard before you let your town be taken away for the benefit of the handful of commuters who might use this train. If it were the only viable alternative, then we would all have to take it seriously. It isn't. The boat is safer, cleaner, faster and cheaper. The MBTA wants you to think it won't work. That's because the MBTA has a vested self interest in insuring that the train is built. Don't you wonder why they are so frantic to get it approved? They need the jobs it will bring. Expanding the boat service doesn't add any new jobs for the MBTA.

The ever-evasive duo of Joe Connors and Barry Faulkner, consultant from Sverdrup, attend all the meetings. They talk, and they talk, and they talk. But they never say a thing. Don't you wonder why they are so reluctant to answer honestly the simple questions put to them by concerned citizens who just want to know what this train will do to their lives? The can't answer these questions. If they did, a riot would ensue. If we really knew what this train will do to our quality of life, we'd resurrect Paul Revere and have him ride through the countryside shouting, "The MBTA is coming! The MBTA is coming! "

We can thank Mary Jeanette Murray for finally speaking out against this MBTA fiasco. She needs to hear from you that she's done the right thing, and you support her.

How about Michael Sullivan? How long can anyone claim to sit on the fence? How can he claim to lead the town? What kind of leader hides his head in the sand when a hurricane is coming?

Write them, call them, interrupt them; whatever it candidates' corner

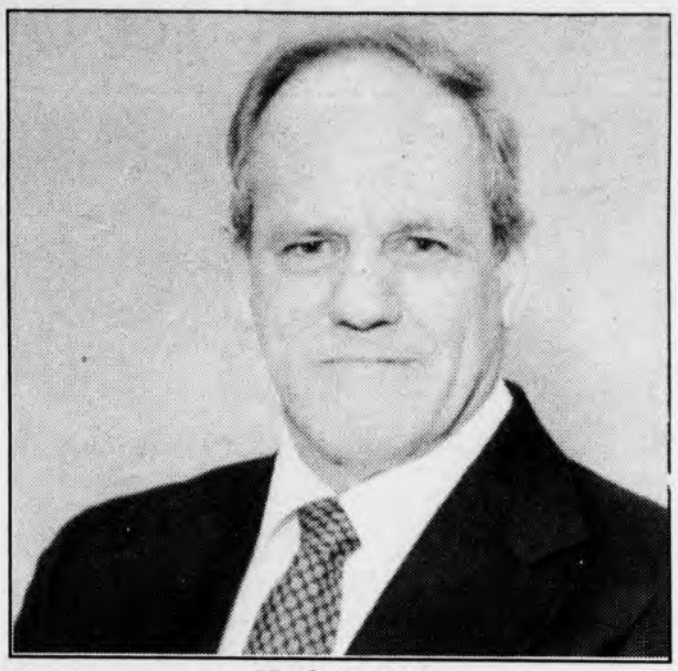
Merle Brown, selectman

Attention voters! Get out to vote even though there aren't any contested positions, show your commitment and your support.

The biggest challenge facing the voters of Cohasset is the budget. This year the selectmen and the advisory board have worked very hard to reduce next year's proposed budget as much as possible without cutting vital services to the town.

I have been and will continue to be, an advocate of getting a head start on next year's budget and not wait until December or January. Planning meetings for next year are going to start right after town meeting is over. These meetings will be for the different boards and committees that are involved in the budget process. As a selectman and a concerned citizen, I will be looking for input from all of you.

Some of the things that can reduce cost and make government more efficient are; the new department of public works, consisting of the highway, tree/parks/cemetery departments, and the Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF). By building a new DPW garage at the RTF site, the town would have better control of all equipment, which currently is spread out all over town. With increased cooperation between departments, individual line items such as office supplies could be consolidated. Could the school library and the town library work together and share resources? Dollars spent for capital expenditures such as expensive equipment (a big expense to all the towns around) could be reduced if we work closer with other towns to buy these things together? We already have agreements with other towns on sharing some equipment. Can we do more?



Merle Brown

These are just some thoughts I have had. I welcome some constructive ideas from you, the taxpayers. By having planning meetings early, we hopefully will reduce or eliminate last minute decisions to try to cut the budget.

Let's all pitch in together and keep this a great town to live in without higher and higher taxes forcing us out.

Ralph D. Kidder

Ralph D. Kidder, school committee

My name is Ralph Kidder. I am seeking re-election to a third (and final) term on the Cohasset School Committee. Our family includes three children attending the Cohasset schools. We have lived in Cohasset since 1985. I spent many years as a public school educator and administrator, earned advanced degrees in education and business and have worked for nearly a decade in financial leadership positions in the private and non-profit sectors.

A recent editorial in the Cohasset Mariner encouraged candidates for election to the school committee to share our views on the key issues facing the school department and the town. In my view, two such issues are paramount. First, implementation of the Education Reform Act of 1993. Second, the serious financial decisions that Cohasset residents must make over the next five years. I will address the latter issue here and save discussion of education reform for a second position paper.

In my judgment, the next five years represent a critical watershed in Cohasset history. We face fundamental decisions about the level of town services we wish to purchase, decisions which will affect our quality of life (and that of our children) well into the next millennium. Unavoidable sewer and landfill capping projects will increase substantially the taxes we all pay. Coupled with a potential school building project and increases in health and other fixed costs over which the town has little control, we must devise a strategy which permits us to choose what levels of which town services we are willing to pay for.

I am concerned that such capital projects and fixed costs may tempt us to gut school and town services in order to hold down the tax rate. In my view, this would be a tragic error with far-reaching negative effects. Consequently, I have suggested a series of joint meetings this summer which will bring together the school committee, the selectmen and the advisory committee for the purpose of devising a financial framework within which decisions about town services can be made.

I urge each of you to become informed about these issues. Nothing short of the future of Cohasset as we know it is at stake.

Back on Track supports tunnel

To the Editor:

Okay, so Transportation Secretary James Kerasiotes spoke his mind, perhaps too soon — what does that change in the transportation picture for the Greenbush rail corridor?

Have his words relieved the traffic congestion on Route 3 that gets worse almost monthly? Have they eased the concerns of communities to our west who now suffer the unnecessary burden of commuters driving through them on the way to the Expressway? The same commuters who would invade the stations on the Middleboro and Plymouth/Kingston branches if Greenbush were not built?

Does his dismissal of boats and buses as a feasible alternative make them anymore feasible? I say that it does not, and that the draft environmental review documents adequately support his conclusion.

As far as regional transportation solutions are concerned, I have to concur with the Secretary's remarks, ill-timed though they were. However, when it comes to Hingham, I must disagree with his sweeping dismissal of Hingham's preferred alternative, rail restoration with a short tunnel through Hingham Square, before the environmental review process is complete.

Now, those who have been following this issue for as long as I've been involved in it (and that's 10 going on 11 years, much longer than some of our leading NIMBYs have lived in town) will recall that I have been less than enthusiastic about a tunnel through Hingham, and made no secret of it as Chairman of Back on Track. But I have also been a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee from the very start — a body of citizens with a variety of views about the project, who have devoted their time and energy for what seems countless hours reviewing and commenting on the environmental review process conducted by the MBTA.

The CAC has gathered to conduct its business in a serious and businesslike manner over the years, welcoming and listening to public comment delivered both in writing and in person. This respect for others' concerns culminated last April in the CAC's reaching the unanimous consensus that rail service with a short tunnel through Hingham, (Alternative 6a) would meet the transportation needs of the area in a way that would respect environmental concerns in both Hingham and the rest of the Greenbush communities.

The CAC's updated report to Environmental Secretary Trudy Coxe last month reflected a majority view that the short tunnel was still the best solution. Indeed, its cost had decreased and that of the surface alternative had risen, making it even more attractive.

Alexander Macmillan has often remarked that a short tunnel is everyone's second choice: I agree with that view. In contrast to Mr. Macmillan, Back on Track could live with a restoration at grade, and feels that it would be acceptable but that view does not matter at this point in the game. The environmental review process has worked as it should, and we urge and encourage Secretary Coxe to allow it to go forward despite any unfortunate comments by public officials, elected or otherwise.

To those train supporters who may say, "You've sold out to Hingham's unreasonable demands and want to saddle the taxpayers with a costly tunnel to keep one man happy," I would respond as follows: The goal of Back on Track has always been to restore to the South Shore the first-class transportation which rail represents and which we have lacked since 1959. I believe that funding exists to construct this line with the tunnel through Hingham, and thus address the safety, traffic, and parking concerns of our town's heart. The cost of reducing the impact of a surface restoration could indeed equal or exceed the cost of the tunnel, and delays and possible litigation (costing Hingham taxpayers) could send costs higher. For as long as a tunnel remains a reasonable and feasible alternative, Back on Track will support it.

For now, the most important thing for those of us who want this rail service to return is to take part in the public comment period by attending the meetings that will be announced and by writing to local and state officials to urge them to support the train. Watch for details in the paper soon.

School fund-raiser was a hit

To the Editor:

Our thanks to the PSO Fundraising Committee for the fundraiser Friday night held at the Chart House featuring the Susan Tedeschi Band and a silent auction. The evening was well-planned and everything so nicely presented.

Our thanks also to The Chart House which so generously donated its premises to the PSO for the evening. Also, thanks to those who donated such appealing auction items.

CHS school council news

The Cohasset High School Council will hold its next meeting Tuesday, March 14, at 7 p.m. in the Cohasset High School library. The CHS Council is committed to enhancing communications between Cohasset High School, the School Committee, parents, students and the community at large. The Council welcomes and encourages guests at all meetings.

Topics discussed by the CHS Council during the January meeting included a wide range of issues. The Council discussed the proposed budget and strongly recommended the hiring of a full time adjustment counselor. The Council also discussed the hiring of a math and writing lab aide for next year. Parental concerns over insufficient telephone lines in case of emergency, technology advances at CHS and theft in school were also addressed by the Council. Some dissenting views on the new school calendar for next year were mentioned as was the need to find more host families for CHS female Metco students.

Library murals, clock to be restored

The Pilgrim Co-operative Bank, South Main St., in Cohasset, is making a $4,000 gift to the Friends of the Cohasset Library to restore the murals in the rotunda of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library as well as restore the library's clock face.

Edward Mulvey, president of the Pilgrim Co-operative Bank, said the bank wanted to make an important gift to the Cohasset community where the bank has been based for almost 80 years.

Suzan Killilea, president of the Friends of the Cohasset Library, said the bank's gift is the largest the Friends group has received in its 27-year history.

Sheila S. Evans, chairman of the trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, commented "The Pilgrim Co-operative's very generous gift is an extraordinary example of corporate responsibility to the community."

The murals were painted in 1946 by local artist McIvor Reddie and were a gift to the library by Charlotte Tower, Cohasset's librarian from 1934 to 1947. Four incidents in the history of Cohasset are depicted and include Captain John Smith entering Cohasset Harbor, the surveying of the town in 1670, Mrs. Daniel "Resolution" Tower carting water for corn in the drought of 1778, and Cohasset Harbor during the middle of the 19th century.

Liz Crosby, a former resident, and Elise Brink are trained restorers of painting and will be responsible for the restoration of the four murals. The scaffolding required for this work will be loaned by Spinzola Landscaping. The work will start in early March and should be completed by early April.

The clock face, depicting an early Cohasset mackerel schooner, was designed by Richard A. Dabrowski, a former Cohasset resident and was a gift of the Friends of the Cohasset Library in 1974. David Hassan of Hassan Wood Carving & Sign Co. will do this restoration.

Joseph Perroncello, chairman of the board at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, presents a $4,000 check to Suzan Killilea, president of the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library, as chairman of the library trustees, Sheila Evans looks on. The money will be used to restore the murals in the rotunda of the library as well as the clock's face.

Drama workshop

Wheelock College's Story Troupers will perform four multi-cultural folktales and a scene from Wheelock Family Theatre's most recent production on Tuesday, April 25 at 1:10 p.m. for students at the Deer Hill School.

The Wheelock Story Troupers and other Wheelock staff will be on hand for three workshops. The first workshop, on Thursday, April 27 at 12:45 p.m., will provide organizational information on how to conduct the ongoing workshops for Junior High and High School students and Deer Hill parents and teachers who have volunteered to help with the workshops. The other workshops will be held on May 4 and 11.

The goal of the project will be a production in which Deer Hill students will perform. The workshops will instruct students in acting techniques, movement, scriptwriting, prop building and stage managing.

On early-release days workshops will be held from 12:45 to 2:30 p.m. On regular Thursdays workshops will begin at 2 p.m. and end at 3:30 p.m. Parents are responsible for picking up participating students at 2:30 p.m. on early release days.

It is hoped that this will be an on-going workshop through May, with another one tentatively scheduled for June, and continuing throughout the next school year. The project is funded by the Cohasset PSO.

For further information call Linda Bolster (383-6148), Helene Garber (383-0119) or Diana Kinch (383-2948).

The Montessori School in Scituate held its annual Father's Night recently. Here, Julia Elliott of Cohasset shows her dad, Bill, the project that she is working on in geography. Julia is enrolled in the Elementary 2 program at the school. This event is designed for children to have their fathers participate in a shorter version of the students' daily activities.

Values workshop at CHS

The PSO is sponsoring a program for parents on Thursday, March 23 entitled, "Values — What Should We Teach Our Children?" at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. All are welcome.

The workshop format program is being presented by Frank Fitzgerald and Ed Leonard, adjustment counselors for the Cohasset Public Schools.

Parents will hear why the instruction of values both at home and at school has changed over the last 40 years. Participants will discuss what values children should know and how to instill them in young people.

Osgood school computer

The Osgood School PSO has donated $1600 to purchase a MacIntosh LC575 computer for use in the kindergarten class. Now both kindergartens will have computers in their classrooms. The PSO purchased the first kindergarten computer in August, 1994.

House plants is topic

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting on Tuesday, March 28 at 9:30 a.m. at the Walton Rodgers Hall in St. Stephen's Parish.

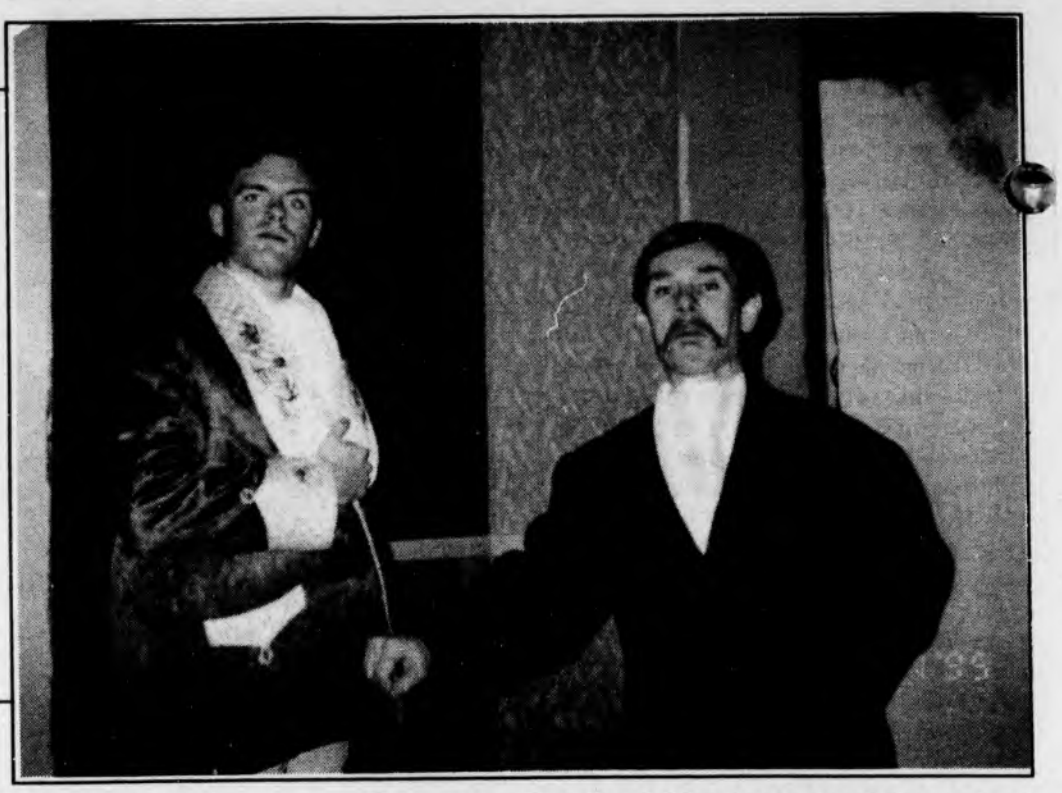
Kathy DeAngelo, a member of the New England Interior Landscape Association, will present a program about houseplants. Coffee will be served at 9 a.m.

'Earnest' premiers Friday

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "The Importance of Being Earnest" on March 10, 11, 17, 18, 24 and 25 at 8 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall, Highland St. A March 15 performance will benefit the Amarylis Foundation/Robin's Nest and proceeds from a March 22 presentation of the play will go to the Cohasset Appalachia Services Project.

"Earnest" is a masterful Oscar Wilde drawing room comedy of "manufactured" mistaken identity and the farcical foibles of upper crust London circa 1890. The play was first performed on Feb. 14, 1895.

Tickets, which are $8 per person, or $6 for groups of six or more, are available at Cohasset Hardware, Buttonwood Bookstore in Cohasset, Front St. Bookstore, Scituate, and at the door. For further information call 383-2151.



Chris Mahoney of Pembroke and Roland St. Clair Barrie of Scituate rehearse the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of "The Importance of Being Earnest" which premiers this weekend at Cohasset Town Hall.

'Lovers/Winners' at CHS

The Cohasset Drama Workshop, under the direction of Ron Emmons, will present "Lovers/Winners," a one-act play, on Friday, March 17, at 8 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Auditorium. The cast includes Alex Creighton, Jessica Hurley, Kevin O'Donnell, Meredith O'Hayre, Mary Ellen Rayment, Kelly Tufts and Nick Welz.

This will be the final performance for seniors Rayment, O'Donnell and Welz, who were recently honored for excellence in acting at the Massachusetts Drama Festival.

Cabaret show Sunday

Deep in a child's heart lies the impulse to just go and do whatever it is that they are not supposed to do. When the junior and mini choirs of First Parish Unitarian Church in Cohasset sing out the tune "Mama Don't 'Low," stomping their feet to the no-foot-stomping verse, banging their tambourines when their song says not to, the audience will relish the delightful naughtiness of their act and want to sing along.

Sunday, March 19, at 3 p.m., the matinee performance of "Those Were the Days" will feature some sing alongs, as well as the children's song and dance about defying "Mama." Adults will enjoy the March 18 Saturday night performance when many of their friends and neighbors provide a memorable musical revue, immediately following a lavish reception which will begin at 7 p.m. in the Parish House.

Tickets, on sale at the church office, are $20 (reception included) for Saturday, reserved seating and $10 for adults, $5 for school age children on Sunday (open seating). Members of Saturday's audience who attend again with their children Sunday will be admitted free. Child care for those not yet interested in theatre is available on request for the Matinee.

Local businesses and professionals have an opportunity to advertise in the program, and support the work of First Parish, which includes community-wide educational programs and free transitional shelter for homeless women and children. Calling card size ads are $25. Full page ads are $100 and there are other sizes as well. It is an excellent opportunity for advertising the talents and services of local businesses as well as enjoying the entertaining talents of others. For information, call 383-1100, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday to Thursday, or stop by the Church Office at 23 North Main Street, Cohasset.

Free PMS workshop set

A free workshop on pre-menstrual syndrome and menopause will be held at the Cohasset Library on Thursday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. The focus will be on the relief of symptoms using natural methods.

The workshop will be conducted by Cohasset resident and nutritionist Patricia Messing, who holds a master of science degree in nutrition from Columbia University.

She maintains a private practice in nutrition counseling in Hanover and Cohasset and speaks to various community groups, corporations, hospitals and schools on various topics of nutrition, sports nutrition and women's health.

Admission is free and advance registration is requested by calling the library at 383-1348. For further information about the program call Pat Messing at 826-6692.

Historical Hanlons talk set

"The Hanlons: A Biographical Study in Pantomimic Art" is the title of a lecture to be given by Mark Cosden on Sunday, March 12, at 4 p.m. as part of the Lothrop House lecture series.

Cohasset's turn-of-the-century pantomime theater company will be discussed by Cosden, who is an instructor and graduate student at Tufts University, specializing in American popular entertainment.

For reservations call the Historical Society at 383-1434 or stop by to reserve a place. Seating is limited. Admission to the talk is free to members and $3 for non-members.

Quilts on display this week

The Second Congregational Church of Cohasset will hold its second annual Quilt Show and Luncheon on Saturday, March 11, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

More than 50 handmade quilts will be displayed. The luncheon will feature shrimp or vegetable souffle and an elaborate dessert cart.

Guests will be invited to participate in the making of quilts of comfort for children with AIDS.

Tickets are $8 and are available by calling 383-0345. All proceeds will benefit the Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust and the Children's AIDS Program, Mattapan.

Teen Center update

The Teen Center will sponsor a seventh, eighth and ninth grade dance at the Cohasset High School Friday, March 10, from 7:30 to 10 p.m. Proceeds will benefit the Teen Center. Tickets are $5. Pete Collins Jr. and Jim O'Sullivan will DJ the event, and there will be light refreshments. The Teen Center will be closed Friday evening.

Monday March 13, a group of teens from the Center will serve 400 dinners to the homeless at the Long Island Shelter, through a program of St. Anthony's Church. Any teens interested in participating can do so by calling Betsy Connolly at 383-1248.

Monday, March 20, is Papa Gino's night for the Teen Center. Have your Friday night pizza Monday. Order anything from Papa Gino's menu March 20, and a portion of the funds will benefit the center.

Alzheimer's group meets

"Legal Issues for Alzheimer Families" will be the topic of the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore's meeting Wednesday, March 29, 7:30 p.m., at Thaxter Park Community Hall, 30 Thaxter St., Hingham.

Atty. Wendy Crawshaw of Crawshaw and Lesser in Wellesley will be the guest speaker. The program will include information on guardianship, power of attorney, trusts and Medicaid rules for long-term (nursing home) care. Crawshaw and her partner, Clare Lesser, have a practice that has concentrated in the field of legal issues of importance to the elderly.

Financial and legal planning issues are extremely important factors in the care and quality of life of both the Alzheimer patient and the patient's family. Medicaid rules of eligibility and trust rules are in constant change.

Skippers squeeze by Canton in first post-season round

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

Before the Cohasset Skippers faced off against the Canton Bulldogs, the Skippers held a moment of silence in memory of Rosemarie Mercurio, an avid basketball fan and a wonderful lady. It would be the last time the Skipper Dome was quiet, as the home team squeaked out a 44-42 victory.

Canton had beaten Rockland on Tuesday night while the Skippers, proud owners of a bye in the tournament, sat in the bleachers and watched. But, on Thursday night, it was Cohasset's turn and they welcomed the Bulldogs. Cohasset's Coach Ford predicted that "the game will be decided by less than five points. Could go either way."

Pete Bishop answered two quick Canton points with a bucket of his own and Matt Pierce grabbed an offensive rebound and popped it back through the hoop. Dorian Bryant's nifty inside move made the score 9-6, in Canton's favor. Canton's 15-6 lead was cut to 15-10 when Pierce threaded the needle inside to Captain Joe Slotnick who layed it in and Slotnick returned the favor the next trip down the court.

Thomas Allen drained a jumper and Bryant ripped down a board, then put it back in. Pierce snagged a Slotnick inbound pass and banked it off the glass for a pair and then closed the half with a lay-up, making the score 24-18, in favor of the Bulldogs.

During halftime the student section grew restless, and, in the second half, raised a clamor that threatened to bring down the school. Stomping on bleachers, clapping, and cheering with the cheerleaders, the crowd urged on the Skippers. The players responded.

Pierce continued his scoring tear, hitting a lay-up to start the half for Cohasset. He then pulled up and nailed a jumper, making the tally 29-22, with Canton in the lead. Tough defense and hustle by Pierce and Jared Hardwick resulted in a Hardwick lay-up. Bishop drew a charge and Allen took the ball coast-to-coast for two points. Bryant squirmed his way through the paint a la Kevin McHale for a hoop and drew a foul on the next possession, sinking the free throw.

Slotnick's fierce offensive rebounding earned him two points. Pierce sprinted back on defense to make the interception and get the ball to Pete Bishop, who tossed it through the strings. With 7:30 left, Pierce pulled up and swished a jumper. Cohasset: 35, Canton: 35.

Cohasset fans were wild with ecstasy and grew even louder when Bishop managed to slide the basketball over the top of the rim, giving Cohasset a 37-35 lead. Allen followed a missed shot by snaring the rebound and going strong to the hoop for two points. The gym erupted.

Slotnick hit two free throws to give Cohasset a 41-40 lead. But the Bulldogs must be given credit. Despite Cohasset's comeback, straight out of a Disney movie, they never threw in the towel. Canton battled and forged ahead by a score of 42-41 when Chris Beradi layed it off the glass.

Bryant fed Slotnick a gorgeous pass underneath and Joe knew just what to do with it. Cohasset led 43-42.

Canton's Bruce DeSilva brought the ball up the floor. With seven seconds left, Allen showed why he's been one of Cohasset's leaders this year by making the biggest defensive play of his career. Allen's quick hands reached in, stole the ball from DeSilva, and then he streaked

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

There's always fun and excitement in the state tourney.

However, there's more to the games than the final score.

The following are a few interesting events that happened along the way last week.

*NBC football analyst and Boston Globe reporter Will McDonough was spotted at the Division II girls' basketball opening round game between Hingham and Wellesley last Tuesday night at Notre Dame Academy.

McDonough, who faithfully attends HHS athletic events, got to the game just after it started and took a seat near the Wellesley bench next to one of the NDA principals, who also happens to be a nun. (By the way, the principal was not in her nun's uniform but it was obvious to everyone at the game who she was. Call it her spiritual presence.)

Anyway, during the second half, the ref called a foul and the Wellesley coach started to argue.

He yelled, "Oh my God how can you make a call like that?"

Realizing who was in the audience, the red-faced coach quickly turned to the NDA principal and said, "Sorry Sister."

Later in the half, a Wellesley player checked into the game and blindly fired her sweat jacket over her shoulder towards the bench.

The coat sailed high and landed right on McDonough's head.

He chuckled and tossed it towards the bench.

Welcome to the big time world of sports.

*During the opening round game of the Division III girls' basketball game between Norwell and Medfield, one Clipper fan received three calls on his cellular phone during the the game.

The fan did not hesitate taking the calls and even provided updates on the action for his caller.

At one point, he even left the game to make a call outside.

Only in Norwell.

Later during the half-time break I overheard another Norwell fan ask someone, "Was that your Mercedes I cut off in the parking lot. I'm very sorry."

Once again, only in Norwell.

*It's difficult enough to follow the action of a high school hockey game, but it's even harder when you can't find out where the game is.

One publication had Silver Lake playing New Bedford at Gallo Rink in Bourne on Saturday night in Division I action.

Another publication had Silver Lake playing Central Catholic on Saturday night at Merrimack College.

So I placed a call to the SL athletic director Ralph Frazier Saturday afternoon to find out which site was correct.

"The game was played at Boston College this morning at 11 o'clock," Frazier said.

Huh?

Apparently, the MIAA had the pairings wrong with Silver Lake matched up earned another deuce with hard work down low. Allen's swish from three point land upped the tally to 23-7. Cohasset's stands, never known to be passive, were wild with pleasure.

Bishop racked up two more points after snagging an offensive board and Hardwick banked a fast break lay-up to continue the Skippers' scoring streak. Pierce hung in the air long enough to register on air traffic control before dipsy-doing another pumpkin through the hoop.

Allen sank two more free throws and then tore the ball away from Dover-Sherborn's Joe Ingegnieri. Allen broke up court, went strong to the hole, and hit a lay-up just as the half-time buzzer sounded, giving Cohasset a 35-20 mid-point edge.

Cohasset got six straight points on fast breaks when play resumed as Bryant muscled the ball through a defender, Allen went in for a lay-up and Pierce hit two free throws after he was fouled. Backing into a transition game, Pierce pulled up and hit a jumper.

Hardwick once again cut through the paint, and his finger roll dropped through the twine for a pair. Pierce added to his total with two more free throws, and Bryant once again burst through suffocating defense to the hole. In consecutive possessions, Pierce's hesitation move down court. He was fouled and went to the line, with the Skipper Dome shaking to its foundation.

Allen hit a high pressure free throw that gave the Skippers a 44-42 lead. Allen still had one remaining duty however. DeSilva took the inbound pass and dribbled to the three-point line. With Allen's hand in his face, Canton's star launched a trey that sailed wide. Tom Allen had made yet another big play.

Skipper fans flooded the court and mobbed players, coaches, and each other. The locker room after the game wasn't exactly calm, either, as everyone had something to say about Cohasset's big tournament win.

"We didn't play well in the first half," Allen said, between gulps of 10-K and slices of pizza. "We came back in the second half with some strong rebounding from Pete, Dorian, and Joey. Everybody hit their shots and we were there in the clutch. Matt hit some crucial jumpers; there was nothing more we could want."

Allen also claimed that he wasn't trying to steal the ball from DeSilva, a comment that several teammates good-naturedly disputed.

Dave Nothnagle claimed "that after all those bricks we put up, I just knew we were going to win. I had the feeling that when Tommy stepped to the line, he'd ice it for us."

Jim Magner laid the credit on Allen. "We had the game in the bag when Tommy ripped that kid. DeSilva never had a chance against Tommy."

"It was a total senior effort," Bryant said, until he was scolded for not talking about his unbelievable rebounding night. "I though I played okay. I just did what Coach Ford told me, only gave my best effort."

Despite the flood of emotion from the locker room and the dozens of accolades players tossed at each other, perhaps Joe Slotnick said it best.

"One down, five to go."

The Cohasset High School gymnastics team, 1994-95 League Champions of the Pilgrim Conference, was honored March 5 at a Sports Banquet held at Kimball's by the Sea. with New Bedford.

That was corrected and the Lakers were slated to play Central Catholic at Merrimack College.

However, the higher-seeded Lakers complained about having to play the lower-seeded Central Catholic team on their opponents home ice at Merrimack. The MIAA heard the cries and changed the site of the game but did it Friday.

Thanks for the warning guys.

SL coach Bill Donovan said all the confusion about the game did not help his team but that wasn't the reason it lost.

Very classy.

*Some tourney games never end.

On Monday night, the Hingham hockey team played Andover to a 2-2 tie after regulation play.

Two seven and a half minutes overtimes did not produce the score and both teams will be back at Watertown on Wednesday to play a full period.

HHS coach Garrett Reagan said he supports having the game resumed another night.

He said the players become too tired in extra OT sessions and that could lead to serious injuries.

I agree with this view. However, this is not shared during the soccer season. If Hingham was playing Andover in soccer, both teams would have gone to a shootout if neither team decided things in OT.

Imagine a hockey team being eliminated with a glorified mini-on-one contest.

Eddie Shore would go nuts.

*And finally, the action in the crowd at tourney hockey games is sometimes more fun than the action on the ice.

At that same Hingham game on Monday, the two teams who followed Hingham-Andover, anxiously awaited the end of play and cheered every time either team got close to scoring.

A good portion of the fans from Medfield had their faces painted blue and white.

Another funny sight was watching the Medfield hockey team, still dressed in street clothes, warm up before the game with some jumping jacks.

Picture the scene.

The crowd is eagerly watching the Hingham game when 25 Medfield high school boys walk in, drop their equipment bags and start a cadence of "one-two-three, one. One-two-three, two..." as they hop around the rink's lobby.

Only in the state tourney.

Skippers hang Dover-Sherborn

fooled Dover-Sherborn and freed him up to bank a jump shot. Pierce's hoops gave the Skippers a 58-28 lead with 10 minutes remaining, and the Cohasset fans could smell another victory — their 20th this season.

Dover's short run didn't gain enough ground as Bishop twisted to the hole for two points, and threaded a gorgeous pass to Bryant on the next trip down court. Bryant, as reliable as ever, hit the lay-up. Hardwick skyed for a lay-up and then slashed to the rim for another, putting the Skippers ahead 61-39.

Jim "Breezer" Magner picked up two points when he dodged onrushing defenders to hit a lay-up. Pete Bishop snatched two more points with a stylish inside move. Allen glided to the hole for a finger roll that put the Skippers ahead 67-48 with 4:30 left. Pierce drove baseline and hit a jumper. Not to be outdone, Hardwick followed suit. Tom Allen sank another free throw, and Hardwick took the honor of scoring Cohasset's final points of the game, blocking a shot and hitting a lay-up.

Cohasset's win was due to several factors, not the least of which was the fact that four Skippers registered in double digits (Pierce, Hardwick, Allen and Bryant). A rebounding corps led by Slotnick, Bishop and Bryant tore down board after board. Cohasset shot 53 percent from the field and stifled Dover-Sherborn's running game.

Coach Ford was impressed with his team's win: "It's a benchmark win for us. We came up big, did what we had to do. It's been an extremely tough five days for us. We've been through two wakes, two funerals, and two big tournament games. We showed toughness tonight. If you can face what we have the last week and play like that, you're tough."

Sophomore Ryan Bishop was a fountain of prose following the game.

"No team beats us twice," he said. "Nobody has beaten us two times in the last two years. Look at Dover-Sherborn. You take the "D" out of Dover, and it's over."

Cohasset was to play undefeated Apponequet Wednesday night in the round of tournament play.

JV hoopmen snap Carver curse 85-78

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset's JV basketball team came up big last Wednesday night in Carver, snapping a seven-game, four-year losing streak against the Crusaders with a 86-78 win.

With 10:30 left in the game and the score tied at 54 apiece, Cohasset's Matt Belson came off the bench and provided the spark that Cohasset needed, scoring eleven points, and, more importantly, playing the kind of tough defense that was essential to Cohasset's win. His flashy behind-the-back passing and hustle lit Cohasset's fire and guided them to victory.

But he wasn't alone. Freshman Paul-Michael Quintin, the lone freshman on a veteran team, lit up the scoreboard with 30 points. Any shot imaginable fell through the twine for the forward, jumpers, lay-ups, off-balance leaners all went down. JL Williams poured in 18 of his own, with solid rebounding on both ends of the floor.

Junior guard Fred Howard popped in four free throws, yet his greatest contribution came between the foul lines, as he conducted Cohasset's deadly fast break and pickpocketed many a Carver ball-handler. The highlight of Howard's performance came on a fast break when he ball faked, head faked, and dished to Burke Davis a pass that would make anyone's highlight film. Davis was another Skipper who picked up double digits in the scoring department, hitting nearly every shot that he tossed up for a total of 11 points.

Bret MacQuarrie ripped down defensive rebounds and picked up 10 points in the contest, while fellow forward Brian Kilroy played strong defense in the paint and also grabbed several boards. Tight defense by Joe Magner (two points) and Mike Dunphy made for the final piece of Cohasset's team win over Carver.

Tom Allen keys one in over Canton's Mike Devoll in last Thursday's 44-42 tournament win.

Allen is a class act on the court

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

Thomas Allen's greatest athletic asset is his versatility. Allen letters in three sports, playing running back and defensive back for the football team (he was named to the Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic Team in the process), starting at point guard for Cohasset, and lacing up the track shoes to become a sprinter in the spring.

Allen's versatility also extends to the basketball court. He can put a game out of reach by nailing a long range jump shot — using his 5'10" frame to somehow grab a rebound — slapping a ball away from a dribbler with quick hands or sacrificing his body to take a charge. The offensive foul called on the dribbler gets Cohasset the ball back and fires up the Skippers.

Another Allen asset is his class. Everything about Allen is classy, from his style of play to his personality. Tom brings this to the gym as well. His winning attitude sets an example for his teammates. In a game last year, Allen was fouled hard by a defender on a breakaway lay-up. He crashed into the wall behind the basket and looked as if he might be seriously hurt. After a few moments of clearing the cobwebs, he stood up and continued, leading the Skippers to victory. Time and time again this fall, Allen was dealt a bone-crushing hit by an opposing linebacker, and fans in the stands would wince. But, true to form, he'd stand up and, almost invariably gain a first down on his next carry.

Allen offered typical insightful comments on the season.

"We've played well, despite a couple of minor obstacles and now we're rolling, playing as a team, and it's going to be hard to beat us."

Commenting on his individual play, Tom had this to say: "I think that I've been playing okay. I could be playing better, but I'm happy with the way I've been playing. Come tournament time, the way we're playing right now, nobody can beat us. I can't wait to play Dover-Sherborn again; that's the game that I'm looking forward to." (Cohasset's season ended last year on a loss to Dover-Sherborn.)

Coach Ford praised Allen's playing this season.

"Tommy is probably our most improved player this year. He has stepped his game up to a whole other level. He's become a point guard who can go out there and run the show. His leadership has been excellent this year. Every time we've been down, he's come up with big defensive plays to spark us. He takes it upon himself to step up and make things happen. He's had a great, very consistent year.

"Another thing to mention about Tommy is the fact that he's dunked twice this year in games. He's never dunked in practice, but he's dunked twice in games. That shows you what kind of player he is. He's a gamer."

Allen's talents are difficult to ignore, as teams will find during the post-season. Whether he's stealing, shooting, passing, or dunking, one thing is sure, it will be done with class.

Stansell wins gold medal

On Feb. 21 Bobby Stansell of Cohasset won a gold medal in the Boy's 15-18 age category in the Mountain Dew Vertical Challenge at Shawnee Peak Ski Area in Bridgton, Maine.

Shawnee Peak was the seventh race in a series of 12 that is taking place throughout New England this season. The medalists in each age category from all the races will meet at Loon Mountain Resort April 1 for the championships. The race series is co-produced by the New England Ski Areas Council and Mountain Dew.

Freeman grapples to fifth in N.E. competition

Warming up for his big appearance in the Nationals next month, Ryan Freeman stopped long enough last weekend to take fifth place in the New England Wrestling Tournament in Derry, N.H.

Freeman, wrestling in the 130-pound class, faced 19 competitors from five states in the tournament which opened last Friday.

Losing to the Connecticut state runner-up 11-9 in the first round put tremendous pressure on Freeman, but, according to coach Torin Sweeney, his determination sustained him. On Saturday, he wrestled and beat the Connecticut and Rhode Island state champs and a competitor from Athol to whom he had lost the previous week at the All-States.

Squaring off for his fourth match in four hours, Freeman lost to Jake Pequin of Wayland 3-1, but returned energized in the afternoon to beat the Rhode Island runner-up and claim fifth place.

Freeman, a senior, wrapped up his New England career with a Cohasset High School record of 137 wins to his credit.

A state finalist for three years running, he will wrestle next in the Nationals to be held in April in Pittsburgh.

Arrest after car chase

A 21-year-old Hingham man was arrested by Cohasset police in Scituate after a brief "hot pursuit" following an accident on North Main Street last Thursday morning, police said.

Police charged Michael Muldoon, 263 East Street in Hingham, with operating under the influence (liquor), failure to stop for a police officer, leaving the scene after property damage, marked-lane violation, speed, and operating to endanger.

Power lines were all over the road after the 4x4 Muldoon was driving sheared a pole in half on North Main Street at Jerusalem Road at about 1:25 a.m., March 3.

Muldoon turned and headed south and failed to stop for a police officer, Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said.

The car's front end was heavily damaged and Muldoon had minor visible injuries, Jackson said.

The arresting officer was Ptl. Jeffrey Treanor. Muldoon was arraigned in Quincy District Court on the charges March 3 with a further court date set for April 28.

Robbery suspects nabbed

With the help of one victim and store security, police arrested two women following two purse snatches at Super Stop & Shop, last Friday (March 4).

Police charged Debra L. Bocchino, 28, of 115 West Squantum Street, Quincy and Sarah A. Edmonds, 18, of 61 Bridle Path Circle, Randolph with two counts of larceny from the person. The women were arraigned March 6 in Quincy District Court with a further court date set for April 21, Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said. The arresting officer was Ptl. David Cogill.

Jackson warned that shoppers should not leave their pocketbooks unattended in grocery carts.

Police status report

February was a relatively crime-free month, with no major incidents and no breaking-and-enterings, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

"The police department made a total of eight arrests, five of which were for outstanding warrants, two for operating-under-the-influence, and one for larceny from a motor vehicle," Noonan said in his status report to selectmen.

Other activities during the month included a field trip to the Kingston Police Department Fire and Dispatch Center; a three-day drug interdiction course attended by Det. Rick Grassie and Patrolman Richard G. Abbadessa in Plymouth, and the town being awarded the federal COPS Fast Grant, which would pay for a police officer's position for up to $25,000 a year for three years, Noonan said.

"My hope is that we can find some way in these tough budget times to take advantage of this grant totalling $75,000," Noonan said.

business notes

Cohasset resident F. Wisner Murray has joined Baybank, Boston, N.A. as vice president. He is responsible for providing short- and long-term investments to corporations, municipalities and other organizations within the capital markets area.

Prior to joining BayBank Murray was an assistant vice president at another Boston-based financial institution. He holds a bachelor of arts degree in sociology from Connecticut College.

Linda Holland, owner of Cakes by Linda, a retail and wholesale specialty cake business, will hold an open house from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturday, March 18, at her new shop at 283B Nantasket Ave., Hull.

"I have been in business for 13 years, and I would like to thank my customers from Scituate, Hingham and Cohasset" by holding the open house," Linda says.

Adrian E. Roche of Cohasset has been named a member of the new senior marketing and sales team of Kiddie Products, Inc. The company produces "The First Years" products for infants and toddlers.

F. Wisner Murray

Roche, a native of England and formerly vice president of sales in Europe, has been named vice president of worldwide marketing. He will make his headquarters in Avon, where the company's corporate headquarters are located.

He joined Kiddie Products Europe in 1992 at its headquarters in England. "The First Years" line includes over 250 items for babies and toddlers.

John D. Walp of Cohasset has joined the advertising production consulting firm of Bird Bonette Stauderman as a senior consultant. He was formerly director of advertising production for the Gillette Company before retiring last December. Gillette appointed Bird Bonette Stauderman as consultant for its North Atlantic Group brands on Jan. 1.

Walp, a graduate of Lafayette Col[illegible] and the Naval Intelligence Sc[illegible] previously operated a film produ[illegible] company in Cincinnati. He will work [illegible] of his home office, managing projects for Gillette and other BBS clients. BBS consults with national advertisers and their agencies on television and print advertising production methods and costs.

MFS promotion for Durkin

Cohasset resident John Durkin has been promoted to vice president of Massachusetts Financial Services. He joined the company in 1990 as an investment officer and was promoted to assistant vice president in 1993.

Durkin is a graduate of Stonehill College and is a member of the Boston Security Traders Association.

Gainor announces new Carver Realty office

Carver Commercial Realty, specialists in leasing prime retail and office locations, has opened a new office at the Landmark Center, 258 North Main Street, Rt. 58, Carver.

Commercial real estate agent Lou Gainor of Cohasset is optimistic that an improving economy and Carver's strategic location to new highways will bring new businesses to the area.

Bank with a Good Neighbor.

A lot of people on the South Shore are sorry to see yet another "hometown bank", the Cohasset Savings Bank, become one of the "big city" banks.

But for those who wish to continue to stay with a friendly local bank, let us introduce you to Scituate Federal, where we earn our reputation as a good neighbor every day.

Not just by offering a broad range of services and products, like low cost checking accounts, but by investing in our community and its people. We know your name, live in your neighborhood and take the time to listen to you.

The Skippers battled Winthrop to three overtimes on Tuesday in the Division III EMass finals at the Boston Garden. But the Vikings came away the winner by a 73-69 final. Here, Ryan Bishop, #55 and Joe Slotnick, #35, watch as a Viking shot falls in for two points.

Charter School could cost town $60K

By Alice C. Coyle

Up until the March 7 deadline for applications, headmaster and founder Timothy Anderson of the South Shore Charter School was a little worried that he might have trouble filling all 150 spots for this first school year.

But on March 6, Anderson said 82 more applications arrived filling next year's enrollment for grades K-2 and 6-12 and making a waiting list for admission to the innovative, new public school necessary.

As part of the state's Educational Reform Act of 1993, 15 charter schools will open across Massachusetts and offer a new educational model for all public schools, Anderson said.

At the South Shore Charter school in Hull, Anderson said "project based learning" will be key to the curriculum along with heavy parental involvement and an opportunity for students to learn at their own pace.

Through its corporate and college partners, the Charter school will be able to offer college courses and career experience through internships as members of the community and the work force join teachers in the classroom sharing with students valuable insights into the marketplace.

Anderson hopes that along with students will come public school teachers from all over the South Shore, who will try out the Charter school during a sabbatical or leave of absence and bring some of the innovative teaching methods back to their own schools.

Anderson said the Charter School could be an R and

Skippers fall in triple OT, 73-69

Winthrop rains on Cohasset's Garden Party

By David McKee

It was not supposed to end this way for the Cohasset High boys' basketball team.

The Division III South champion Skippers jumped out to a fast 9-0 lead against North champion Winthrop Tuesday afternoon at the historic Boston Garden and appeared on their way to the EMass title and a berth in the state championship.

But the scrappy Vikings did not want to be a part of the Cohasset Garden Party and would not quit as they pressed and fought the Skippers to tie the game in regulation and claim in the victory in triple overtime by a 73-69 final.

As the Vikings celebrated on the Garden's parquet floor with the EMass crown after the final buzzer, the Skippers quietly headed back to their dressing room.

As the players waited for the door to be opened, the tears began to flow.

Coach Ron Ford emerged from the locker to talk about the game with the two reporters outside.

The rest of the reporters were down the hall talking to winning coach Peter Grimes.

Ford's eyes were red and his voice quivered as he began to speak.

"That was one of the best games I've ever seen," he said quietly. "We put our hearts on the floor and worked as hard as we could. But it was not the end we were looking for."

Ford proudly pointed out that the Skippers compiled a record of 42-6 over the last two years.

"We have nothing to hold our heads about," he said. "Winthrop is a great team and we lost a tough one. It was a tremendous season. But we are not going to win the state title."

At that point, he voice trailed off.

Cohasset's week

Survey results to be given

At the School Committee meeting tonight Thursday, March 16 at 8 p.m., members of the committee will present results of the community survey.

Questionnaires covering a number of school-related topics were mailed to all registered voters. The data and comments collected from answers to this survey provide valuable information that will be useful in the School Committee's long-range planning.

All interested residents are invited to meet at the high school on March 16 for a presentation of this information.

Absentee ballots available

Absentee ballots are now available at the Town Clerk's office for the town election Saturday, April 1. Voters may apply for an absentee ballot if they will be out of town, have a physical disability or because of religious beliefs.

Absentee voting may be done in the office of the Town Clerk during regular business hours until noon March 31. A written, signed request for a ballot needs to be sent to the Town Clerk in order to receive a ballot by mail.

Name as registered, registration address, precinct, the address that the ballot should be sent to and signature should be included on the application. Applications may also be picked up at the town office. The Town Clerk's office will be closed at noon, Friday, March 31, to prepare for the election.

For further information call the Town Clerk's office at 383-9900, ext. 105, 106 or 107.

Committee members sought

Selectmen are still looking for people to fill slots on the newly formed call firefighters study committee. Three citizens at large are needed and so far only two have applied. This week John M Gallagher, 21 Ledgwood Dr., and George E. Broderick, 444 King St., expressed interest in serving on the committee. Gallagher is a firefighter in another town and Broderick is retired and has a background in sales. The committee will provide a comprehensive analysis of the call firefighter program. Citizens are also needed to fill a vacancy on the personnel committee and the real estate agent's position on the Common Historic District Committee.

Constable increase requested

Selectmen will mull over a request to support a town meeting article to change the town by-law so they can appoint more than one constable. Gerry DuMoulin, 492 Jerusalem Road, asked selectmen to back the article which would change the wording in the by-law so the word "constable" is plural. Constables serve warrants.

DuMoulin said he is semi-retired and would like to fill in for the town's long-time constable Maria Plante when she is ill or on vacation.

But Plante, who receives $20 per warrant served and pays to be bonded and dues to the Mass. Constable Association out of that, said in more than 12 years of service, there was only one occasion when she was unavailable. She noted that police or selectmen can appoint a constable in her absence.

"I found out we live in a small town with a lot of people who are very well behaved," Plante said, adding "this is not a money-making proposition."

Plante said she does not go out of town to serve warrants.

DuMoulin, who if appointed could serve warrants in Norfolk County, made it clear he wasn't interested in the money at all and did not want to take Plante's job.

"I'm just looking for something to do. I don't see problem with having two," he said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said there might be some value in having more than one constable. Selectman Merle S. Brown said he was not in favor of changing the by-law.

Selectman Peter Pratt suggested the board take the matter under advisement.

One-day licenses okayed

This week selectmen approved issuance of one-day liquor licenses to the Konohasset Masonic Lodge for an April 7 dinner to honor its 50-year members and to the South Shore Community Center for an April 8 Little League fund-raiser.

Train study group wants answers

Members of the state-appointed Citizens Advisory Committee said last week that the MBTA's top official has disregarded their recommendation to support restoration of the Greenbush Line with a tunnel under Hingham Square.

They asked for assurances from state Secretary of Environmental Affairs Trudy Coxe that the decision on commuter rail on the South Shore is "not preordained."

The CAC wrote to Coxe in response to statements by state transportation secretary James Kerasiotes, that commuter rail will be restored at grade through Hingham because the tunnel would be too costly.

Statements by Kerasiotes, chairman of the MBTA board, have "created a sense of deep concern among those of us who have worked so hard to make the environmental review process work," the CAC's letter said.

Joseph Norton, a Scituate selectman and the CAC's chairman, said Kerasiotes' dismissal of Alternative 6a (the short tunnel under Hingham Square) "flies in the face of our recommendation."

He also criticized the timing of the T chairman's remarks which were made before the public comment period begins later this month. The MBTA's decision on Greenbush is supposed to begin after the 60-day public comment period.

Alexander Macmillan, CAC member from Hingham, said the region's transportation needs must be balanced with legitimate environmental concerns. He believes Alternative 6a achieves that balance, and Secretary Coxe must know the CAC wants its recommendation seriously considered.

CAC member Richard Cook from Hingham said, "I almost admire Kerasiotes for his candor."

Cook is one of a minority of CAC members who oppose restoration of the train, favoring a "multimodal approach" of commuter boats and buses. He said that he did not go along with the majority recommendation for the short tunnel because he believes "the T isn't taking the tunnel seriously."

Terry Fancher, general manager of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and a CAC member said he is concerned by Kerasiotes' remarks but would be more so if federal transit authorities are swayed by those views.

The Federal Transit Administration would provide 80 percent of the cost of the Greenbush restoration project, with the state contributing the balance. The Greenbush line rebuilt at grade is estimated to cost $215 million; an additional $95 million would be needed for a tunnel.

"Kerasiotes is the 20 percent partner in this project," Fancher said. "I would be more concerned if those statements came from the 80 percent partner."

The public comment period includes meetings now scheduled for April 12: at 1 p.m. in Boston and at 7 p.m. at Scituate High School. A third public meeting at Hingham High School is scheduled for 7 p.m. on April 20.

Cohasset does poorly in tobacco sting familiar motto: "It's time we made smoking history."

Locally, the South Shore boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program is working with regional towns to help them reach the collaborative's goal of reducing smoking 50 percent by 1999.

Individual town's boards of health smoking by-laws, which have banned smoking in work places, municipal buildings, on school grounds and have limited it in restaurants.

Thirteen of the Collaborative's 14 towns were visited recently by representatives who made compliance checks to find out which area retailers are towing the line in the sale of tobacco to minors.

High school age students were sent into 232 area retailers to buy cigarettes. Each had a compliance check list covering signage and displays as well as procedures for checking identification.

Of 227 attempted purchases, 108 actual purchases were made — giving underage teens hooked on tobacco a 48 percent success rate on the South Shore.

Vending machines provided even easier access. Of 46 machines visited and 36 attempts, 32 or 89 percent were successfully made.

No one was penalized or fined in this round of compliance checks, and the collaborative will now offer training sessions to local merchants on the laws concerning the sale of tobacco products to minors.

According to the collaborative's results, Cohasset tobacco retailers are in need of some education.

Of the 13 towns checked, Cohasset was second highest in the number of actual purchases made by minors.

Of 10 attempted purchases at retail outlets in Cohasset, seven were actually made, giving the town's merchants, just a 30 percent compliance rate.

That's a score the collaborative would like to see improve.

Dawn Sibor, director of the collaborative's tobacco control program said that merchant education is needed everywhere but especially in the towns that have low rates of compliance, like Cohasset.

The collaborative is currently putting together information packets on the laws for signs, displays and the sale of cigarettes, complete with letters from local chiefs of police to make sure that store owners and their employees are aware of the law.

Retailers who "failed" compliance tests won't be fined this time, Sibor said.

Instead, they will have an opportunity later this month to attend a series of training sessions offered by the collaborative to get informed.

This is a way to give merchants the benefit of the doubt, and educate before penalizing them, Sibor said.

In Cohasset, restaurants in town are 75 percent smoke-free, there is no smoking in work places or municipal buildings and there is no smoking on school grounds by staff or students.

Cessation programs for town employees helped smokers prepare for the smoke free deadline of Jan. 1, 1995. Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said there are very few smokers working for the town.

Cohasset Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill said the same is true in the schools. According to a school smoking survey taken about three years ago, just 8 percent of Cohasset students said they smoked or used tobacco.

Still, of that 8 percent, 70 percent of the time they would have little or no trouble buying cigarettes, despite a law that forbids the sale of tobacco products to anyone under the age of 18, according to the collaborative.

At Tedeschi's on South Main Street, Manager George Dolan said he "ID's" anyone who looks under 25 and all employees are informed about the law and must sign a list of rules before starting work.

"My company is very strict," said Dolan, who noted that the company's security department does its own sting operations in all stores.

"We've passed every time, so far," Dolan said.

Hennessey's employee Don Moran said he is also careful to comply with the law.

"If they don't look 18, we ask for ID. If they don't have it, we don't sell them — it's the law," Moran said.

And at Verc Mobil, David Johnson said if you look under age and you don't have a drivers license for identification you get turned away.

"I'm sure there's a kid that slips through because he looks 45, but I'm confident we check," he said.

And despite what he considers a good track record, Johnson said that the training program offered by the collaborative sounds like a good idea.

In addition to training, Sibor said that when town elections are over, and all the new board of health members are in place, the collaborative will discuss the possibility of permitting tobacco retailers as a way of giving local boards of health more control in enforcing the laws.

If the retailer continues to break the law after warnings have been made, town's would have the recourse to take away a merchants permit to sell, Sibor said.

"Town's don't have a lot of control locally and they don't know who's selling tobacco," said Sibor, who maintained that permitting, at a low fee, would improve the situation.

Cable show to discuss Coast Guard closing

Scituate selectmen chairman Joseph P. Norton will discuss the possible closing of Scituate's Coast Guard station tonight on Continental Cable's "Pierson to Person" program.

Norton and host Wig Pierson will be joined by selectman and Save Our Station committee chairman Donald Brown, as well as harbormasters from Cohasset, Hull, Marshfield, and Scituate. Fisherman Frank Mirarchi and a representative from the South Shore Lobstermen's Association will also take part in the discussion.

In addition to the potential closing of the Coast Guard station, Pierson's guests will also discuss the current plight of commercial fishermen, following the closure of the Georges Bank fishing grounds last year.

Viewers are encouraged to call in and voice their opinion during the show, which will air from 8 to 9 p.m. on Thursday, March 16, cable channel 53. The program will be rebroadcast on Sunday, March 19, at 7 p.m.

Cohasset's sewage treatment solutions start to flow

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

A study of possible solutions to the town's beleaguered sewer plant appears to be flowing glacially forward. Last fall's special town meeting gave the go-ahead to come up with a solution to the problem, which has plagued Cohasset for 20 years.

Edward M. "Ted" Guild, chairman of the sewer commission introduced a consultant on the project, Dan Coughlin of Tutela Engineering, to the conservation commission this week.

Guild also said that although there will be no articles on the annual town meeting warrant, the commission hopes to have decided how best to improve the sewage situation by late spring.

Coughlin said he wanted to meet the board as the study of the three options proceeds.

"We want to set up a line of communications," he said, adding that he was chairman of the Lawrence Conservation Commission for seven years. He said that while that industrial city did not have much of a wetlands problem, the commission was concerned about the effect of projects on the Merrimack River.

Cohasset is under a court order to either expand, upgrade or modernize its sewer system. Under an agreement reached last year, Cohasset has five years to correct the problems with the Elm St. plant.

Coughlin reviewed the three choices with the conservation commission:

• connect Cohasset's sewer lines to the Hull treatment plant, which would involve running pipes along the Hingham line and into Hull, a route which crosses much wetland and the Cohasset golf course.

This would cost more than $5 million and did not seem to please members of the conservation commission. One member called the Hull connection "the Mickey Mouse solution."

• maintain the existing discharge into James Brook and improve the quality of treatment, to the tune of some $2.5 million.

• discharge into the Cohasset Cove, which require even more stringent improvements, costing an estimated $3.1 million.

This choice would allow the town to "take advantage of the dilution" of the harbor waters, Coughlin explained.

He stressed that if the sewer plant is improved, the existing perimeter, or footprint, of the building would not change.

Guild said that the newer equipment is much more efficient and does not take up as much space as the equipment used when the plant was built in the 1970's.

If the Cohasset plant is improved, as many town officials would prefer, new technology would remove phosphorous and nitrogen, which are not currently removed.

In addition, the plant now releases some chlorine into James Brook. Chlorine kills bacteria, which is desirable in the treatment of sewage, but not in natural waterways. New technology would eliminate all chlorine discharge.

Problems with the sewer plant began several years after it was built. In 1975, the facility was cited for violations of its permit.

In 1988, Cohasset voters approved a debt exclusion override of Proposition 2 1/2 for $2.2 million to hook up with Hull's plant.

At that time, the state was going to pay for the balance. At the time, that seemed like the best solution to many town and environmental officials since the Hull facility was underused.

However, since then state funds have dried up.

Since the $2.2 million approved in 1988 was never spent, that money could be used to cover part of the cost of hooking up with Hull, if the town should proceed with that option.

If $5 million is spent to connect with the Hull system, Cohasset property owners would face a tax increase of 50 cents per $1,000 assessed valuation, or about $150 for a $300,000 home. The James Brook solution would cost taxpayers about half that amount.

If the Cohasset plant is improved, an override may not be necessary. Last fall, Guild said the state would apply to the state for a reduced-rate loan to pay for the project.

It is expected that Coughlin will concentrate on developing plans for discharging into James Brook or the harbor, since the town already has plans for the Hull hook-up.

Ambulance billing update

The town billed for 21 ambulance transports in February for a total of $7,046.98. So far in Fiscal Year 1995, which ends June 30, the town has collected $65,032.49 in ambulance fees out of a possible $68,268.51. The town is still owed $36,000 in outstanding ambulance bills for FY'93, '94 & '95, the fire department reported this week.

Bank with a Good Neighbor.

A lot of people on the South Shore are sorry to see yet another "hometown bank", the Cohasset Savings Bank, become one of the "big city" banks.

But for those who wish to continue to stay with a friendly local bank, let us introduce you to Scituate Federal, where we earn our reputation as a good neighbor every day.

Not just by offering a broad range of services and products, like low cost checking accounts, but by investing in our community and its people. We know your name, live in your neighborhood and take the time to listen to you.

Give us a call or drop in to our convenient Scituate Harbor office and see what it's really like to bank with a good neighbor.

Dramatic club's 'Earnest' explores love in the 90s

By Thomas De Santes
Mariner correspondent

Feb. 14, 1895, British playwright Oscar Wilde's masterpiece romantic comedy "The Importance of Being Earnest," opened at the fashionable St. James Theatre in London. One hundred years later, March 11, 1995, the Cohasset Dramatic Club successfully opened the satirical comedy that has withstood the test of time.

Before the opening night in 1895 Oscar Wilde, when asked if he thought the play would be a success, replied, "The play is a success. The only question is whether the audience will be a success."

On the opening night a century ago, the audience proved to be a success as did the opening audience in Cohasset a week ago.

Originally billed as a "Trivial Comedy For Serious People," this play provides an entertaining and lively vehicle for the best witticisms that English theater has given us; witticisms that have proven to transcend time and place. "The Importance of Being Earnest" is not only a satire of the Victorian notions of love and family, but it's become a social comment on the practices of modern relationships in our own decade.

People proclaiming their love after several minutes, people condoning love for its monetary value, and people falling in love with the wrong qualities, like having the name Earnest, all create the nonsense and absurdity from which the plot unfolds. But absurdity undoubtedly has its purpose. In this play, absurdity exaggerates and pokes fun at the status quo.

The trivial and almost fantastic themes of romance in the play continue to make audiences laugh while presenting the semantics of constructed love. People in the play become objectified by love and allow themselves to be loved for something which they are not. It's these mistaken identities and empty emotions that provide the comedy and more importantly, the satire.

But as a modern audience are we laughing at the society that Oscar Wilde was criticizing, or are we laughing at its similarity to our own? The 1995 production of the Cohasset Dramatic Society continued to pose the biting question descended from Oscar Wilde's era in 1895.

The talent of the cast fueled the comedy keeping the themes fresh and lively. Roland St. Clair Barrie, who played the part of John Worthing, presented a very likable character to which the audience was able to relate. His comedy seemed purposely subdued and escaped mostly from his perfect expressions, gestures and deliveries. As another character put it, he played the part of a man with "simple character" yet St. Clair Barrie was successful in acting the part beyond the intended simplicity.

Chris Mahoney, who played Algernon Moncreiff, on the other hand was more animated in his comedy providing many of the one-line ironies of the play. Mahoney was successfully able to deliver his lines, many of which were lies and deceptions, in a believable manner. His character was continually acting out a role, leaving Mahoney acting the part of someone acting which is not always an easy task.

'Earnest'. . .

Other amusing supporting roles talentedly acted included Jessica McDonald as Lady Bracknell. Her piercing lectures and societal opinions provided much of the play's satire. Laura Lee Hupprich, who played Cecily Cardew, created a strong presence on stage in her role as the sweet, innocent ward boasting the Victorian society's self-importance.

Other supporting roles kept the play moving quickly including John Rice as Lane, Jennifer Burns as Gwendolen Fairfax, Betty Miessner as Miss Prism, Charles Dattola as Rev. Canon Chasuble and Bruce Wilson as Merriman.

Besides the well-acted roles, the set design was successful in recreating the era in which the story took place. The set for the third act was especially impressive with its period furnishings. The costumes were also impressive from the men's suits to the ladies' ornate Victorian dresses. All elements of the production helped propel the performance and ultimately explain "the importance of being earnest."

"The Importance of Being Earnest" will continue running this weekend at the Cohasset Town Hall beginning at 8 p.m., March 17 and 18, and March 24 and 25, with a benefit night Wednesday, March 22, for the Amarylis Foundation/The Robin's Nest and Cohasset Appalachia Services Project. Tickets for all performances cost $8 with a $6 price for groups of eight or more at any weekend performance. Tickets are available at Cohasset Hardware, Buttonwoods Books, and Front Street Bookstore, Scituate, or directly from the benefit groups.

Tickets for Cabaret '95

"Those Were the Days," Cabaret 1995, will open, right here in Cohasset, Saturday, March 18. Co-produced by Jeanne Scammel and Mike Nakishima, this year's show promises to be rich with nostalgia, talent and variety.

The two performances are scheduled for Saturday evening March 18, beginning with a reception at 7 p.m., followed by a musical revue at 8 p.m.; and Sunday afternoon, March 19, at 3 p.m. at the First Parish House on Main St.

Tickets, on sale at the church office, are $20 (reception included) for Saturday, reserved seating; and $10 for adults, $5 for school-aged children Sunday (open seating). Members of Saturday's audience who attend again with their children Sunday will be admitted free. For information, call 383-1100, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., Monday-Thursday, or stop by the church office at 23 North Main St., Cohasset.

1,200 Cohasset basketball fans made the trip to UMass/Boston last Sunday, and were they glad they did! The score was 61-48, the Skippers won! Everyone was so excited and are so proud of Ron Ford and his awesome team!

Ron has been with these boys for four years, three as head coach, so they are a close-knit bunch! Next they head for the parquet floor at Boston Garden, so they will make history . Course, as you read this you will already know the results — win, lose or draw, we all know how great they are, be sure to tell them so when you see them.

And, tell the cheerleaders how wonderful they are too! They work hard and inspire the crowd to keep the team "up" and the crowd excited. Keep watching, folks!

Congratulations go to Sarah Bertovich, who has qualified to participate at the state level of the National Geography Bee. It will take place Friday, April 7, at Clark University. One winner from each state and territory will advance to the national competition, which will be held May 30 and 31 at the National Geographic Society headquarters, in Washington, DC.

Best wishes for your success in the state bee, Sarah, be sure to let us know all about it! And, he sure that you know we are all cheering for you!

It certainly is a time for congratulations this week, just wait until you read this! Jay Nothnagle received his Eagle Scout award last Saturday evening. Close to 200 friends from the Boy Scouts, school, and the community were there to watch Jay and cheer this momentous achievement! Great job, Jay!

The Cohasset High School girl's softball team is holding a raffle as their fundraiser, and are asking for your donations — the tickets are $1, see any of the players or send your donations to coach Mike Gill at the high school. Support your players and their efforts, and you will be a winner too!

Mary O'Brien received a package from Joan Lawrence of Golden, CO, with three hand-quilted baby quilts which Joan donated to be raffled at the Second Congregational Church quilt show — the show was held Saturday, March 11, with proceeds going to children with AIDS. Each quilt featured a different animal (bunnies, cats and teddy bears). There was a surprise addition in the box, a hand-quilted bureau scarf to match the queen-size quilt that Mary displayed in the quilt show. The runner was a birthday gift for Mary, she celebrated her "real big one" March 10! Wasn't that a great thing to do? Oh, yes — you know that you get our happy birthday greetings, Mary, keep getting younger!

While on the subject of that same quilt show, did you know that Dorothea Parmenter made and donated more than 20 white table cloths for the second annual quilt show? Most of you know about Dorothea and her wonderful work, wasn't it grand of her to do such a wonderful project? You know that all who attended the show appreciated her efforts, and that they helped to make the event a spectacular show for all who attended.

Isn't it nice to know such giving people?

You will soon be seeing tons of daffodils "around town", businesses, hospitals, schools, banks, professionals and individuals are supporting the American Cancer Society's popular Daffodil Days, from March 21 to 23. Did you know that last year brought in $61,500 to help the work of the Cancer Society on the South Shore? The Society works so hard for a noble cause, do your part! $5 for a bunch of 10, or $250 for a box of 50 bunches — a two-fold way to celebrate spring, a nice splash of yellow, helping a most worthy cause! Orders may be placed by calling the Cancer Society's area office at 617-341-4210.

Great job, John — John Durkin that is! He was recently promoted to vice president of Massachusetts Financial Services. He joined the company in 1990 as an investment officer and was promoted to assistant vice president in 1993! Sure lets you know how hard work pays off!

Finally, hats off to the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank and their gift to our library, their generous gift will restore the murals in the rotunda and will restore the library's clock face also! Liz Crosby (a former Cohassetite) and Elise Brink are trained restorers and will do their magic on the four murals, and David Hassan of Hassan Wood and Carving and Sign Co. will do the restoration on the face of the clock. How super!

Please let me know what's new with you!!

obituaries

Frederick T. Dolan

Frederick T. Dolan, 82, of Cohasset, died March 9 at South Shore Hospital after a brief illness.

He was a lifelong Cohasset resident, graduating from Cohasset High School in 1931.

Mr. Dolan was a retired demolition expert and worked at Bates Bros. Quarry in Weymouth for more than 20 years before retiring six years ago. He had previously worked at Bradford Weston Inc. for more than 25 years.

He was a member of the George Mealy American Legion Post 118 and Cohasset VFW Post 9146 and the Knights of Columbus.

During World War II he served as a Seabee in the South Pacific.

He leaves a brother, James E. Dolan of Scituate; a sister, Jeanette Dolan McNeil of Hull and several nephews, nieces, grandnephews and grandnieces.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at St. Anthony Church. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Donations in his memory may be made to St. Anthony Church, 129 South Main St., Cohasset 02025.

David R. Marks

David R. Marks, 72, of Cohasset, died March 12 at his winter home in Bradenton, Florida.

Born and raised in Cohasset, he worked at the Oak's Farm as a young boy, riding show horses for Jesse Cox.

Mr. Marks was a permanent firefighter for the town of Cohasset for more than 31 years.

He was an Army veteran of World War II and a member of VFW Post 9146 and George Mealy American Legion Post 118.

He was an enthusiastic camper and blueberry picker and loved cooking, gardening, and fishing, especially off the Cohasset pier.

He was the husband of Frances (Brady) Marks, retired Cohasset Town Clerk, to whom he was married for 44 years, and leaves four children, David R. Marks Jr. of Hull; Christine Marks of Cohasset; Cheryl Fiori of Scituate and Arlene Fiori of Cohasset; two brothers, Charles Marks of Weymouth and Ernest Marks of E. Douglas; four sisters, Eva Richards and Minda MacDonald of Weymouth and Mary Brennock and Margaret Hernan of Cohasset and six grandchildren.

A Mass will be celebrated Saturday, March 18, at 11 a.m. in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours will be Friday, March 17, from 2 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m. at the McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset. Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Donations in his memory may be made to the Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Local 12804, Cohasset 02025.

William T. Blackwell

William Thayer Blackwell, 64, of Cohasset, died Feb. 27 at Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

He was a senior vice president at State Street Bank and Trust Company and developed Boston Financial Data Services, a shareholder-servicing subsidiary of State Street. He was a director if its executive committee.

Mr. Blackwell was elected president of the National Investment Company Service Association, the second largest organization in the mutual fund industry, in 1993 and headed the marketing division in the US mutual funds services area.

He was a trustee of Thayer Academy, Braintree and a former trustee of Carney Hospital, Dorchester.

Mr. Blackwell was a member of the King's Chapel in Boston and the Cohasset Yacht Club and was an avid skier, windsurfer and sailor.

Born in Boston, he grew up in Wollaston, graduating from Thayer Academy and the School of Hotel Management at Cornell University. He was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

Mr. Blackwell, an Army veteran of the Korean War, served as a first lieutenant and ran a hotel in Japan for military personnel. Following the war he worked for NCR Corp. for 15 years as a regional sales director before joining State Street Bank in 1970.

He leaves a son, Douglas E. Blackwell of Sudbury; a daughter, Deborah K. Blackwell of Minnesota; a brother, John S. Blackwell of Georgia; a sister, Shirley K. Southworth of Scituate and two granddaughters.

A funeral service was held in the King's Chapel, Boston. Burial was private.

Hoop Dreams

The Skippers may have lost their chance for a Div. II state championship but they won a place in the hearts of Cohasset sports fans forever.

The excitement earlier this week in the halls of Cohasset High and even at town hall was at a feverish pitch as just about everyone was talking about the team's march through the state hoop tournament.

Tickets to Tuesday's match-up against fellow semi-finalist Winthrop were selling like hot cakes at Cohasset High. And even Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan congratulated the team on its Sunday night Div. II South title win over Dedham at Monday's board meeting.

But a victory against a scrappy Winthrop team was not to be. Several bus loads of fans braved rush-hour traffic to watch the Skippers Tuesday afternoon. However in the end, time ran out on Cohasset's dreams as Winthrop danced on the Boston Garden parquet floor where so many great sports battles have been held.

And this game was indeed a battle as the two teams fought for 32 regulation minutes and three pressure-packed overtime periods before a victor emerged.

In overtime the Skippers led, the Skippers trailed, they led, they trailed and then the buzzer sounded. The players and Coaches Ron Ford and Mark Hall were heartbroken and hung their heads as they walked to their locker room.

While everyone wanted Cohasset to win, they appreciated the valiant effort and hard work put in this spectacular season by the Skippers.

Over the past two years, this team has compiled an incredible record of 42-6, and captured the South Shore League title and the Div. III South crown.

It was a great ride while it lasted and even though the outcome wasn't what Cohasset fans and the team had hoped for — the memories of playing one of the last high school games at Boston Garden and the joy this team's effort gave to the town will long be remembered.

We take our hats off to the Skippers:

Tom Allen '95

Coaches Ron Ford and Mark Hall.

We wish the seniors the best of luck and know the determination, hard work, and camaraderie developed as being part of this team will stand them in good stead in the years ahead.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner we've been chronicling Cohasset High sports for 17 years — win or lose — and plan to continue for many more.

But members of this talented Skippers team can take heart that their '95 season was a jewel that future teams can look up to.

Outreach worker will be missed

letters

To the Editor:

Both my wife, Libby, and I want to take this opportunity to publicly thank the Cohasset Council on Aging, the director and staff of the Cohasset Community Center, and specifically Ms. Susan Connolly, the COA outreach worker who recently resigned to accept a full-time position with the South Shore Elder Services. Our loss is their gain.

My physical handicap began about 11 years ago but the past three years have seen some rapid decrease in my independence and mobility. The COA has given both of us wheelchair transportation not only to the weekly luncheons at the CCC, but also travels to Braintree Hospital twice a week for physical therapy and at least several trips each month into Brigham & Women's Hospital for medical treatments. Since my wife and I are both in our 60s and both confined to wheelchairs after she fractured her ankle recently, these transportation services proved to be more valuable than ever before.

The entire COA staff and Sue Connolly in particular provided excellent guidance in solving all our travel needs for the medical attention we required and we want to publicly thank them for their great support and quick actions when the needs arose.

Both of us thank the good Lord that we moved to Cohasset almost three decades ago, raised and educated our daughter and two sons in our outstanding school system, and have enjoyed the other fruits of life we have experienced in this wonderful South Shore Community.

Landfill odors should be reported

To the Editor:

Last Monday evening, our family was returning to Cohasset following a basketball game. As we entered Cohasset from the north on 3A we were once again greeted by the noxious odor of Cohasset Heights Landfill. It penetrated our closed car. The odor persisted as we turned onto Sohier St. past the Deer Hill and Osgood Schools and then into the village where we live. Later in the evening as I walked my dog these strong and bitter fumes were still present. At a meeting the following evening, I learned that these same fumes penetrated homes on Fair Oaks Ln., and citizens on both Pond St. and Ripley Rd. thought someone was burning tires. None of these people had realized that it is important for citizens to report these odors to the proper authorities.

These fumes are not only extremely unsavory but also may be a potential health hazard. Reported symptoms have included headaches, burning eyes, and mild to severe breathing difficulties.

If you smell odors which are affiliated with any landfill, it is vitally important to call town officials. During business hours you may call the Board of Health at 383-9900 and after hours call the non-emergency line for the fire department, 383-0616. Members of SAFE will also help report these offenses to both town officials and the Department of Environmental Protection. Call Connie Afshar at 383-6006 or Linda Keller at 383-6873.

Rep. Murray's train stance reactionary

To the Editor:

I have long been an ardent supporter of Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, but it is necessary to take issue with her current stance against the Greenbush commuter line.

The majority of voters on the South Shore, through a succession of opportunities, have repeatedly endorsed public rail transportation. The history of rail commuter lines surrounding Boston, as throughout the nation, proves it to be conspicuously safe to towns through which they traverse, comfortable, stress-free, and expeditious to passengers, and reliable on scheduling through adverse weather. It meets the standards of the Sierra Club and Audubon Society — two stringent environmental watchdogs. There would be no additional expense to South Shore taxpayers, without further state legislation, if the train returns. There would be no additional savings if it doesn't.

Following at least ten years study and public meetings at towns along the 100-year-old right of way, one can not truthfully state that the concept of public rail transport is being "rammed through without consideration of local concerns."

I am sorry that Representative Murray choses to listen to a very vocal, strident, non-environmentally conscious segment who probably should have learned even more from the recent, treacherous, two-day freezing-rain, multiple accidents on the Southeast Expressway.

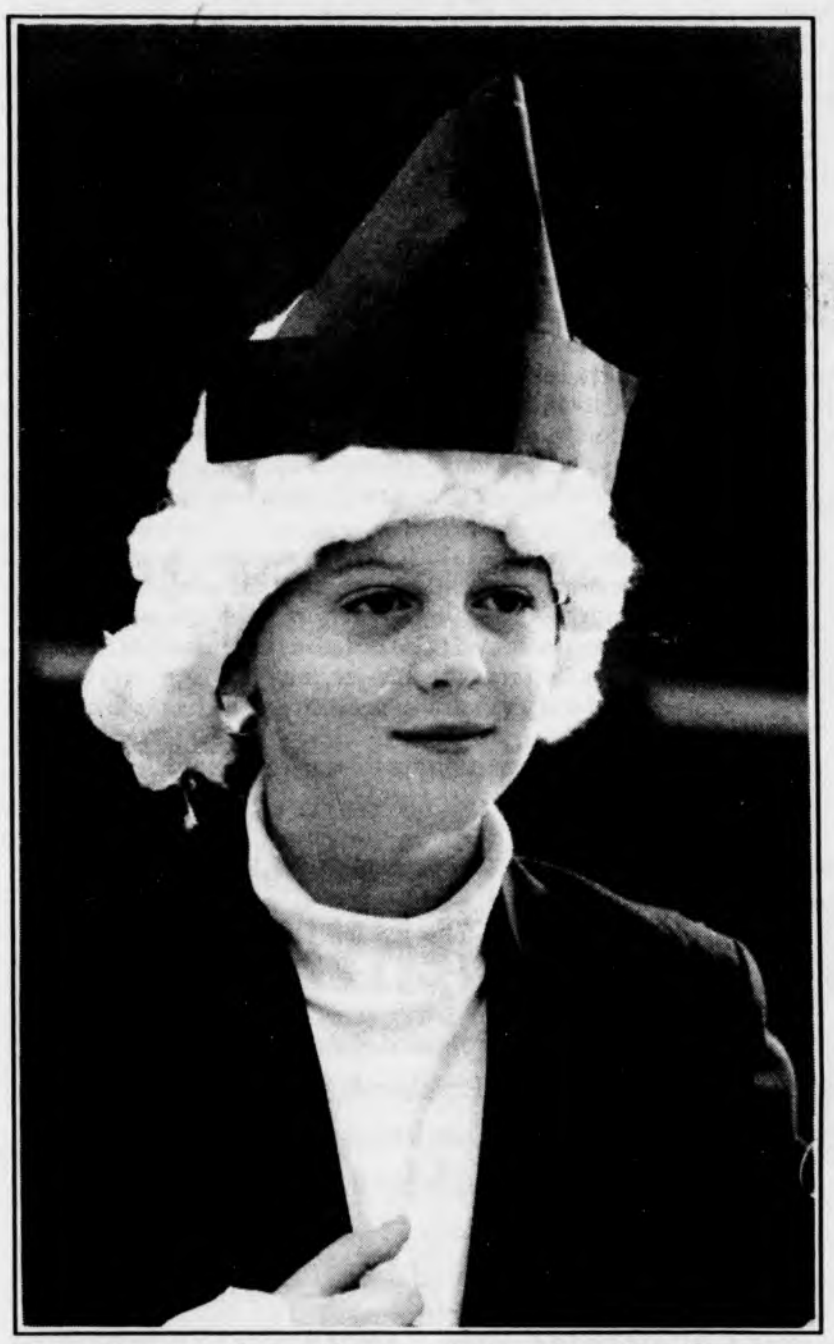
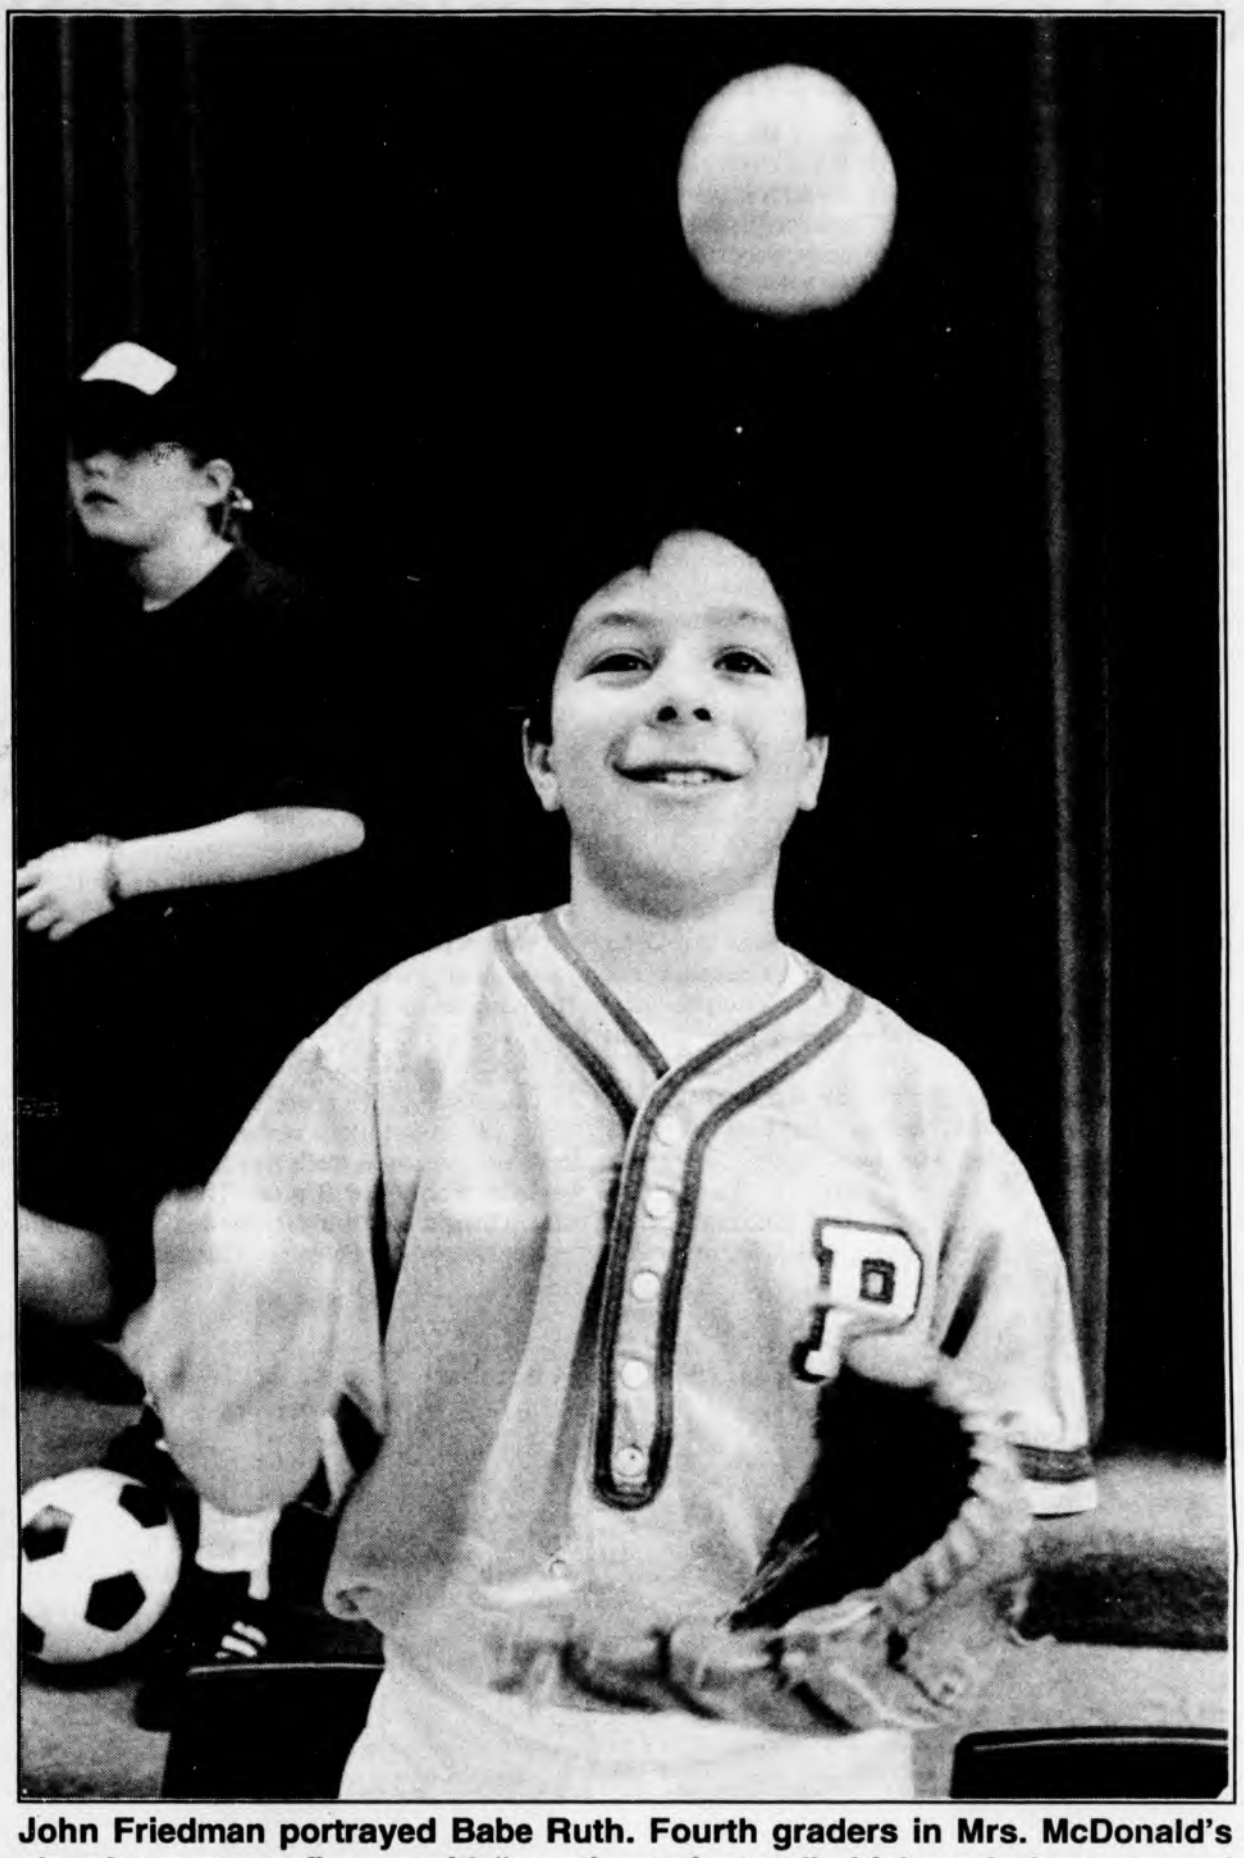
Fourth graders make waxworks at Deer Hill



Fourth grader Ryan Johnson is George Washington at the Biographical Wax Museum at Deer Hill School last week.



John Friedman portrayed Babe Ruth. Fourth graders in Mrs. McDonald's class became wax figures with "creative activators" which made the costumed figures come to life.

Civil rights activist Rosa Parks was brought to life by Rebecca Butman. There were also posters, puppets, paintings and mobiles on display at the fourth-grade event.

Sarah Hassan portrayed Olympian Nancy Kerrigan in the Biographical Wax Museum last week at Deer Hill. Sarah's creative activator was a skating medal which when pressed brought her to life.

Rail restoration plan is 'appalling'

To the Editor:

I am absolutely appalled at the lack of insight that so many local residents have about the restoration of rail and train "service" to the Greenbush line!

Somehow there is a dreamy, movie script-like vision of what will be in actuality an atrocious intrusion on our quiet and peaceful South Shore towns!

As a resident of Hingham from 1932-1952 and then of Cohasset for the next 40-plus years, I have witnessed the New Haven's comings and going first hand.

Some of my contemporaries seem to believe that the train will be like the "old days"... I think they need to remember that even when it was heavily subsidized, the New Haven went out of business because it was not cost feasible.

If we take a good look at what may be coming, it is no "choo choo" with a club car like the ones that a few upstanding members of the community would roll out of on Friday evenings,... it will be a smelly hunk of diesel cutting through our peaceful environment, endangering every crossing and screaming its presence at least 24 times a day!

The argument that other towns have successful rail service is totally offset by the fact that their tracks are all mostly outside of the main part of town, not slicing directly through the center of town!

And by the way, we were assured years ago that no rail would ever be restored to this area! Hence all the buildings and back yards were built right up to the old track bed. So much for promises.

The lies, deception and greed in our materialistic society are simply being politically activated once again and this whole issue is not what it is made out to be.

Please wake up and smell the diesel before it's too late!

P.S. You can forget about leaving your doors and cars unlocked if we have a direct line to "big city" crime.

Help is appreciated

To the Editor:

My wife and I would like to extend our sincere appreciation to the fire and ambulance drivers, paramedics and police department for their prompt and efficient response to our call for the ambulance when my wife was taken ill.

Thank you again.

Hats off the hoop stars

To the Editor:

Congratulations to Coach Ron Ford and the CHS basketball team for showing the town of Cohasset what it means to work and play with heart, compassion, intelligence and good sportsmanship! What a terrific example they set for all of us!

I want to thank Coach Ford and his wonderful team for giving the students and the town the pleasure and gift of true team, school, and town spirit! We're indebted to them.

Democrats elect delegates

At a caucus of Cohasset Democrats held Saturday, March 4, Margaret Charles, 88 Linden Drive; Ronald Goodwin, 166 Sohier Street; and Carol Barrett, 156 Linden Drive, were elected delegates to the upcoming Massachusetts Democratic State Convention.

Elected as alternate delegates were: Chartis Langmaid, 33 Tower Lane; John K. McNabb, Jr., 53 Pond Street; and Anthony Finnegan, 91 Doane Street.

The convention will be held in Amherst June 10 to consider amendments to the charter and platform of the Massachusetts Democratic party.

Title V to be discussed

Homeowners who are thinking about selling their home can get all their real estate questions answered at Jack Conway & Co.'s free home sellers' seminar, to be held from 7 to 8 p.m., Thursday, March 23, at MacArthur's Restaurant, Route 53, in Hingham.

Sponsored by Conway's Hingham office, the seminar will feature presentations by experts in such areas as home inspections, mortgage financing and the legal aspects of selling a home. In addition, homeowners with septic systems or cesspools will learn how the revised Title V regulations will affect the sale of their property.

"Title V is a very important issue on the South Shore, particularly in Hingham, where about 90 percent of the town's homes feature on-site waste disposal systems," said Toni Manning, manager of Conway's Hingham office. "Home sellers with septic systems should therefore be aware how the new regulations will affect them."

Effective March 31, Title V requires that an inspection be performed on all homes with on-site disposal systems at the time the property is sold. Should the septic system be found to be out of compliance with the revised regulations, the owner may be required to make mandatory repairs to prevent groundwater contamination.

For more information or to register for the sellers' seminar, call (617) 749-1600.

High school prinicpal to step down

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The Cohasset School Department is looking to fill two principal positions.

Junior/Senior High School principal Mary Ellen "Meg" Gallagher has submitted her resignation effective the end of this school year.

Gallagher, a Weymouth resident, who has served nine years as high school principal, said she felt it was time to pursue other career options. Before Cohasset, Gallagher served six years as an assistant principal in Hingham.

"It's time to make a change," she said. "I feel good about it."

Former Deer Hill School Principal Kenneth Ekberg took an early retirement last fall. Interim principal William Orman has been filling in at Deer Hill.

Supt. Stephen Hart said the positions were advertised in the Boston Globe last Sunday.

The Education Reform Act, passed two years ago, gives superintendents rather than the school committee the authority to hire principals. Hart said after he initially screens and narrows down the applications, he would appoint a subcommittee with representatives from the school committee, school council, administration, and parents to rate the finalists.

He said the salary for the positions is negotiable. Candidates must hold a masters degree and be certified or be certifiable as a principal in Massachusetts.

Hart praised the job Gallagher has done and the changes she has made at the high school.

Charter School could cost town $60K

D lab for other schools.

Anderson said he is both pleased and excited by the enthusiasm and interest from parents and students from all over the South Shore. Students from 13 communities including Boston, have been accepted to the Charter School; 97 of them from Hull. Multiplied by the average annual tuition for each student $4,748, Hull Public Schools will lose $460,556 dollars this year.

Anderson said he expected the large numbers from Hull but was surprised by the numbers of applicants from communities like Hingham and Cohasset.

Thirteen Cohasset students will attend the Charter School starting in September, costing the town about $60,000.

Supt. of Schools Stephen Hart said the school had not planned for the considerable interest in the Charter school and the loss of students and money. Hart expects to see a reduction in state aid, rather than a bill to the town for the students who make the switch, but he is not convinced that all 13 will in fact leave the Cohasset school system.

"Three of the students aren't even in school yet and will enter kindergarten next year," said Hart who expects to know more by mid-April.

According to Hart several bills have been filed by state representatives to change the way the new public school is funded and get the state to foot the bill rather than the public school systems in the student's home town. And Hart pointed out that regardless of the number of students who come or go, the costs of running the schools remain the same.

Still, Anderson said that none of the applicants from Cohasset had anything negative to say about their own school systems.

"Cohasset has and excellent school system, but it is a small system," said Anderson, who maintained that the applicants were looking for a system that better fit their needs.

"They liked project based learning and being able to proceed at their own pace," he said, adding "there was nothing negative about their system, but rather a positive choosing of another educational option."

"For the first time in 350 years of education there is a new option, a choice in public education," he added.

And now that the intensive student recruiting period is over, Anderson said he looks forward to working on curriculum development and the hiring of staff.

The school's Saturday enrichment programs in the arts, languages and computers will continue throughout the spring and summer and Anderson said that monthly sessions with the new parents union and students offering a taste of a typical Charter School day, will begin soon.

Bill payments okayed

Selectmen approved payment of $1,200 to Civil Designs Inc. for work on a feasibility study for the town's proposed DPW garage and $900 to Nucci Vine Associates for dredging engineering.

Common use is approved

The Second Congregational Church has permission use the town common from 9 to 10 a.m., Sunday, April 9 for its annual walk around the common to commemorate Palm Sunday. Selectmen approved the request this week.

Preschool screening slated

The Massachusetts Special Education Law (Chapter 766) provides for the screening of three- and four-year-old children whose parents feel may have a special need which might interfere with their future educational progress. The screening process includes a parent interview as well as a health, vision, hearing, motor and language screening.

Parents who feel that their child might have such a special need should call: Alicia Shea, Director of Student Services, Cohasset Public Schools, phone 383-6104.

If the child will be entering kindergarten in September, he/she will be undergoing a pre-kindergarten screening, and it will not be necessary for parents to call the Office of Student Services.

Values workshop at CHS

The PSO is sponsoring a program for parents on Thursday, March 23 entitled, "Values — What Should We Teach Our Children?" at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. All are welcome.

The workshop format program is being presented by Frank Fitzgerald and Ed Leonard, adjustment counselors for the Cohasset Public Schools.

Parents will hear why the instruction of values both at home and at school has changed over the last 40 years. Participants will discuss what values children should know and how to instill them in young people.

Osgood school computer

The Osgood School PSO has donated $1600 to purchase a MacIntosh LC575 computer for use in the kindergarten class. Now both kindergartens will have computers in their classrooms. The PSO purchased the first kindergarten computer in August, 1994.

Drama workshop at DHS

Wheelock College's Story Troupers will perform four multi-cultural folktales and a scene from Wheelock Family Theatre's most recent production on Tuesday, April 25 at 1:10 p.m. for students at the Deer Hill School.

The Wheelock Story Troupers and other Wheelock staff will be on hand for three workshops. The first workshop, on Thursday, April 27 at 12:45 p.m., will provide organizational information on how to conduct the ongoing workshops for Junior High and High School students and Deer Hill parents and teachers who have volunteered to help with the workshops. The other workshops will be held on May 4 and 11.

The goal of the project will be a production in which Deer Hill students will perform. The workshops will instruct students in acting techniques, movement, scriptwriting, prop building and stage managing.

On early-release days workshops will be held from 12:45 to 2:30 p.m. On regular Thursdays workshops will begin at 2 p.m. and end at 3:30 p.m. Parents are responsible for picking up participating students at 2:30 p.m. on early release days.

It is hoped that this will be an on-going workshop through May, with another one tentatively scheduled for June, and continuing throughout the next school year. The project is funded by the Cohasset PSO.

SSAC offers scholarships

The South Shore Art Center has announced the availability of scholarships for graduating high school seniors continuing in an arts education.

The Fred E. Bergfors Art Scholarship ($1,000), the South Shore Art Center Scholarship ($500) and the Macivor Reddie Award ($200) will be announced at graduation exercises or Senior Awards Night and at the 40th Annual Art Festival on the Common June 16 at 6 p.m. The scholarship will be paid directly to the winner's school toward tuition at the beginning of the second semester.

Portfolios must be submitted to the SSAC on Friday, April 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Interested students may call the center at 383-ARTS for an application form.

Teen Center news

With gratitude to the wonderful contributors who have made the center possible, and with the enthusiasm of new homeowners, the new Teen Center will open its doors for a town-wide Open House Sunday, March 19, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The center is located in the old Cohasset Police Station, 24 South Main St., next to St. Stephen's Church. Coffee will be served and tours of the facility will be given.

All members of the Cohasset community are welcome to attend.

The Teen Board and Cohasset Youth Resources, the parent organization, hope that everyone will take a moment to come by and see the results of the town's efforts to provide a safe and welcoming place for teens. Individual citizens, families with teens, families whose teens have grown and moved on, and families with teens in the making, as well as local business owners are all encouraged to attend.

In other Teen Center news, two recent Sunday bake sales at St. Anthony's Church and at the Second Congregational Church raised funds to help keep the center going. Thanks to all the bakers and customers.

The center is staffed by young adult supervisors as well as upper high school and other volunteer supervisors. Since the center opened its doors Feb. 11, Katie Campbell, Alyssa Sexton, Andrea Mercurio, Andrew Collins, Pete Collins Jr., and Caitlin Connolly have volunteered their time.

Monday, March 20, is Papa Gino's night for the Teen Center. Have your Friday night pizza on Monday. Order anything from Papa Gino's menu March 20, and a portion of the funds will benefit the center. And have your Sunday morning coffee, free, at the new Teen Center.

'Lovers/Winners' at CHS

The Cohasset Drama Workshop, under the direction of Ron Emmons, will present "Lovers/Winners," a one-act play, on Friday, March 17, at 8 p.m. in the Cohasset High School Auditorium. The cast includes Alex Creighton, Jessica Hurley, Kevin O'Donnell, Meredith O'Hayre, Mary Ellen Rayment, Kelly Tufts and Nick Welz.

This will be the final performance for seniors Rayment, O'Donnell and Welz, who were recently honored for excellence in acting at the Massachusetts Drama Festival.

Free PMS workshop set

A free workshop on pre-menstrual syndrome and menopause will be held at the Cohasset Library on Thursday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m. The focus will be on the relief of symptoms using natural methods.

The workshop will be conducted by Cohasset resident and nutritionist Patricia Messing, who holds a master of science degree in nutrition from Columbia University.

She maintains a private practice in nutrition counseling in Hanover and Cohasset and speaks to various community groups, corporations, hospitals and schools on various topics of nutrition, sports nutrition and women's health.

Admission is free and advance registration is requested by calling the library at 383-1348. For further information about the program call Pat Messing at 826-6692.

Easter egg hunt set

The Cohasset Recreation Commission will conduct its annual Easter Egg Hunt for children ages three through 11 years on Saturday, April 8, at noon at the Deer Hill School.

The Hunt is made possible by donations from a number of local civic and business organizations, whose names will be announced at a later date. It is also through the efforts of a number of resident volunteers that this event is offered every year.

The Cohasset Teen Center will hold a Bake Sale in conjunction with the egg hunt to raise money toward operating costs at the center.

Children should be accompanied by an adult and bring a container to hold the chocolate eggs they will find during the hunt. Children will be divided into three age groups, and parents may help younger children.

The Easter Bunny and helpers will arrive at Deer Hill at noon aboard the Cohasset fire truck. Every child will receive candy, and more than 60 prizes will be awarded. The rain date is Saturday, April 15.

Call 383-6791 for further information or if in doubt about possible cancelation of the hunt.

Community center news

The South Shore Community Center in Cohasset is offering several youth and adult activities and classes.

Girls Nite Out, for ages 6-11, will be held on Friday, March 17, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

A Boys Night Out will be offered on Friday, March 24, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

The cost for either activity is $13/member and $15/non-member. Pizza, gymnastics, obstacle courses, bowling and contests will all be part of the fun.

SAT Preparation at Cohasset High School for English exams will be held beginning Tuesday, March 28, from 7 to 9 p.m., for five weeks. The Math preparation classes will start on Thursday, March 30, from 7 to 9 p.m., and continue for five weeks. The cost is $75/members, $85 non-members.

Adult courses include Marbling, Faux Finishing on Saturdays, March 18 and 25 from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. ($110/members, $125/non-members) and CPR on Thursdays, March 16 and 23 from 7 to 10:30 p.m. ($25/members, $35 non-members).

Ongoing classes include Gym Dandy, gymnastics, dance, aerobics, Computer Kids and adult computer education.

Winthrop scuttles Cohasset Skippers in triple OT thriller

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

What a season. Thanks and accolades to Coaches Ron Ford and Mark Hall and the rest of the Cohasset Skippers for pulling off a great year.

Despite running up against bigger teams from bigger schools, the Skippers showed class, skill, and, most importantly, heart. Cohasset's cheerleaders and the legions of die-hard Skipper fans should be credited; never has there been a better bunch of rooters.

But, all good things must come to an end, although one had to wonder if this ever would. It did, when Cohasset faced the Winthrop Vikings on Tuesday night, in the Eastern Massachusetts Finals. The game was played in the Boston Garden, the finals of the last high school tournament to be played in the old building. Cohasset was handed a loss, by a score of 73-69, despite playing a game that they didn't deserve to lose.

Jared Hardwick (14 points) drove hard to the hole to start the game, drawing the foul. Hardwick hit the foul shot and the Skippers were in the lead. Matt Pierce (10 points) pulled up and hit a jumper and Pete Bishop (14 points) nailed a 15-footer. Bish found Pierce underneath and Pierce hit the lay-up.

Hardwick pulled up and snapped a jumper through twine, before grabbing an offensive lay-up and popping it through the hoop. Tom Allen sank a three pointer from NBA range. Two blocks by Hardwick and Bishop set up Pierce for a lay-up. Pete Bishop banked a lay-up for two more points.

Hardwick sank a foul shot and Joe Slotnick (12 points) knocked down a jumper. Hardwick got another lay-up and Pierce hit a jumper. Cohasset led 27-16.

Slotnick hit his second jumper of the night. Ryan Bishop laid it in off the glass and Hardwick did the same.

Pete Bishop drew a charge and Slotnick let fly a jumper that fell through. At halftime, the Skippers clutched a 35-23 lead.

Pierce started the second half with a jumper. Hardwick tossed an alley-oop inbounds pass to Pete Bishop and

Winthrop rains on Cohasset's Garden Party

He quickly caught himself as he was asked about the Winthrop second half press.

"We did not adjust well to their press," he admitted. "We had a chance to put them away and we didn't do it. But the game was like a heavyweight fight, both teams kept firing at each other to the end."

The Skippers, who boasted a starting frontcourt of 6'8" Peter Bishop, 6'4" Jared Hardwick and 6'4" Dorian Bryant, had their way early with the smaller Viking team (no starter over 6'2") as they cruised to a 35-21 first half lead.

The Skippers retained their lead in the second half despite a furious Viking press and appeared to put the game out of reach with a Hardwick jumper with two minutes to play to make the score 53-44.

Then the roof fell in for the Skippers.

The Vikings started hitting baskets and making foul shots while the Skippers went ice cold (Bryant, Joe Slotnick and Tom Allen all missed the front ends of one-on-ones) and with 25.6 seconds to go, Winthrop trailed 55-52 and had the ball.

Two seconds later Viking Todd Doherty received a pass in three-point land along the baseline. He took the shot. Swish.

And team that should have been eliminated somehow found a life and tied the game at 55-55.

In the first four-minute OT, the Skippers fell behind 59-57 before Peter Bishop hit the tying hoop with 51.9 to play.

Both teams missed potential winning shots and the game went to a second OT.

Once again Cohasset fell behind as the Vikings scored two hoops to make it 63-59 with 2:55 to play.

But Peter Bishop hit two foul shots to cut it to 63-61.

And after the Vikings scored to make it 65-61, Bishop hit a hoop cut the lead to 65-63 with 1:24 to play.

Then after a Viking turnover, Hardwick connected on a drive with 45 seconds.

The game was now tied at 65-65 and went to a third OT period.

But in third extra frame, the Vikings took control in the final 1:25 after Slotnick tied the game at 69-69 with a jumper.

Lawone Bennett hit two fouls shot to give Winthrop a 71-69 lead.

Then after Allen missed a three-pointer with 45.4 to go, Doherty (who hit the tying three-pointer in regulation) put the game out of reach with two foul shots with nine seconds to go.

The final was 73-69.

Peter Bishop led all Cohasset scorers with 18 points.

Hardwick chipped in with 16, including 12 in the first half.

Slotnick scored 14 and Matt Pierce added ten.

Anthony Poto led the Vikings with 18 points.

The Skippers ended the season with a 22-3 record and were South Shore League and Division III South champions.

The Vikings improved to 21-4 and will play for the Division III state title at the Centrum this weekend.

There are few happy endings in the state tournament.

Only one team in each Division ends the season with a victory.

Everyone else goes home with the sour taste of defeat.

And those defeats come in all shapes and sizes.

On Saturday at Merrimack College, the Marshfield High hockey team was bounced from the state tourney by Whitman-Hanson thanks to a magical 1:38 stretch of play by the Panthers.

Tied at 1-1 heading into the third period, the Panthers hit for three straight goals against the Rams with the first coming only 17 seconds into the period.

One minute and two seconds later the Panthers made the score 3-1.

Then the killer goal came 23 seconds later and that was all she wrote for the Rams as they fell behind 4-1.

The three Panther tallies totally took the wind and the momentum from the Marshfield sails.

Coach Jack Crowley called time out after the third straight goal but the clock had already struck midnight for the Rams as they ended up losing 4-1.

The Panthers now join fellow Atlantic Coast League rival Hingham in the Division II EMass semi-finals.

The loss closed the book on the Rams' season and their nine-game winning streak.

It was frightening how quickly the Panthers took control of the game during that 1:38 stretch in the third frame.

Throughout the second period, the Panthers peppered Ram goalie Jason Kadish with quality shot after quality shot but they could not break the 1-1 deadlock.

Marshfield also had chances of their own but could not score and it looked like the game was going to end at 2-1, probably in overtime.

Kadish, who had a perfect 11-0 record going into the game, was standing on his head to keep the Panthers from scoring in the second period.

In fact, after one shot, he even looked into the net to see if the puck was there. It turned out to be under his pads.

However, it seemed the Zamboni cleared away all the Rams' karma after the second period and everything the Panthers threw towards the net found a way to go in in that 1:38 stretch.

There is more acute pain in an overtime defeat but a loss like Marshfield's leaves a duller, lingering ache.

Skippers hang Dedham from yardarm 61-48

By Jim O'Sullivan
Special to the Mariner

The Skippers calmly dismissed yet another opponent Sunday night, March 12, as they sent the Dedham Marauders packing with a 61-48 victory to claim the South Sectional championship.

Matt Pierce was Cohasset's high scorer; the senior scoring machine lit it up for 16 points. Throw in some hustle and great defense and Pierce came up big one more time for his team.

But Pierce was not alone by any stretch of the imagination. Jared Hardwick pitched in with 12 points.

Cohasset's game wasn't all Easy Street, however. The Skippers took a four point deficit into the locker room at the half. Whatever happened behind those doors worked, however, as the Skippers came out with guns blazing.

Pete Bishop started the game with a lay-up, and Hardwick dished to Pierce for Matt's first bucket, the second one came on his trademark pull-up jumper. Tight defense set up Tom Allen's three pointer. Joe Slotnick rejected a hapless Marauder's shot, and Hardwick sailed from coast to coast for the lay-up. Yet Dedham's squad stubbornly held on to a 14-11 lead.

Ryan Bishop scored four quick points on lay-ups and Allen drained another three. Pete Bishop took a Slotnick pass to the hole for two points, giving the Skippers a 20-18 lead. Pierce's foul shot and Ryan's offensive put-back weren't enough to hold the Skipper lead, as Dedham led 27-23 at the half.

Pierce started the Skipper's engines in the second half with a jumper and a nifty move to the hoop for a pair. Hardwick netted a breakaway lay-up and Pete Bishop soared over stunned defenders for another lay-up. Bishop snagged an offensive board and twirled back through the strings.

Slotnick picked up another shot block and Hardwick stole the ball and hit the lay-up, putting Cohasset up by a tally of 37-34. Pierce put an up-fake on his opponent, blew by him, and launched a jumper that, predictably, went in. Hardwick hit a jumper and Tom Allen's breakaway dunk with seven minutes left brought the Skipper faithful to their feet. the Clark Athletic Center at UMass-Boston was rocked to its foundation.

Slotnick picked up two buckets, and Jeremiah "Downtown" Stevenson's flawless delivery launched the ball on a path straight through the bottom of the net, lifting the Skippers to a 50-36 edge. Dorian Bryant connected for two foul shots and Jared Hardwick picked up another bucket.

Hardwick showed why he's a human highlight film by jamming the ball through the hoop for another tomahawk slam dunk. Ho hum, another Hardwick dunk. The sun rises, the sun sets, and ESPN should broadcast Jared Hardwick highlight reels 24 hours a day. Pierce was repeatedly fouled at the end of the game and sank five free throws to finish Cohasset's scoring.

But, the Skippers weren't finished. Tough defense and crisp ball movement by Andy Fitzsimmons, Jim Magner, Jerome Marion, and Dave Nothnagle were the icing on the cake in the Skippers thrashing of the Marauders.

Winthrop scuttles Cohasset

Slotnick nailed a jumper. But Winthrop had pulled within three points, 43-40, by rallying with ferocious defense.

Bishop nailed a free throw and CHS led 44-40 with six minutes left. Dorian Bryant picked up a lay-up and Slotnick did the same. Allen picked up a steal and gave Cohasset the lead 50-42. Bryant picked off a pass, dribbled to the hole and hit the lay-up. Bishop tickled the twine with a foul shot and then worked his way through the lane for a lay-up. Winthrop showed heart by battling back to tie the Skippers with a three-pointer that sent the contest into overtime.

Hardwick started the overtime period with a jumper but the Vikings answered. Bishop muscled through the paint for a bucket. Cohasset's Pierce and Hardwick dove to the parquet floor for a loose ball and the possession arrow pointed Cohasset's way.

Cohasset couldn't score, and the Vikings and the Skippers headed into their second overtime. Winthrop jumped out to a quick 63-59 lead but the Skippers fought back with hoops by Bishop and Hardwick.

Heading into the third overtime, Winthrop jumped out to another four point lead. But Cohasset battled back when Slotnick hit two free throws and a jumper. Cohasset couldn't catch the unruly Vikings and Winthrop triumphed over the mighty blue.

Once again, congratulations to Coach Ford and his team of dedicated athletes on becoming South Sectional champs.

The Skippers season has come to an end, but it sure was a great ride, wasn't it ?

Skippers top Apponequet

By Jim O'Sullivan
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset squeaked by the Apponequet Lakers by a score of 52-49 in an emotion-filled contest that both teams deserved to win.

Jared Hardwick took a Tom Allen pass to the hole for two points, his team's first, and then he hit a three pointer, earning himself five quick points. Hardwick, only 15 years old, would finish with 24 points. Apponequet went ahead 9-5, but Hardwick brought the Skippers within two with a turnaround jumper. Jeremiah Stevenson showed why he is called "Downtown" by nailing one of his trademark three pointers.

Hardwick's nifty inside move pulled Cohasset within two and his breakaway slam dunk whipped the Skipper fans into a frenzy. Captain Joe Slotnick popped a foul-line jumper through the hoop for two points, ending the half. Apponequet held a 28-24 edge.

Allen started the second half with a steal and Hardwick drained another jumper. Then Jared broke away, hit a lay-up, drew the foul, and hit the foul shot as the Lakers could only shake their heads in frustration. Pierce squirmed for a lay-up, and Slotnick drilled a three pointer, cutting Apponequet's edge to seven. 41-34.

Slotnick's offensive rebounding earned him two more points. Pete dished to Hardwick for another high-flying dunk that once again brought the Skipper fans to an immeasurable decibel level. Hardwick pulled up and sank a jumper, but, with 3:15 remaining, Cohasset was down 49-42, and Coach Ford called a timeout.

Later, Ford described what went on in the huddle.

"I've been coaching these guys since they were in the ninth grade and they told me then that they wanted a state championship. I told them in that huddle that there was no way it was going to end here. They looked right back at me and said, 'You're right.'

The timeout was enough to visibly charge up the Skippers and Apponequet wouldn't score again. Hardwick battled for a lay-up and Bishop hit two clutch free throws. The Skippers now only trailed by three.

A mid-court scramble for possession was won by Cohasset and, somehow, Pierce found Hardwick underneath for an easy bucket. Cohasset got the ball back and Slotnick's offensive rebounding again saved Cohasset as he scored off a CHS miss. Cohasset: 50-Apponequet:49.

Slotnick's block of a shot set up a Hardwick dish to Pierce, who made it 52-49 with a lay-up.

With two seconds left, Apponequet got the ball to star Dave Donnelly. Donnelly launched a three pointer that Cohasset fans expected to fall through the twine. It didn't and Cohasset was on to the South Sectional Finals.

police report

Robbery suspects sought

Police are seeking further information leading to the arrest of two men who stole a diamond ring valued at $4,000 from Cohasset Jewelers, Feb. 24.

The white male, who took the ring, was wearing a ball cap and is described as 5'6" to 5'9" tall, 140 lbs., and has a bad limp on his right side. He ran to a waiting car.

The ring, which is marked CJ 14K, is 3/4 carat.

Call Det. Rick Grassie at 383-1055 with any information.

Warrant arrest made

A Hull man wanted for a Cohasset convenience store robbery last fall has been apprehended, Police Sgt. Robert W. Jackson said.

Weymouth police picked up Daniel B. Jenkins, 10 Malta St., Hull, Feb. 19 on a Cohasset warrant.

Jenkins is charged with breaking and entering in the nighttime and larceny of property valued at more than $250 in a robbery at Mary Lou's News, Nov. 8, 1994, Jackson said.

Cohasset police sought a warrant out of Quincy District Court Nov. 14, 1994 for Jenkins' arrest.

After his arrest last month, Jenkins was held at the Norfolk County House of Correction on $1,000 bail. Jenkins plead guilty March 10 and was sentenced to two years with 15 months to serve with the balance suspended for two years, Jackson explained.

Police would not say what was taken in the robbery.

$14.6 million budget tops town meeting agenda

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The town's proposed $14.6 million budget may be one of the hottest topics Saturday because if passed uncut it puts the town in a deficit position and therefore sets the stage for an override vote later this spring.

That's Article 3 of the town warrant which includes more than 60 items of the town's business slated for the annual town meeting which gets underway at 10 a.m., March 25 in the auditorium at Cohasset High School.

To be taken up at the special town meeting held during the regular town meeting are more than a dozen articles involving authorization for spending this fiscal year which ends June 30.

Town Moderator George Marlette said he doesn't expect there will be any difficulty quickly reaching the required quorum of 100 registered voters. And because of the volume of business to be conducted, he is virtually certain that the town meeting will have to be continued to 7:30 p.m. Monday night.

Always looking for time savers, Marlette plans to have town counsel Richard Henderson sit at a table on stage so he can reach the podium more easily and be close at hand to advise the moderator.

Cohasset doctor on the cutting edge of pain control

By Alice C. Coyle

We read about it in the newspaper or we see it on the evening news — how an amazing medical breakthrough, a new surgical procedure, or a miracle drug — can now cure a previously fatal disease.

But despite all of the advances in the field of medicine, hundreds of thousands of people live with pain every day of their lives. Whether it's migraine headaches, chronic low back pain, or a sports injury that just won't heal, many continue to suffer and resign themselves to "live with the pain" because they have been unable to find relief.

At South Shore Hospital's Pain Management Center, Dr. Clifford Breslow, Dr. James Wechsler, and Dr. Gordon Juric focus on your pain, locating its source and finding a way to stop it.

A new addition to the hospital, keeping it on the cutting edge of quality medical care, the pain clinic which has been up and running since December, is the only one of its kind in the region. Wechsler and Breslow are two of just 12 physicians in the state who are board certified in pain management.

A sub-specialty of anesthesiology, pain management is a relatively new field and one that Breslow, a Cohasset resident, says he finds very rewarding. With work as an anesthesiologist in trauma, obstetrics, the operating room, and in the intensive care unit, Breslow, a member of the South Shore Anes-

Near accord on override amount reached

By David Johnson

It is likely that Cohasset voters will be asked to support a $360,000 override of Proposition 2-1/2 in a special election later this spring, although officials have yet to decide on an exact figure or which exactly items must be paid for through an override.

An override of $355,000 would add $108 to the annual typical, or median, tax bill for a $242,000 home. Currently, the owner of a $242,000 home pays $3,465 in property taxes.

In the coming fiscal year, the taxes would be $3,559, without an override.

A $355,000 override would bring the tax bill to $3,667.

The assessor's office also provided figures for the average Cohasset tax bill, which is higher than the median. A $355,000 override would add $128 to the average tax bill, bringing the average to $4,349, up from $4,221 if an override is not approved.

At a meeting held last week, selectmen met with school and advisory committee members to discuss

Absentee ballots available

Absentee ballots are now available at the Town Clerk's office for the town election Saturday, April 1. Voters may apply for an absentee ballot if they will be out of town, have a physical disability or because of religious beliefs.

Absentee voting may be done in the office of the Town Clerk during regular business hours until noon March 31. A written, signed request for a ballot needs to be sent to the Town Clerk in order to receive a ballot by mail.

Name as registered, registration address, precinct, the address that the ballot should be sent to and signature should be included on the application. Applications may also be picked up at the town office. The Town Clerk's office will be closed at noon, Friday, March 31, to prepare for the election.

For further information call the Town Clerk's office at 383-9900, ext. 105, 106 or 107.

Greenbush hearings set

The MBTA has announced the release of the Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Statement/ Report for Transportation Improvements in the Greenbush Line Corridor. The document is being printed and will be available at the State Transportation Library in Boston and at public libraries in Greenbush corridor towns by March 22.

Five public information meetings have been scheduled. They will begin with an open house from 6:30 to 8 p.m., when attendees may view project documents and displays and speak informally with the project staff. A question-and-answer session will follow from 8 to 9 p.m. The locations and dates of the public meetings are: Scituate Library, 85 Branch St., Thursday, March 23; Braintree Town Hall Auditorium, off Washington St., Thursday, March 30; Hingham Town Hall, 7 East St., Wednesday, April 5; Weymouth Town Hall, 75 Middle St., Thursday, April 6; Cohasset High School Cafeteria, Pond St., Tuesday, April 11.

Three public hearings have also been scheduled at which comments and testimony will be taken. A formal transcript will be made of the proceedings. The MBTA will not answer questions about the project or respond to comments at the public hearings because the public information meetings were designed for this purpose. Public hearings are scheduled as follows:

State Transportation Building, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, Wednesday, April 12, 1 p.m.; Scituate High School Auditorium, 606 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Rt. 3A at First Parish Road), Wednesday, April 12, 7 p.m.; Hingham High School Auditorium, 41 Pleasant St., Thursday, April 20, 7 p.m.

Written comments will be accepted at the public hearings or may be sent to the Federal Transit Administration regional office in Cambridge or to the Massachusetts Secretary of Environmental Affairs in Boston. Comments are due by Monday, May 22, 1995. Anyone with questions about the meetings or hearings, reviewing a copy of the SDEIS/R or about submitting comments may contact Joseph Connor, MBTA Project Manager, at (617) 722-3422.

Warrant wording objected to

Selectmen are not happy with wording on the cover of the town warrant that says a "Proposition 2-1/2 override is needed."

But they found out this week that the statement is not illegal.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she called the state General Counsel of Campaign Finance and was told that while in this case it is not illegal, town officials should steer away for "advocacy language" to avoid problems.

"It could be construed as pushing for an override," Selectman Martha Gjesteby said last week about the wording.

Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said the advisory committee asked it be put on the warrant.

Gjesteby said the advisory committee overstepped its bounds.

"We make up the warrant," she said. "They should come to us."

Selectman Merle Brown said they board send a letter saying they were not happy.

Selectman Peter Pratt, who said the advisory committee had put Doyon in a "tight spot" said the matter "is electioneering with town funds and it's wrong."

State law prohibits the use of town funds to lobby for an override vote.

The 48-page warrant cost $27 a page to print.

Lighting black out may be lifted

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Selectmen say they will support an article before town meeting to allow holiday lighting on the Common for events sponsored by non-profit organizations.

The citizens' petition article is being put before the town to avert a recurrence of what happened last fall when the South Shore Community Center was told it couldn't install small white lights on the fruit trees for just two hours during the Jingle Bell Walk, said Community Center Program Director Stephanie Church.

Church said the community center would also like to add lights to the Common for the Celebrate '96 event being planned for New Year's Eve.

Selectmen said they would like the article to be more specific and limit the time for lighting from Thanksgiving through Jan. 15 to dovetail with a town by-law allowing holiday lighting in any business or light industry district during that same time frame.

This year the selectmen only authorized lighting of the newly planted evergreen on the town common.

Robert V. Davenport, who attended last week's board meeting, asked what would happen if the neighbors start complaining about the lights.

Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan said he would have no sympathy for them.

"People who buy property around the common area have to understand that's the town's common.

"Many residential homes put a lot of lighting out that can affect neighbors. The Common is a beautiful setting that asks for lights," he said.

Selectman Peter Pratt noted that selectmen are custodians of the town's public property.

"Someone has to be the traffic cop and that's us," he said.

Train may be on ballot

At Chairman Michael Sullivan's suggestion, selectmen will mull over placing a Greenbush question on the ballot during the proposed override election in May.

The last time the town voted on Greenbush was 1991. At that time 1,324 favored and 754 voted against the railroad project. A second question on Greenbush failed by about 400 votes when it included the wording asked if they'd support the project "if such restoration required a significant portion of its total costs be paid by local taxpayers."

In the 1985 referendum on Greenbush, 1,192 Cohasseters favored restoration and 266 voted against it. When asked if they'd use it 1,053 said yes and 349 said no. Voters favored Greenbush then by a vote of 834 to 552 even if the town had to subsidize its operating costs.

Sullivan said since there's more information out there about the train, it would be advantageous to get a more up-to-date idea about how the townspeople feel.

He prefers asking two questions; one if the voter supports the train and the second if the voter would use it for commuting purposes.

Selectman Jane Goedecke stressed the ballot question must be as neutral as possible and suggested the board go with a single question asking voters if they support the train or not.

"The question must be as non editorial as it can be, otherwise the results will be argued against," she said.

Currently commuter rail is subsidized using a formula set by the legislature for towns in the MBTA district whether or not towns, like Cohasset, get any direct service. There is a committee of which local state Rep. Frank Hynes (D-Marshfield) is a member which is studying the way the MBTA assessments are handled, Selectman Martha Gjesteby noted.

The state feasibility study, called an Environmental Impact Report, on Greenbush has been released. The library and the selectmen's office have copies for public perusal.

the town's financial situation.

Although considerable discussion was spent talking about how to pay for specific items in the town and school department portions of the budget, Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan summed things up when he said: "a $360,000 override is the bottom line."

The group must determine exactly which items would be better paid for through borrowing, the override or available free cash. Some officials felt that operating expenses, such as repair of the bathrooms in the schools, should not be paid for through an override, but rather through free cash.

There appeared to be nearly universal support of an override question. but Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she has not made up her mind.

Several others in the room appeared annoyed with Gjesteby.

"What do you mean?" asked Selectman Jane Goedecke.

"No, I'm not comfortable with $350,000," Gjesteby said. "A couple of hundred thousand, yes. I'm not ready to make my mind up. I have not decided yet."

Sullivan said he was afraid that if officials were not united in support of the override, it could make the questions passage more difficult.

After the meeting, a member of the school parents' organization said outside that Gjesteby's comments could be very damaging to the question's passage.

Advisory Committee Chairman Nancy Adams Roth said that that committee has reviewed the budgets and did not feel comfortable recommending any further reductions. She pointed out that officials have been welcome to make suggestions during the process and wondered which items Gjesteby would eliminate.

"We do not want to cut anymore," Roth stated, adding later that if the question failed, the school department and the municipal side of government would each have to cut $180,000.

Sullivan said that the town might have to lay off as many as five people.

Goedecke said officials must be as specific as possible about the cuts that would have to be made if the question failed. She also pointed out that it is inappropriate to discuss actual political strategy in a town building.

The group agreed to hold a meeting at a church or in a home, once the actual override items have been chosen, to discuss strategy.

Goedecke said officials could attend only as individuals and not as board members.

Selectmen also pointed out that the amount of the override will depend upon town meeting's passage of the budget as submitted.

Selectman Peter Pratt called for more planning and said he is worried that indebtedness is increasing.

Pratt suggested raising fees to make certain departments self supporting and the town must "make some very real decisions in terms of personnel benefits. That's the real killer. In the public sector we don't have the tools and the will to slash and burn the way they do in the private sector."

Roth said that that discussion would have to take place soon or wait for three years when the town employee contracts are again open for negotiation.

Sullivan said: "we're being very conservative in the raises we're giving."

However, Goedecke did not want to discuss what could amount to contract negotiations in public.

Earlier in the meeting, School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell explained that the department needs a new bus and that bathrooms in some schools need major repair.

She said that a current bus is rusty and that putting off that purchase, or repairing the bathrooms, will simply mean higher costs next year.

"Every year we postpone it, every year it gets worse," she stated.

Superintendent Stephen Hart pointed out that the Education Reform Act, which passed two years ago, could also affect the school budget. He said that 13 Cohasset students have indicated a willingness to attend the South Shore Charter School in Hull. The town would have to pay their tuition.

Hart also said that town would have to pay for other requirements in the law, since the legislation specifies that the state does not have to pay for them.

Municipal officials across the Commonwealth have long chaffed at the so-called "unfunded mandates," things the state orders them to do, but does not appropriate money to pay for, thereby putting added strain on already tight local budgets.

Gjesteby wondered if municipalities couldn't challenge the education reform law in court on those grounds.

Town meeting agenda. . .

Marlette is also looking into a sound system arrangement so a microphone can be passed to board members and save selectmen and advisory committee members, who explain their positions on the articles, the long walk to the podium.

A reasonably priced snack bar will be provided courtesy of the Boy Scouts for the convenience of all attending, Marlette said.

Serving as tellers are Grace Tuckerman, Louise Flint, Raymond Buckley and Arthur Lehr.

Marlette asks any board or committee member who expects to speak and who has not yet called to let him know before Saturday. As in the past, he ask all participants to be brief and concise when addressing the meeting.

"If past meetings are any example, Cohasset residents will try their best to be brief and focused," he said. "I will try my best to be fair, yet mindful of the need to handle the large volume of Town meeting business expeditiously."

Other business of interest to be taken up at town meeting includes: increasing the board of health from three to five members; changing the school facilities committee to a school building committee to study the possible construction of a new elementary school; establishing the position of pubic works superintendent and appropriating money for a public works garage at the landfill.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

MORE THAN YOU BARGAINED FOR

QUESTION: I plan to sell my home on my own. What kind of problems will I have to look forward to?

ANSWER: Unless you are a Realtor or an attorney, you'll be in for an unpleasant revelation. Selling a home involves a mass of petty details. There's attorneys to be dealt with, a title search, financial arrangements, advertising, showing the home, negotiating with prospects, weeding out opportunity seekers, contracts, deposits, etc.

Erring on any of these details could cause major problems.

Honestly, it pays to sell through our office. It's our business to keep track of and manage details. You'll not only get more sleep, but probably more money as well.

Red Fox cemetery site resurrected

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A determined former member of the cemetery committee will ask voters to take steps to see if a town-owned parcel of land off Rte. 3A is suitable for a town cemetery.

"I feel a strong need to keep this question in front of the town every opportunity there is," Glenn Pratt told selectmen last week.

"We need to find out from the Board of Health if this parcel is acceptable for siting a cemetery."

But selectmen terminated the discussion and said they would not support the article at town meeting.

Glenn Pratt said the current committee is now concentrating on Beechwood at the expense of other possible sites. Glenn Pratt resigned in frustration from the cemetery committee last year when selectmen withdrew support for an article on a possible cemetery off Red Fox Lane after the subdivision owner expressed concern about a proposed access road through the three-home subdivision.

Last week Glenn Pratt offered his services and those of his fellow, former cemetery committee member Mary Hartwell to the current cemetery committee.

"If we could take the burden off and look into the 3A site, we'd be happy to do it," Glenn Pratt said. He explained that hydrological studies would determine if the site is suitable.

He said access issues could be resolved and the important issue was to see if the land is suitable for a cemetery.

Selectmen, with Peter Pratt dissenting, said that any activity at the Red Fox Lane site was off limits until Beechwood renovations were out of the way. Selectman Jane Goedecke was absent from the March 13 meeting.

Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan said he did not support Glenn Pratt's request to get re-involved this would "circumvent the committee in place.'

Glenn Pratt said he'd spent years studying the town's critical lack of cemetery space.

"This is not a hair-brained idea," he said. "This is a very major important issue to the town."

Kidder vows to fight

Parents of thirteen Cohasset students have already indicated an interest in attending the newly-authorized charter school in Hull. The Hull school is one of 15 schools throughout the state labeled as charter, in an effort to improve the quality of education under the Education Reform Act.

Cohasset would have to pay for all the students from the town who eventually opt to attend the charter school, which could cost as much as $60,000.

At last week's school committee meeting, School Committee member Ralph Kidder pledged to fight to keep those students in the Cohasset system.

"The charter schools are put up to compete," he said. "We should try to get our kids to stay. We should go after those kids."

He urged that the parents be contacted and asked to reconsider their decision to leave Cohasset. At the very least, Kidder maintained, the school system should find out exactly why parents are taking their children out of Cohasset schools and enrolling them in the charter schools.

There appeared to general agreement at the meeting that the Cohasset system can compete with other schools.

Tobacco education

All tobacco merchants in the communities of Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Norwell, Plymouth, Rockland and Scituate should have received a comprehensive retailer package from the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program and their local police chief.

Included in this package is a copy of Massachusetts General Law 270 (sales to minors) and the correct information for posting this state law where tobacco products are sold. Additionally, merchants were sent correct signage and materials to educate employees about tobacco sales to minors and a brochure entitled, "Don't Sell Tobacco to Kids."

The SSBHCTCP, local police departments and the Attorney General's office will be sponsoring free tobacco merchant education training on: March 28 at the Reed Building in Kingston from 9 to 11 a.m.; March 29 at the Scituate Public Library from 2 to 4 p.m.; March 29 at the Hanover Town Hall from 4 to 6 p.m. and March 30 at the Braintree Police Department from 2 to 4 p.m.

All merchants who sell tobacco are encouraged to attend one of these training sessions. For further information about tobacco or the training meetings call the South Shore Boards of Health Tobacco Control Program at 617/829-4301.

Bank with a Good Neighbor.

A lot of people on the South Shore are sorry to see yet another "hometown bank", the Cohasset Savings Bank, become one of the "big city" banks.

But for those who wish to continue to stay with a friendly local bank, let us introduce you to Scituate Federal, where we earn our reputation as a good neighbor every day.

Not just by offering a broad range of services and products, like low cost checking accounts, but by investing in our community and its people. We know your name, live in your neighborhood and take the time to listen to you.

Give us a call or drop in to our convenient Scituate Harbor office and see what it's really like to bank with a good neighbor.

Cohasset doctor on the cutting edge of pain control

thesia Associates, really gets around. But he says he finds his work in the pain management center very rewarding.

"Anesthesia is a high-tech vocation and can take away from patient contact," said Breslow, who finds working in the clinic allows him to have more interpersonal contact.

According to Breslow, individuals with dental pain or facial pain from shingles, muscle strains, back pain or migraines make up more than half of the clinic's patients.

For migraines, the pain management center physicians interact with neurologists for each case and Breslow said that treatment can involve the injection in the back of the head of a local anesthetic and cortisone to interrupt the cycle of pain, reducing the reoccurrence of these debilitating headaches.

Similarly, an epidural with cortisone and a local anesthetic can bring relief to those with acute back pain from a slipped disc and prevent the need for surgery, Breslow said.

Reflex Sympathetic Dystrophy (RSD) in which an arm or leg after being injured can become dysfunctional or incapacitated is another major concern at the Pain Management Center and it is a problem that has only recently become recognized in the medical community, Breslow said.

The syndrome involves an exaggerated response of the sympathetic nervous system to an injury.

In other words, long after a broken wrist or ankle has healed you still feel a burning pain that makes using the extremity practically impossible.

"We're struggling with treating it," said Breslow who noted that in the past RSD was misdiagnosed as artery damage often leading to amputation of the limb or was dismissed as a psychological problem

Carol Sansone, a nurse in the clinic and the coordinator for the hospital's RSD support group said this problem has been around since the Civil War. The group offers support and education for individuals suffering from RSD all over the region, Sansone said.

One of the pain center physicians attends the monthly meetings held on the fourth Thursday of each month to answer questions and Sansone said that group members come from as far away as Vermont and Rhode Island.

"People, who are in terrible pain come from great distances to the support group," she said, adding "they get a lot out of it and have found a reason to keep going."

Another type of pain that the center treats is cancer related. Breslow said that about 35 percent of the patients referred to the clinic are dealing with cancer pain, which can be acute or chronic. For patients with end stage cancer, laser therapy or the injection of alcohol to burn nerves or to freeze them can help improve the quality of life by eliminating the source of pain.

Another treatment for cancer pain involves inserting a continuous epidural pump which steadily releases morphine to control pain allowing patients get beyond the pain and on to the required cancer treatments.

The morphine pump has been tremendously successful for Elaine Mullaine of Halifax. Mullaine was diagnosed with cancer last December and had surgery soon after. Mullaine said the pain she suffered was unbearable.

"All I could focus on was the pain," she said, adding "the chemotherapy and radiation treatments were nothing in comparison to this pain."

Mullaine's daughter Suzanne also recalled her mother's discomfort.

"I've never seen anybody suffer that much. She was climbing the walls and couldn't even sit up," she said.

The pump, which Mullaine says is about he size of a hockey puck has been inserted below the skin in the abdomen area and has changed her life.

"It's been wonderful, I'm not hindered from anything. I can't believe the difference," she said.

Mullaine, who plans to return to work next week and is looking forward to a May cruise to Bermuda, has her pump refilled every three weeks and said she is now better able to cope with her cancer.

"It's been great for me. Now I can face what I have to face and get on with my life," said Mullaine, who praised not only the treatment but also the pain center staff as both wonderful and caring.

"I hope more people will find out about it," she said.

Cohasset resident Amanda Burgoon also highly recommends the clinic and the staff.

Burgoon suffered terrible migraine headaches following a spinal tap in mid-January.

"The pain was unbelievable, I felt like my head was going to pop," said Burgoon, who could not take care of business in her antique shop in town or her two small children because of her pain.

An epidural blood patch made with Burgoon's own blood filled the gap in the spinal fluid and has eliminated her pain entirely.

"I couldn't stand up for more than a minute at a time, and I walked out there after the procedure," Burgoon said.

But despite these testimonials, Breslow said it's tough to get the word out about the pain management center. There is also some skepticism on the part of patients who have lived so long with the pain and have been told by so many that there is nothing that can be done to relieve it.

"They're apprehensive," said Sansone, "but I try to explain to them what to expect and afterwards they say they wish they hadn't wasted time being apprehensive about it."

And Breslow said that often times patients are worried that his treatments will give them more pain.

"After all, I'm bringing big needles into the room," said Breslow, who stressed the importance of putting in the time and effort to earn a patient's confidence.

"With the help of the nurses and education and a few minutes with a hand on the shoulder, they gain confidence," he said.

But by far, the best seller of the pain management center is word of mouth, Breslow said.

"If a friend has been helped, their word is worth its weight in gold," he added.

Breslow admitted he gets very involved and is devoted to his patients.

"It's a tough time to be in medicine, but as frustrating as the the problems with economics and politics are, it all gets pushed aside when I see someone like Elaine get up and walk around," he said.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

Well, everyone is still talking about it, wherever we go — everyone has a play that they remember the best — everyone remembers watching the clock — THE GAME! We hardly hear about the loss, just how well the boys all played, what a great season they had, how much they did for the town, and what a great group of boys they are. Their talent is awesome, their hearts are huge, and we are all so proud of the Cohasset Skipper basketball team and their coach Ron Ford! If you haven't done so yet, be sure to tell them! We give them a triple high-five for a super season, a huge thanks for the memories!

Congratulations go to Carol Bestick (of Beechwood Fame), she has been active in scouting for the last 10 years and has done a wonderful job! So grand in fact that she was recently elected treasurer of the Old Colony Boy Scouts of America; 41 towns are involved, you can just imagine how busy she will be.

There is a brand new resident on Linden Dr., and her name is Laura Elizabeth Hebb. Laura was born Feb. 18 at 3:55 a.m. and weighed 7 lbs. 10 oz. Elizabeth and Stuart Hebb, Laura's mom and dad, must be so excited and proud (not to mention a little sleepy)! Her maternal grandparents are Dr. and Mrs. James F. Dougherty of Sea Girt, N.J.; her paternal grandparents are Judge and Mrs. Robert C. Hebb of Lunenburg, Nova Scotia.

Lots of traveling miles will be built up in that family, we'll bet; congratulations to you all.

Edward R. Foley, headmaster of Derby Academy in Hingham, announced honors lists for the second term of the 1995 academic year and the following Cohasset students were awarded certificates: Headmasters List (A- or above in academic subjects) Charles Anderson, Kara Gaughen, Patrick Gaughen, Corinna Noering, Beth Pierson, Ian Simons and Ryan Staszko.

Receiving Second Honors (B or B+ average) were: Kristen Deane, Michael Fallon, Alexander Gaston, Geoffrey McWilliams, Ashley Mihos, Carter Noon, Morgan Pierson, Kate Schroeder, James Simons and Wiley Wakeman. Wow, what a great group of students, continue studying hard!

It was a sad weekend around town — as most of you know, David R. Marks passed away in Florida last week. He was such a nice man with so many fine qualities! He was loved by all!

Mr. Marks was also the husband of our former Town Clerk Frances Marks and a wonderful father to four children and grandfather to six. It will certainly seem strange not to see him fishing off the Cohasset pier! A fond farewell to a fine man, and heartfelt sympathy to his family.

Music students from Joan Jensen's studio in Cohasset presented a concert Feb. 17 at Old Ship Church in Hingham. This was a culmination of a half a year's hard work and great progress was made by all students. Ms. Jensen, concert artist, maintains a music studio in her home where she teaches voice and piano to students of all ages.

Performers from Cohasset were Alison Kinchla, Katie Jensen, Emily Coyne and Sarah Bertiovich.

Jean McAuliffe had quite a weekend recently — while performing her duties at the hospital, Jean got an ache in her side that kept getting worse! Finally she went to one of the doctors where he told her that she had to have her appendix out, right then!

That same weekend, her grandson David received tons of stitches (about 50)! They are both doing fine now, but it must have been a scary time for the family, there's tons of love there.

Katherine P. Dennis, a resident of Cohasset, has recently been named to the dean's list at Boston University for the fall semester.

Attention all of you "world travelers." If you are going to be out of town for the April 1 election, you can pick up your absentee ballot anytime now. For any questions that you have, call the Town Clerk's office at 383-9900.

❑

Spring has arrived! As of Monday, it was official! With that note comes the fact that spring sports at CHS are under way, watch for the finalized schedule to appear next week.

Have a wonderful week, then call me this weekend to tell me all about it!

McKenna family thanks all who cared with remembrances

Billy McKenna's family wishes to thank all of his close friends and those he has touched for their kindness and support during their period of sorrow. The family is grateful that Billy's friends have shared the remembrance of his life.

The first remembrance is a letter he wrote to his under 12 "B" soccer team at Christmas, just before he entered Massachusetts General Hospital for the final time. The second is a series of thoughts and memories by his Aunt Fran, and the third is a brief story about a rose and a mushroom.

Dear Team, I hope that you didn't think that I forgot about giving these shirts out. But I did! Actually, I have been going through some tough times, and I have recently returned home from the hospital. I am feeling much better and hopefully will coach again in the spring. The memories of our season, the way we came together as a team along with the great friendship that we made, still stay fresh in my mind. I hope that these XL shirts, will help keep it a constant reminder for you guys as well.

— Billy McKenna photo

My little brothers still have theirs from when I coached their 12-and-under team.

Merry Christmas
Coach Bill McKenna

P.S. Dear Parents,

I can't thank you enough for the gifts that you and your sons presented to me, at the end of the spring season! I had hoped to coach them this winter for an indoor team. But things haven't worked out the way I planned. The sports watch is something I will always cherish. It was indeed a privilege to coach your sons — and to me they were all an 'A' team.

The Rose and the Mushroom

While receiving treatment for his cancer at Beth Israel Hospital, Bill McKenna met Mrs. Rosette Greco, who was receiving treatment for her cancer. Billy grew close to Rosette in the oncology waiting room while waiting for their treatments. After she was hospitalized, he visited her regularly. On one particular visit, he brought her flowers, but was told upon reaching her room that she had died. A few days later billy attended Rosette's funeral, and after the funeral, he insisted on going back to Mrs. Greco's home to offer his condolences to the family. He did this despite misgivings voiced by his sister, Jennifer, that the reception was intended for family and close friends only. Upon arriving, Billy sought out Rosette's daughter, Nicole, and told her the following, "I wanted you to know that your mother was a beautiful rose, because God only picks beautiful roses to be with Him in Heaven. I have not been picked because I am a mushroom. God does not pick mushrooms to be with Him."

But we all know that on March 3rd at 1:30 a.m., God reached down and picked another rose.

I Remember...

I remember....Months, weeks, days before he came — no father on earth more enchanted with his child.

I remember...A darling dark-haired baby boy with Elfin ears

I remember...Holding the child that Baptismal Day — he did cry a little

I remember...The mother who called him Billy Boo

I remember...Our children playing together — all the Christmases — our different residences

I remember...Billy playing soccer and baseball

I remember...High School graduation under the tent

I remember...Billy's art work

I remember...Manhattanville

I remember...The 21st birthday.

I remember...Hodgkin's Disease

I remember...Hope — undying Hope — unwavering Hope — fearless Hope — desperate Hope

I remember...Mom and Dad throughout the Hope — always Love.

I remember...That he was always God's, only ours to borrow — a while

I remember...No more pain

I remember...A beautiful young man — the best and the blessed

I remember...That "He will raise him up on the last day."

I remember...That he is home.

I remember...That we will also go home.

I will always remember — him.

We love you Billy,
Auntie Fran

It's spring — believe!

"You have to believe in happiness
Or happiness never comes...
Ah, that's the reason a bird can sing
On his darkest day he believes in Spring.

— Douglas Malloch
"You Have to Believe"

The calendar tells us another winter has slumped into oblivion. There's not a speck of snow on the ground. If you look at just the right moment, the trees seem to be just about to unfurl their green.

Sure, the arrival of Spring 1995 this week doesn't guarantee 60 degree days from now on. Horror of horrors, a flake or two or even more may yet fall from a leaden sky. We may have to don scarf or gloves once or twice.

But it's almost April. Except for a week in which everything around us was encased in ice, you'd hardly know winter had come, let alone gone. We got off with a light sentence, welcome indeed after our gloomy expectations. Even now, don't you agree, we'll be tempted to look over our shoulders for a while, expecting some unkind wintery blow from the hand of Mother Nature.

Still, spring is here!

It's time to play baseball. To the devil with the Major Leaguers! Go watch the Cohasset High Skippers and the hundreds of youngsters getting ready to don their Little League uniforms, dust off their gloves and hoist their bats.

It's time to take an interest in politics — the hometown variety.

It's time to think about Town Meeting and the role it plays in our lives. Make it a point of finding out what's on the legislative agenda and plan to attend at 10 a.m., Saturday. Make a point of talking with one or two or more of your elected officials. Make a point of caring what happens to your town.

Look around you. All kinds of rites of spring are about to happen. Enjoy.

It's time to believe good things can happen.

After all, it's springtime!

Ban on cigarette displays, machines sought

letters

(Ed.'s note: a copy of the following letter was provided to the Mariner for publication.)

To Cohasset Board of Health

Re: Cigarette Vending Display Ban

The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee at its meeting Tuesday, Feb. 28, voted unanimously to request your board to begin the process of banning cigarette vending machines, free standing displays and counter displays.

We met with Susan Cronin from the South Shore Board of Health Collaborative — Tobacco Control Program and were disappointed with the results of the October 19, 1994 compliance check. Previously, members of the committee were interested in a ban similar to Hingham's recent regulation before the compliance data was even presented. By banning all accessible options for teenagers, we hope that with only over the counter sales we could cut down on teenage use.

Another concern is the lack of signage with the state regulations which was mentioned in the report. We would also like the Board of Health to look into a permit for tobacco vendors which could improve the governing of such establishments.

We appreciate your timely consideration on this important issue and look forward to working with you.

Ted Carroll, Chairman
Drug and Alcohol Committee

Hoop team, coach did us proud!

To the Editor:

The entire community of Cohasset is extremely proud of Ron Ford and the boys' varsity basketball team. A Division IV school, Cohasset played in the Division III state tournament and represented themselves tremendously well.

There just does not seem enough ways to praise these young men, and their talented and enthusiastic coach. Therefore, I would greatly appreciate it if you could print the following to thank them — it seems only fitting that a team that entertained and "wowed" us all should be thanked and acknowledged by us all.

The Cohasset girls' basketball teams would like to take this opportunity to congratulate and thank Ron Ford and the Cohasset boys' varsity basketball team. We are not only proud of your many accomplishments, but also how you represented this school and community with class and style; and instilled within it a sense of pride and unity. Thank you for your tremendous effort and a tremendous season!

Thank you in advance for your help in conveying the pride that we feel for these gentlemen!

Corinne Hughes
Cohasset Girls' Varsity Coach

Passage of local aid bill urged

To the Editor:

On behalf of cities and towns across the state, the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) wants to thank Representative Mary Jeanette Murray for cosponsoring the Early Resolution on Local Aid (H. 4415).

The early passage of this legislative resolution is important to communities as they prepare their budgets for the next fiscal year. With the demands on cash-strapped municipal budgets, it will be enormously difficult for town meetings and city councils to make meaningful budget decisions without local aid figures. The local aid resolution would set the base level of local aid for cities and towns, returning $51 million in new lottery aid and $196 million in new education funds, as promised by the legislature last year.

Municipalities will not know how much local aid they will receive, usually disbursed through the so-called Cherry Sheets, until H. 4415 is enacted. Because communities need these local aid increases in order to balance their budgets and provide basic services to their residents, the adoption of this resolution is in the best interests of the taxpayers in Rep. Murray's district.

The MMA extends its appreciation to Rep. Murray for supporting and cosponsoring for the Early Local Aid Resolution and urges the legislature to adopt the measure as quickly as possible.

Geoffrey C. Beckwith
Executive Director
Massachusetts Municipal Assoc.

Maureen Jerz

school committee candidate

Saturday, April 1, Cohasset voters will go to the polls to vote in the town election. For the first time in many years, they will be voting in an election in which there are no contested races. My name is Maureen Jerz and I am a first time candidate for school committee in one of those uncontested races. I would like to take this opportunity, provided by the Cohasset Mariner, to introduce myself to the voters of Cohasset.

My husband Joe and I made Cohasset our home in 1983. We have two children, Jack, age 11 and Andrew, age 8. Both boys attend Cohasset Public Schools. My background includes a BA in biology from Merrimack College, and over 20 years of clinical laboratory experience. This experience includes almost 10 years as a laboratory supervisor at Massachusetts General Hospital in the Department of Microbiology. I am currently employed at MGH on a part-time basis. I have been involved with the Cohasset Public Schools since 1989 as a parent volunteer and have served on the Parent School Organization's executive board, as co-chairperson of the curriculum enrichment committee (1991-1992) and as president (1992-1994). As president of the PSO, I had the opportunity to be involved in implementing one of the first mandates of the Education Reform Act, which was the establishment of school councils at each of the schools. I have also served on the Deer Hill School Council.

Maureen Jerz

I will, in a future article, comment on issues related to the schools. These include the Education Reform Act, and its far reaching implications for our schools, and the financial situation of the town as a whole and its impact on the necessary and needed changes that the schools will experience over the next few years.

In closing, I would like to say that, as a product of the public school system myself, I have a strong commitment to public education. I believe that we all come into the world as learners, nurtured and encouraged, first by our families, and then hopefully, by the schools. A quality public education, available to all, is the cornerstone to the promise of the American dream. The knowledge and experience I have gained through my work on the PSO and the school council, combined with this commitment, have caused me to seek election to the school committee. I urge you, the voters of Cohasset, to show your support of those seeking office this spring, by voting in this town election.

More is needed to break the chain of dependency

By State Sen. Robert Hedlund
Special to the Mariner

— the senate side —

As we all know, the Senate passed its version of Welfare Reform Feb. 1. This was the night the Senate worked beyond 2 a.m., first debating the rules of the Senate and then the Welfare Reform legislation. It was one of those rare times that I sat through a late night session that ended with a feeling of accomplishment, seeing that the system can actually work. I am thrilled to be back on Beacon Hill representing our district, and passing a tough reform package that the electorate demanded made me appreciate the importance of being a part of it all.

Welfare Reform has been needed in Massachusetts for some time. The people of Massachusetts, specifically the voters of the South Shore, have been demanding tough reform. Some facts necessitating the need for reform include the following items: Massachusetts has the sixth-highest benefit level per person, in the country, making our state among the most liberal, generous welfare magnets in the United States; Massachusetts has the most generous, broad-based Medicaid program in the country for welfare recipients; where the number of optional services paid for is excessive. We have welfare recipients receiving coverage for services that the average person with group insurance could not even receive.

Preventing family/child poverty should really be the focal point of the welfare system. Families and children are poor because they do not have access to earn income. Historically, legislation has attempted to deal with this issue by recognizing the need to lift families out of poverty. For example, in 1935 Congress passed the Social Security Act which created the Unemployment Insurance (UI) and Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) programs. The enactment of this legislation acknowledged several areas of concern. Among these were that the economy could not employ every adult, families could not earn appropriate income levels, and women without husbands, who have children, were not able to support themselves in this economy, or replace a male earner's income.

Although Welfare Reform targeted many flaws of the current system, we still need to do more to break the chain of dependency upon the system. We need to build upon strong public policy that encourages the values of work, self-reliance and contributing to the community. When parents are allowed to remain unemployed and dependent upon the welfare roles, this sustains the trans-generational inheritance of poverty. We cannot afford to let able-bodied parents stay unemployed. We need to ensure that parents have accessibility to employment, that child care is available to recipients (in order to keep recipients working) and that parents contribute to the economic development of our Commonwealth. This will ensure that the generational transition of poverty stops with the present generation. These are basic rights to which all families are entitled and to which all families need to contribute.

This reform policy supports the fundamental principles of work and assimilating recipients into a traditional work environment. Requiring teen parents to live with another adult encourages family unity and support. The "family cap" will keep the taxpayers from picking up the tab for those recipients who seek a pay raise by having another child on the welfare roles.

Welfare Reform is now signed into law by Governor Weld. It will take effect at the beginning of the new fiscal year, commencing July 1, 1995, pending approval of a federal waiver. I firmly believe that this legislation will help to instill the values and characteristics associated with work, independence and community involvement. If you are interested in obtaining a copy of the conference committee reform report or would like additional information on Welfare Reform, please do not hesitate to call my office at (617) 722-1646.

political notes

Stalking bill co-sponsored

State Senator Robert Hedlund has co-sponsored a bill which would enhance the strength of the current stalking law by closing a gap in the existing statute which does not adequately respond to the use of electronic devices by stalkers.

The proposed law would upgrade stalking through the use of a telecommunications device to a felony, rather than a misdemeanor. Under current law, persons who physically stalk others may be charged with a felony.

Hedlund recently stated that while legislation alone will not eliminate domestic violence, it can make offenders pay an early price, possibly stopping assaults before they occur.

Murray's roll call record

House Republican Leader Ed Teague (R-Yarmouth) announced the 1994 roll call record for Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Third Plymouth District) was 99 percent. Of the 217 roll calls, Rep. Murray cast 216 votes. The one vote she missed as a Quorum Roll Call, Murray had left the House Chamber to take a call from one of her constituents when they called for a Quorum Roll Call.

The 1994 legislative session was notable for the debates on issues such as death penalty, welfare reform, drunk driving legislation, state budget, campaign finance reform, grad tax slapp suits, and rent control.

Rep. Teague said, "The high voting record demonstrated by Rep. Murray contributed greatly in achieving yet another balanced budget." The high participation also demonstrates Mary Jeanette's deep commitment to representing the people of her district.

Murray is elected chairman

Last week Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) was recently unanimously elected Chairman of the Republican Caucus.

Murray, who is also the dean of the caucus, was chosen by the Republican Caucus to serve as chairman for the next two years. In this capacity, Murray will be responsible for setting the agenda for meetings of the Republicans. Moreover, she will serve as parliamentarian of the Caucus. Murray is replacing Representative Tim Clark as Chairman.

Her colleague, Minority Leader Ed Teague, said of Murray's election to the post. "Mary Jeanette is perfect for the job of Chairman. Her sharp wit and thorough understanding of the Legislature will serve her well in this position."

Earlier this month Murray was also sworn into her tenth term as State Rep. from Cohasset.

"It is an honor to have been chosen by my colleagues to be Chairman. I am looking forward to taking on this new challenge," Murray said.

For women, the natural way is best to maintain health

By Laura Ricketson Doherty
Mariner correspondent

Once in a while, it's possible to pick up a book or news publication, attend a lecture or listen to a TV special that will open the door to a whole new area of learning. That's what happened, recently, at a presentation by nutritionist Patricia Messing, M.S., at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The subject was women's health issues specifically regarding pre-menstrual syndrome and menopause. Those in attendance came not only from Cohasset but also from other towns. Ms. Messing, who is affiliated with the East Coast Health and Medical Center in Hanover, shared with them both her knowledge from years in the field of nutrition and her personal interest and discoveries, as well.

She stresses the need for all women to educate themselves.

"I was amazed by what I didn't know about my own body," she admits as she describes her most recent research which includes the effects of diet and the use of natural rather than synthetic progesterone.

As we age, she continues, the amounts of estrogen and progesterone in women decreases but progesterone decreases at a greater rate causing estrogen to become dominant. Estrogen, she reminds us, is not only produced in the ovaries but also in fat cells. The typical American diet — high in fat and low in fiber — aggravates the hormonal imbalance created by pre-menstrual syndrome and menopause and is a major cause of the often debilitating symptoms which result. The symptoms are basically the same for both conditions and include mood swings, water retention, insomnia and headaches.

Use of phosphates such as those found in meat, dairy and soda products decreases calcium absorption and increases the risk of osteoporosis. Messing admits to the difficulty of giving up her own two diet sodas per day regime.

Chocolate and sugar cravings so familiar to many women often indicate a magnesium deficiency which can lead to decreased calcium absorption. Although we often rationalize our need for sweets at this time, it's much better to respond with healthy alternatives such as leafy green vegetables, whole greens and brown rice. Messing recommends eliminating sugar three to four days before menstruation begins.

Protein is another substance used to excess in the United States diet — twice as much as is needed. This excess causes the body to excrete calcium and increases the threat of osteoporosis, which is practically nonexistent in countries like Japan, with low protein diets.

The poor diet along with the stress and pollution common to Western countries also causes many women to menstruate without ovulation. Without ovulation, progesterone is not produced, which leads to estrogen dominance and its resultant symptoms. Messing adds that this can occur as early as age 35. Osteoporosis is an additional cause for concern because progesterone helps to build bones.

The need to increase fiber in the American diet is also underlined by Messing. One reason is fiber increases the rate of estrogen excretion.

"We need to use more grains, fruits, vegetables and beans," she emphasizes. She suggests thinking of meat, chicken and fish as condiments and serving vegetarian meals one to two times a week. A high fiber diet would be at least 20 to 40 grams per day and would include five to nine servings of fruits and vegetables.

Messing also discussed the beneficial effects of soy products such as tofu and soy milk in providing protection from breast cancer. She sees little or no value in sodium and processed foods, caffeine and alcohol.

Because much of today's food is grown in depleted soil, we need vitamin supplements, she adds. Living in New England, many people, especially senior citizens, find it difficult to exercise outside during winter and lack vitamin D. She suggests sitting near a sunny window or using the special lamps now available.

Repetitive exercises such as walking and biking is also important. Messing notes their effectiveness in increasing bone mass.

When making a decision about hormone replacement supplements, try to discuss natural approaches with your physician, Messing counsels. She outlined the differences between synthetic progestin commonly prescribed as Provera and natural progesterone. Natural progesterone is an exact duplicate of the progesterone produced in the human body. One source she recommends is Pro-Gest, a topical moisturizer derived from wild Mexican yams which, she says, has very few if any negative side effects.

Messing stresses the need to be informed. She points to the Physician's Desk Reference available at the library as an invaluable source of information.

At the conclusion of the workshop, many of those present viewed the various books on display. These included recent research and also cookbooks. Highly recommended by Messing was Natural Progesterone: The Multiple Roles of a Remarkable Hormone, by John Lee, M.D.; Eat More, Weigh Less, by Dean Ornish, M.D.; and Food, by Susan Powder.

Elderly ensured of TLC thru program

By Thomas De Santes
Mariner correspondent

As medical care becomes more advanced, Americans are living longer and more productive lives. In only a few short decades life spans have been significantly extended, and while many older and elderly Americans are living healthy lives on their own, many find themselves in nursing homes in order to receive necessary attention and care.

The decision to place a family member in a nursing home is most difficult, yet knowing that the loved one will be cared for properly makes the decision easier.

The Nursing Home Ombudsman Program of the South Shore ElderServices is a program that monitors the many South Shore facilities housing our elderly citizens. Through dedicated volunteers, this program helps guarantee that residents in nursing homes and rest homes are being treated well.

The Ombudsman program has been intervening in Massachusetts to prevent abuse and neglect since 1976. Beginning as a pilot program in the state at that time, the program was introduced to the South Shore in 1978 and has grown over the years. The program is dedicated to insuring that residents of nursing homes receive the best quality of life.

"We work closely with the Massachusetts Department of Health through the Ombudsman Program. Through regular visits to the facilities, our volunteers make sure everyone is getting the best care possible," Patti White of South Shore ElderServices explains.

"They listen to complaints when necessary and take action to resolve the complaints. If something can't be done we contact the state services to intervene."

The effectiveness and success of the Ombudsman Program is largely attributed to the dedication of the volunteers as well as the professional on-going training that ElderServices provides. After almost 20 years in existence, the partnerships and acceptance from administrators and staff at area nursing homes and rest homes have helped fuel the success of the program as well.

Currently, the program is seeking volunteers to join the Ombudsman Program.

"Volunteers are placed in a training program," White says. "Training includes information on aging issues, Department of Public Health regulations, residents' rights under federal and state laws, and also training in mediation, problem resolution and arbitration."

Because of the vast amount of information needed to be covered, the sessions are held five days spread over two weeks.

"It gives people a chance to absorb the information so they can call upon it when they begin their visits to the homes," White says.

"Our volunteers are terrific. We ask for at least two hours a week along with a year commitment. This guarantees that the residents in the homes can get to know the volunteers and feel more comfortable speaking with them. It helps us resolve the problems without having to use resources outside the home," she says.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

We, the townspeople of Cohasset, owe Mr. Mulvey of Pilgrim Co-Operative Bank, 48 S. Main St., and the Village Renaissance Committee a much deserved "thank you" for the improvements made to the vacant lot between the bank and French Memories. In 1990, when I first discussed the possibility of Cohasset High School students painting a mural on the wall under the direction of Mrs. Lucas, the high school art teacher, Mr. Mulvey gave his permission for the work to be undertaken. He trusted the students and Mrs. Lucas to do a fine job. Recently, Mr. Mulvey had the surrounding wall painted the shade of burnt Sienna and the Village Renaissance Committee has overseen the installation of a wide and winding gravel path; planted ornamental trees; installed a park bench and two, sturdy granite blocks for sitting. In the evening, an amber-hued light illuminates the area. This is a lovely improvement to the Village. Now that spring is here, be sure to enjoy a french pastry while sitting in this lovely area and enjoy our Cohasset High School students' art work.

Not only are the volunteers performing a valuable community service by monitoring care, but they are also forming valuable friendships along the way, White adds.

In addition to regularly evaluating the quality of life at these homes, the program provides residents with information on their rights as residents of a nursing or rest homes and provides a voice in raising concerns and resolving problems of residents and their families. The Ombudsman Program is also available for those who would like help selecting a nursing home; suspect Medicaid discrimination; have concerns or requests about meals or resident life are not being taken seriously; have questions or concerns regarding restraints; or have questions about the special needs of the Alzheimer's resident. The program was designed to help state services monitor the quality of life, and to help families dealing with the issues of nursing and rest homes.

If you are interested in becoming a volunteer in the Ombudsman Program call Patti White at South Shore ElderssServices at (617) 848-3010.

The Hearing Center
Have You Heard?

by Nancy Allonen-Allie, M.S., CCC-A
Licensed-Certified Audiologist

WORKING AT LISTENING

As technologically sophisticated as today's hearing instruments are, users should not rely on them to do all the work. To get the most out of a hearing instrument, wearers must put in some time and effort to become acclimated to their new instruments. This begins with learning how to insert it, turn it on/off, set the volume, insert the battery, and check it daily for earwax buildup. Beyond these rudimentary skills, hearing instrument wearers can avail themselves of listening strategies and skills that will facilitate hearing. These include staging conversations in quiet areas free from background noise, practicing the reading of lips and other visual clues, asking conversation partners to talk facing forward, and asking people to repeat or clarify what they have said.

A hearing aid is a tool to help you communicate better in most situations. Hearing aids work by bringing down the loudness level of background noise to allow a person to use their own normal hearing process. At THE HEARING CENTER, we not only sell hearing instruments, we provide service as well. Our number one priority is commitment to your needs. We can assist you with coping skills, hearing aid adapting techniques, and a professional in-depth evaluation. For more information, please call us at 1-800-339-9316. Come visit our new location at 62 Derby St. in Hingham. We know you will enjoy the convenient parking and larger location. For your convenience, we are still located at 470 Southern Artery (Rte. 3-A), Quincy.

P.S. To stress the obvious, a hearing instrument will do its wearer little good if it is not worn.

Nick Welz

I am pleased to nominate Nick Welz for Student of the Month. His involvement in a variety of activities at Cohasset High School exemplified what a student at Cohasset can do if he or she has a will as strong as Nick's.

student of the month

Nick is the best kind of leader; he doesn't sit back and give orders, he personifies what must be done. This fall he balanced his work in Godspell with his work on the football team. In both of his dramatic and athletic activities Nick was a leader, serving as captain on the field and emotional leader on stage. He is never afraid to show his feeling. Nick provided "locker room" speeches that helped get the show off the ground each evening while his relentless effort was always apparent during a football game.

Nick also participated in Guys and Dolls, giving an extremely strong performance as Sky Masterson. At the same time he was preparing for a role in Newton's Second Law, the next production of the Drama Workshop. Nick also appeared in CHS' state Drama Festival entry.

He is the Student Council President and you can hear him each morning doing the morning announcements.

Nick is exceptional in many ways without worrying about advertising his achievements. He deserves to be Student of the Month.

— Mr. Emmons

Nick Welz has shown outstanding leadership with the musical Guys and Dolls. He handled a busy schedule and a lead role too. His performance was strong vocally and in his characterization of the high-roller "Sky Masterson." His consistently excellent performance set an example for all.

— Mr. Marks

Audubon art displayed

The Deer Hill School's Artist of the Month program recently featured the life and drawings of John James Audubon. The presentation was enhanced by the lending of five preserved birds from the Massachusetts Audubon Society's South Shore Regional Center in Marshfield. The center is located at 2000 Main St., just off 3A south and welcomes visitors.

Students used the birds as models for their artwork, along with other Audubon pictures, to recreate true likenesses, which are hanging on the walls of the fourth, fifth and sixth grade hallways. The Audubon Center may display some of the student art at a later date.

The Artist of the Month program is sponsored by the Cohasset PSO.

PSO thanks volunteers

The PSO fundraising team would like to thank all those who volunteered their time and talents to make the Annual Silent Auction, recently held at the Chart House, such a fun night.

The PSO especially wishes to thank Andrea Flynn, Patty Smith, Lesley Faber, Susan Magruder, Mary Sullivan, Betsey Connolly, Irene Volpe and Jan Weisenfeld for their help. Through the generous donations of individuals and local businesses more than $6,700 was raised.

Values workshop tonight

The PSO will sponsor a program entitled, "Values — What Should We Teach Our Children?" on Thursday, March 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. All are welcome to attend.

This workshop-format program is being presented by Frank Fitzgerald and Ed Leonard, adjustment counselors for the Cohasset Public Schools.

The counselors will explain why the instruction of values both at home and at school has changed over the last 40 years. Participants will discuss what values children should know and how to instill them in young people.

Councils seek candidates

Anyone interested in serving as a parent representative on a Cohasset school council should submit their name and a paragraph about themselves to the PSO Nominating Committee, Box 30, Cohasset 02025 no later than March 31.

Elections will be held the week of April 6 through 13. Ballots will be mailed to all parents of Cohasset school children and will include information about the candidates.

There are two two-year openings at the Junior/ Senior High School this year, one two-year opening at Deer Hill School and one two-year opening at Joseph Osgood School.

All parents who will have children at a specific school for the 1995-97 school years are eligible to serve on the school council. For further information call Mary Earon (383-1929), Mary Foley (383-9289), Victoria Hurley (383-9509) Kyle Lubitz (383-6150), Betty O'Sullivan (383-9113), Pearl Smith (383-6953) or Ruth Wilcox (383-1827).

Camcorder help sought

The Deer Hill School computer lab now has a new CD Rom, thanks to those who filled out certificates for the Investment in Teaching Program, sponsored by the Bank of Boston.

The school's next goal is a camcorder. Residents are encouraged to fill out certificates when conducting business at the bank. DHS will receive 100 points toward the camcorder for each certificate that is filled out. The deadline is March 30.

For further information call Linda Bolster (383-6148) or Helen s (383-0119).

SSAC offers scholarships

The South Shore Art Center has announced the availability of scholarships for graduating high school seniors continuing in an arts education.

The Fred E. Bergfors Art Scholarship ($1,000), the South Shore Art Center Scholarship ($500) and the Macivor Reddie Award ($200) will be announced at graduation exercises or Senior Awards Night and at the 40th Annual Art Festival on the Common June 16 at 6 p.m. The scholarship will be paid directly to the winner's school toward tuition at the beginning of the second semester.

Portfolios must be submitted to the SSAC on Friday, April 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Interested students may call the center at 383-ARTS for an application form.

Preschool screening slated

The Massachusetts Special Education Law (Chapter 766) provides for the screening of three- and four-year-old children whose parents feel may have a special need which might interfere with their future educational progress. The screening process includes a parent interview as well as a health, vision, hearing, motor and language screening.

Parents who feel that their child might have such a special need should call: Alicia Shea, Director of Student Services, Cohasset Public Schools, phone 383-6104.

If the child will be entering kindergarten in September, he/she will be undergoing a pre-kindergarten screening, and it will not be necessary for parents to call the Office of Student Services.

School survey replies set stage for five-year plan

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

While they agreed that there is always room for improvement in school performance, school committee members and administrators are pleased with survey results indicating strong public support for local education.

Calling the survey results encouraging, school committee member James Kirk reviewed the responses during last week's school committee meeting.

He said that a relatively large number of residents returned their questionnaires and indicated considerable support for greater financial support for the schools.

"We take that to be a very encouraging sign," he said.

The questionnaires, seeking opinions on a variety of topics, including teaching, discipline, technology, financial support and public relations, were mailed to Cohasset households in October. The committee received 846 responses, a rate of 18 percent. Kirk said the response rate was higher than expected, for example, a similar effort in Weston only generated an 11 percent response rate.

Results of the survey will be used to develop a five-year plan for Cohasset schools.

In addition, Kirk and the rest of the committee said they were pleased that so many people wrote comments. When tabulated, there were several hundred pages of comments.

Kirk said he was interested to note that the responses from those with children in the schools varied little from those who do not.

"If you keep hearing the same pattern," he said, "You know you're hearing the voice of the community."

However, Kirk was later asked if there was any profile of those who did not return questionnaires, with the implication that people filling out and returning the survey might be more predisposed to support education.

Kirk said it was difficult, if not impossible to determine why people would not return a survey.

Half of all responses came from those with school-age children. In the town as a whole, only 20 percent of households have children in the schools.

Those responding have lived in Cohasset for a median of 15 years and one third said they always or frequently attend town meeting. Two-thirds said they always vote in local elections. Both figures are much higher than the average, with local election turnouts usually falling below 50 percent and attendance at town meeting often only several hundred voters.

Survey results showed that 42 percent of respondents feel the schools currently receive less money than they should; 29 percent feel the financial support is about right, while five percent indicated the system now gets too much money. Twenty-three percent left the question blank.

Over the next five years, 56 percent of the surveys said the schools ought to get more money; 20 percent want funding to stay the same and three percent favor less money for schools. Blanks accounted for 21 percent of the responses to this question.

The public schools received strong marks in most areas, although responses indicated a widespread concern about discipline and behavior and worries that children are not receiving as much exposure to computer technology as parents would like.

In addition, most residents want more attention paid to the teaching of such basic skills as reading and writing, according to the survey.

Of the individual schools, the Osgood Elementary School consistently received higher ratings, followed by the Deer Hill, the Junior and finally the Senior High School. This trend appeared to hold for most categories.

Teachers received high grades, with 79 percent citing teaching as a strength of the system. Twenty-one percent called teaching a weakness.

The following percentages labeled various categories as strengths:

parental involvement, 76; curriculum, 73; alcohol/drug education, 71; handling of finances, 62; financial support by town, 62; discipline, 55; technology, 45. Fifty-five percent said technology was a weakness in the Cohasset schools.

In general, areas of improvement listed were: tolerance of differences, bus behavior and accountability, timeliness of discipline.

School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell said that discipline received by far the most comments, amounting to some 70 pages, mostly concerning the junior/senior high school.

A number of respondents said that parents need to do more to instill good behavior in their children.

School Committee member JoAnne Chittick said there is an impression that "children don't seem to respect teachers or each other."

Vice Chairman of the committee, Ralph Kidder said, "This is clearly a parents' issue as well."

One teacher in the audience pointed out that the comments from the survey are relative. She said that curriculum review committees which visit schools throughout the state have repeatedly cited the relatively low level of vandalism in Cohasset and that overall, students are well behaved.

Curriculum areas needing attention were: early exposure to computers, foreign languages, study and organizational skills, enrichment, civic/current events, writing, world cultures and the arts.

The committee also discussed communications, indicating that the schools may need to do a better job of publicizing various programs. For instance, there is a computer lab at the Osgood School. There was general agreement during the discussion that the schools have been trying to integrate computer education into the curriculum.

Currently, those with children in the schools receive most of their information on what is happening in the system from their kids, with the school lunch menu, other adults, the Cohasset Mariner, school employees, the Patriot Ledger and other sources following in that order.

Parents felt they should be getting more information from the menu, followed by children, the Mariner and other sources.

Those without children in the schools get most of their information from the Mariner, followed by other adults, the Ledger, children and school employees. A high number indicated they are not receiving information about the schools.

These respondents indicated that they believe they should continue to receive most their school news from the Mariner, followed by other adults, the Ledger and school children.

Many people wrote ideas for improving communications between the schools and the public on their questionnaire.

Some ideas included: a community tour of the schools, suggestion boxes in the schools, newsletters mailed to all residents with tax bills, more parents' nights, wider distribution of the high school newspaper, open forums for parents, teacher's conferences at least twice a year and expanded school news in the Mariner.

(Editor's note: The Mariner is willing to incorporate the high school newspaper within its pages, which it has done for years in Scituate and other towns. This should be discussed with Nancy Small, production manager, 837-3500.)

Many respondents (42 percent) also indicated that more homework should be given at the high school and at the junior high (35 percent). About half of those answering the question felt the amount of homework was about right.

Secretaries and teachers score higher on responsiveness than do school committee members, school councils and the superintendent, who came out slightly ahead of principals and custodians (who ranked equally) followed by bus drivers.

There was also considerable support (59 percent) for a longer school day and even an extended school year (52 percent.)

Overall, both those with children and those without children in the system, think that more emphasis should be

Safety is key argument in rescuing station

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

It was 15 years ago — Feb. 9, 1980 — that Marshfield lobsterman Phil Mason found himself clinging to his overturned hull at the mouth of the North River.

For an hour and 10 minutes, he moved in and out of the 28-degree seas before he was rescued by the Scituate Coast Guard as another boat, F/V Lobster Tale, pulled alongside.

Tragically, Mason's partner, Doug Poole, was lost at sea.

"Time was of the essence; I could not have lasted another five minutes," Mason wrote in a letter to the Commandant of the Coast Guard.

Now, lobstermen, other commercial fishermen and recreational boaters, along with local officials, are rallying together, clinging to the hope that Coast Guard Station Scituate can be spared from the budget axe.

The Scituate station, which opened the year 58-year-old Mason was born, is among 23 small boat stations slated for closing Sept. 30, 1995, in an effort to save $6 million nationwide.

Since the February announcement, however, a member for U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds' staff has said that Congress may block some of the proposed closings — perhaps as many as four or five stations.

Last Thursday in the Continental Cablevision studios in Scituate, Scituate selectman Joseph Norton led a discussion of the proposed shutdown during the "Pierson to Person" show.

Guests included Stephen Keane, president of the South Shore Lobstermen's Association, who fishes out of Green Harbor; Frank Mirarchi, a Scituate draggerman who has been fishing for more than 30 years and also served on the New England Fisheries Management Council; two harbormasters, Elmer Pooler of Scituate and Shawn Kelly of Cohasset, and Scituate selectman Donald Brown, a recreational boater.

Brown is chairman of the newly formed Save Our Station committee.

Each spoke of the need to keep the Scituate station.

"We're going to be lost," lamented Pooler. "We're going to have problems. . .

There's no way (the harbormaster's) boats can go out in eight-foot seas. It would be life-threatening for the person on the boat and the person trying to save" the boater.

Kelly, a former Coastguardsman who was an assistant harbormaster in Scituate before taking the helm in Cohasset, declared that the mouth of the North River, or the New Inlet, is one of the three most dangerous areas on the eastern seaboard. The others are the mouth of the Merrimack River and Cape Hatteras.

"I would be listening to screams for help on the radio," said Pooler.

In heavy seas, the 44-foot motor lifeboat can travel only nine knots, he added. It would take three hours for Point Allerton — just 13 nautical miles away from the Scituate station — to reach the New Inlet, citing two specific incidents where Point Allerton personnel responded to calls for assistant from the Scituate Coast Guard.

Mirarchi likened Coast Guard Station Scituate to the community firehouse. "When it's used, it's really needed."

Questioning comparisons of the numbers of search-and-rescues (SARs) by the Point Allerton and Scituate stations, Mirarchi said, "We unwillingly have suppressed (the number of) Scituate's SARs because (the fishermen) call on each other for assistance," said Mirarchi.

Brown said the SOS committee has the support of congressman Studds, senators Kennedy and Kerry, the governor, state Senator Hedlund and Representative Hynes.

"We need expressions of support (relayed) to other members of Congress," said Brown as he detailed SOS's focus.

Brown said the committee would attack the decision-making process the Coast Guard used to determine which stations would remain, which would be consolidated and which would be closed.

Secondly, the committee will point out that closing the station would "create a serious problem regarding loss of life."

And the third step to be addressed will be the operational procedures of the Coast Guard itself, such as the redistribution of resources from the onshore activities to the policing of Georges Bank.

Brown said SOS would be submitting its packet of material to Congress within the next couple of weeks.

The whole matter is an issue of safety, added Mirarchi. "There are 5,000 commercial boats from Plymouth to Cohasset to Hull and an undetermined number of recreational boats on the South Shore or passing through."

"You never hear about the near losses," said Keane. "Recreational boaters have no idea they have put themselves and family in danger" at the mouth of the North River. "Closing the station would be criminal."

Said Norton: "People are going to die. It's not a matter of saving $300,000," the cost of operating the station. It's saving lives.

given to basic skills.

Other priority areas listed were problem solving, student self-esteem, ability to get along with others, preparation for the working world, planning for college acceptance, learning living skills, preparation for SAT scores and athletics, in that order. These ranking generally held true for various grade levels.

When asked to list their top six priorities from a list of 21 choices, those with children in the schools cited computer science, writing, self-esteem, high expectations, reading and foreign languages as things public education should stress.

Those without children in the system stressed writing, reading, self-esteem, computer science, appreciation of differences and math.

There was a conspicuous lack of support for a full-day kindergarten, with 68 percent of all respondents opposed. Those with kids in school favored the full-day kindergarten by a smaller margin, with 39 percent in favor and 61 percent against.

The vast majority, 88 percent, said a full-day kindergarten should be paid for those using it. Interestingly eighty-nine percent of those with children in the schools agreed. Fifty-two percent favor expanding child care on a self-funding basis.

Foreign languages at the elementary level was a big favorite, with 78 percent in support, while 64 percent advocated requiring students to perform some type of community service.

Seventy percent think summer school should be offered, with a majority recommending that the program be self-supporting.

Respondents did not favor adding bus monitors, recess supervisors, health professionals or other support staff.

Business studies debated

In response to a complaint from a student that the recent elimination of the Cohasset High School business department will hurt her future education, the school committee and administrators point out that Cohasset does offer the necessary prerequisites.

Student Gina Rossano recently wrote a letter to the committee complaining about the elimination of the department, claiming that in the future, students would be unprepared for business school.

She read the statement at last week's school committee meeting.

Superintendent Stephen Hart said the three leading business schools in the area — Bentley, Babson and Bryant — do not require business courses to enroll.

Rather, he said the schools "want student who are well prepared in reading, writing and research skills."

School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell agreed. "We are fulfilling all of the courses for these schools," she said.

Hart also said that students can still take some business courses at Cohasset High School. He explained that the department was eliminated in response to the recent education reform bill, which places heavy emphasis on the core curriculum.

"We are in a bind," said James Kirk, another school committee member. "If you call it business education, it doesn't count toward the core."

In addition, Hart said that the school department faces tough budgetary constraints. If a proposed override of Proposition 2 1/2 fails this spring, he said the school system may be forced to cut another $180,000 from its budget.

"Nobody likes cutting programs," he said.

School Committee member Ralph Kidder called the letter "excellent," adding that "several of us had the same concerns you do."

The first meeting will be held on Wednesday, March 29, at 10 a.m. To reserve a place call 383-9112.

Easter egg hunt April 8

The Cohasset Recreation Commission will conduct its annual Easter Egg Hunt for children ages three through 11 years on Saturday, April 8, at noon at the Deer Hill School.

The Hunt is made possible by donations from a number of local civic and business organizations, whose names will be announced at a later date. It is also through the efforts of a number of resident volunteers that this event is offered every year.

The Cohasset Teen Center will hold a Bake Sale in conjunction with the egg hunt to raise money toward operating costs at the center.

Children should be accompanied by an adult and bring a container to hold the chocolate eggs they will find during the hunt. Children will be divided into three age groups, and parents may help younger children.

The Easter Bunny and helpers will arrive at Deer Hill at noon aboard the Cohasset fire truck. Every child will receive candy, and more than 60 prizes will be awarded. The rain date is Saturday, April 15.

Call 383-6791 for further information or if in doubt about possible cancelation of the hunt.

Kite Day at golf club

A Kite Day will be held at the South Shore Country Club on Saturday, March 25, at 11 a.m., with a raindate of Sunday, March 26.

There will be an exhibition by Kites of Boston and awards, including most creative and unique.

Hotdogs, soda and chips will be on sale. Participants should bring their own kites to fly on the golf course. Everyone is invited to participate.

Cohasset scout Jay Nothnagle earns Eagle Award

Saturday, March 11, Troop 28 Cohasset, Boy Scouts of America, conducted an Eagle Court of Honor in which the Eagle Award, the highest rank in Scouting, was presented to Jay Nothnagle. A large group of Jay's family, friends, and supporters attended the ceremony, which was the culmination of 12 years of Cub and Boy Scouting for one of Cohasset's best-known Scouts.

Jay, who has Down's Syndrome, has been a member of Pack 38 and Troop 28, where he participated in all activities and earned his ranks by meeting the same standards as other Scouts. In fact, he has earned 32 merit badges when only 21 were required for Eagle. He has been to summer camp for seven years, attended the 1993 National Jamboree as a member of the troop representing the South Shore, and has held various leadership positions in his troop.

His Eagle project was to rebuild the trail through Great Brewster Woods, behind the town hall, on land owned by Cohasset Conservation Trust. It involved adding four benches, signs, building a stone ford, and rerouting a steep section.

At the Eagle Court, all four of Jay's former Scoutmasters made presentations, and a large group of Eagle Scouts reaffirmed their Eagle oaths. Jay also received acclamations from the Cohasset Rotary, the charter organization of the troop, the Cohasset Conservation Trust, Mary Jeannette Murray, state representative, and numerous other written congratulatory messages from elected officials including President Clinton.

A beaming Jay Nothnagle stands with his parents Jeff and Taffy Nothnagle and John Pape, scoutmaster of Troop 28 Cohasset, who presented Jay with his Eagle Scout award.

Skipper laxmen set for stiff schedule

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Consider the enrollment number of boys at Cohasset High and keep in mind there are four other sports available in the spring. So when 44 players show up on the first day of lacrosse practice, only one conclusion can be reached: Lacrosse is the sport of choice during the final season of the school year.

The number is a stark contrast to the 18 or so players who went out for the team seven years ago when the program was first started at the school.

In that span, head coach Ken Ekberg has established a well-structured program that enjoyed its best season yet in '94. The Skippers finished with an overall record of 12-3, which included a trip to the tourney and a win over Marblehead in the first round.

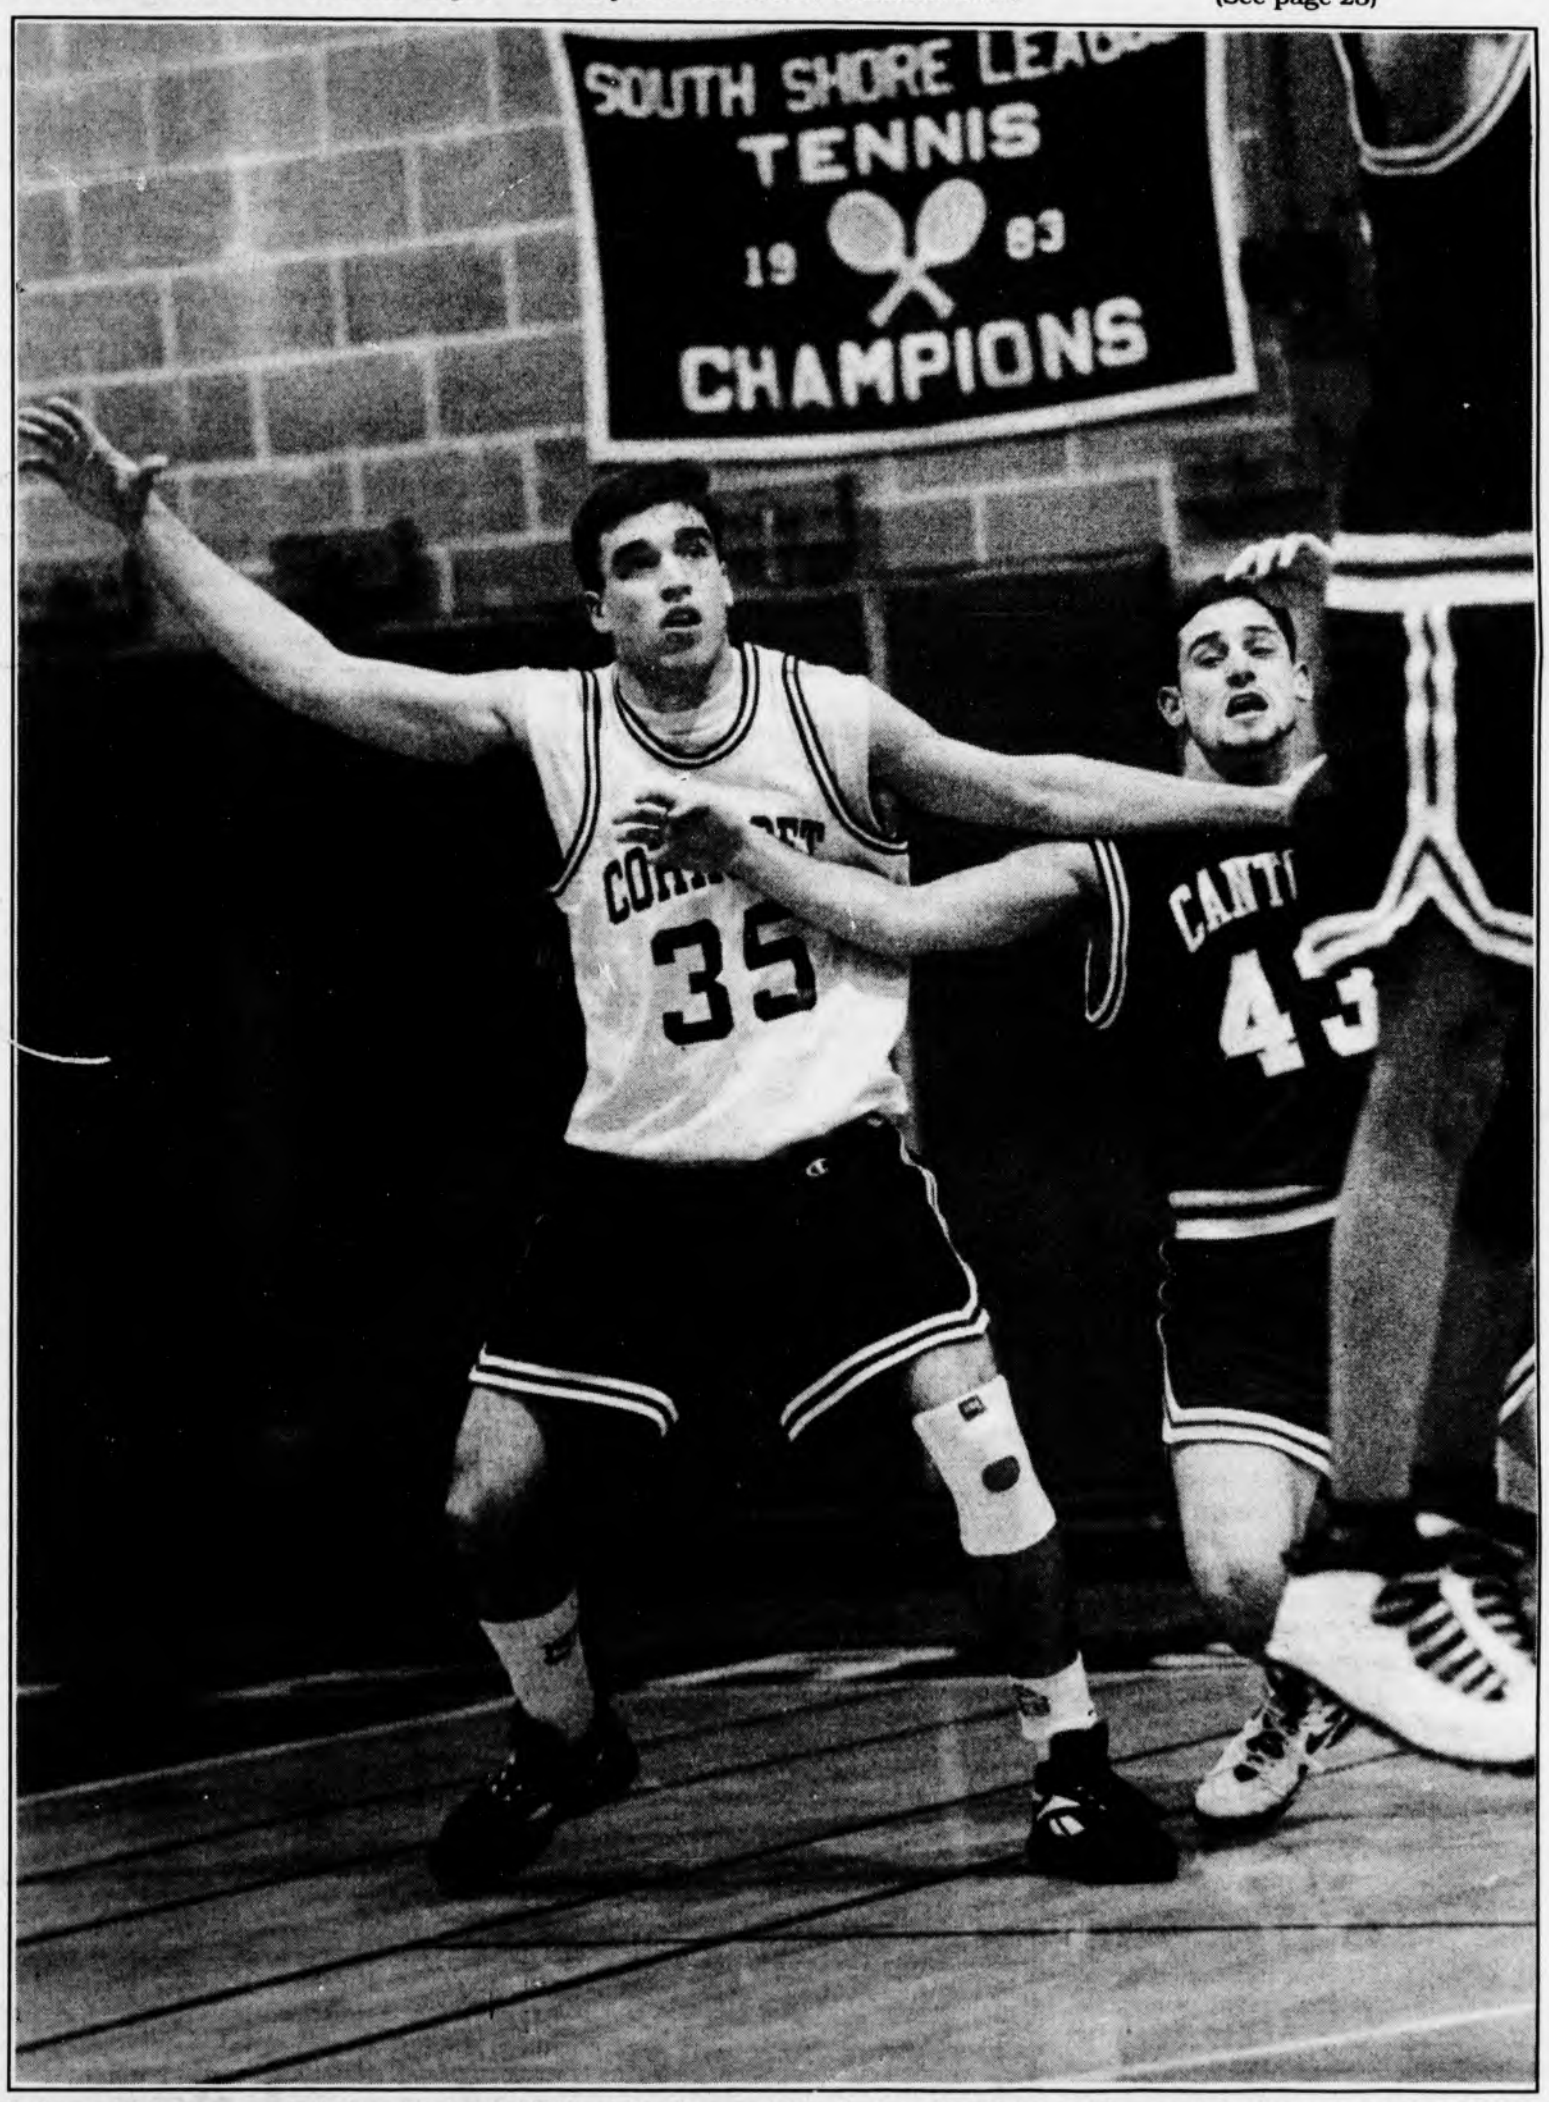
Cohasset found itself completely overmatched in the next game, but the loss could hardly be regarded as a failure, given that it came at the hands of '93 state champion Newton-North, a school whose enrollment is far greater than Cohasset's. It comes as no surprise that the Skippers were the smallest school to qualify for the tourney.

With a stiff schedule, including games against Barnstable, B.C. High, Duxbury, Beverly and Falmouth, Cohasset won't be able to rest on its past laurels. Ekberg also has "three pretty big shoes to fill this year," after losing Charlie Endris, Dave Leahy and Brandon DeVoe to graduation.

Ekberg does have enough experienced talent from last year's team and expects to "rely heavily" on co-captains attackman Chris Adams and midfielder Ben Redfield.

Cohasset will be tested right from the opening game when it takes on Duxbury, April 5, followed by B.C. High three days later. The Green Dragons will surely be out to avenge their one-goal loss the Skippers dealt them in the final minute

(See page 23)



Cohasset High co-captain Joe Slotnick (35) battles for position during the Skippers' two-point win over Canton in the quarterfinals of the Division 3 South Sectional tourney. Cohasset went on to battle Winthrop at the Boston Garden in an exhausting triple overtime before finally succumbing in the EMass finals.

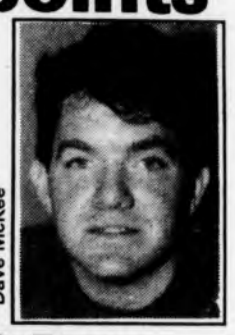
extra points

Joe Reardon



Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

The winter sports season officially ended with the playing of the state championships over the weekend.

The following are some Extra Points Awards on the just completed season.

Biggest Turnaround Award: the Scituate High hockey team.

The Sailors hadn't made the state tourney since winning the Division II state crown in '86, but under third-year coach Peter Cooney, they won 14 games to reach the post-season in '95. In the tourney they were bumped out by eventual state finalist Coyle-Cassidy by one goal.

The Wait 'Til Next Year Award: the Silver Lake boys' basketball team.

The Lakers ran off three straight OCL titles before slipping to only one victory this year. But coach Dick Arieta praised the team's attitude and said it is just a matter of time before the Lakers are back in the high life.

Best Twins Award (tie): Norwell High's Meg and Amy Barao and Notre Dame Academy's Christine and Danielle Pineault.

Sophomores Meg and Amy led the Lady Clippers to the South Shore League title and made the all-star team. The Lady Clippers were bumped out of the Division III state tourney by eventual champion Foxboro.

Seniors Christine and Danielle (who hail from Marshfield) led the Aces to the Catholic Conference League title and were all-stars.

Their team was bounced from the state tourney by eventual champion Walpole.

Not bad genes, I guess.

Worst Foul Shooting Award: the Cohasset boys' basketball team in the EMass Division III finals at the Boston Garden.

The Skippers held a nine point lead with two minutes to play in the game and proceeded to miss three straight one-on-ones to open the door for eventual state champion Winthrop.

One Skipper even air-balled a one-on-one with only 21 seconds to play and Cohasset ahead by three.

Gotta work on those freebies boys. A couple misses can certainly ruin a Garden Party.

Worst Tourney Exit Award:the Hanover High hockey team.

The Indians were a goal ahead of Coyle-Cassidy in the final minutes of the third period when a Coyle-Cassidy shot appeared to rattle off the post and bounce out. But the ref away from the play called it a goal and Hanover went on to lose in triple OT in a Division III second-round game.

Coyle-Cassidy went on to play in the state finals in the Boston Garden.

Best Late Charge Award: the Hingham High hockey team.

Trailing 3-0 in the Division II state semifinals against Tewksbury, the Harbormen scored two power-play goals in the final four minutes of the third period and peppered Tewksbury's goalie with numerous shots before time expired.

cohasset basketball roundup

with Jim O'Sullivan

'Beezer' mixes hoop talent with humor

Jim Magner, commonly known to his legions of fans as "Beezer," is an enigma. A rare combination in sports these days, Beezer manages to blend skill, hard work and humor into his game.

A guard for Cohasset's Division 3 South Sectional championship squad, Magner showed his talent on the court, by entering a game and calming the Skippers, by popping a three-point shot, making a defensive play, or just by lifting the spirits of his teammates.

Head coach Ron Ford chuckled when asked about Magner.

"Old Beezer, without question, is a big-time gamer," said Ford. "The kid always comes up huge in games for us. He's a big pressure player. He had a tremendous career with us, no question about it. He was part of a great guard rotation. Beezer worked hard, helped the team any way he could. He's a total team player and just a great kid. Jimmy's a riot, he kept everything in perspective for us. Whenever we took ourselves too seriously, there was Beezer to wake us up. He's just a great, great kid."

Magner's versatility is another trait that makes him stand out. His leadership carried Cohasset's soccer team through a great season and, when the flowers bloom and replacement players head south, Beezer dons the Skippers' baseball uniform to keep his teammates in stitches on the diamond.

"I thought the tournament was great," Magner said. "We got to play in the Boston Garden, which was one of the greatest feelings. When I put my foot up on the parquet, when I took that step up, it was one of the greatest feelings that I've ever experienced. To get to the Garden, to play in a game like the Apponequet game, to never give up and pull out a win, it's been great.

"I think, individually, that I played all right. I started off the season pretty well. I had fun, which was my main goal. I had a good time. It's just sad that it has to end. The season was great, the tournament was great and the team was great."

Magner's ability to mix his personality and his talent are refreshing in an era when sports are twisted out of perspective. Beezer's unselfishness and general good-natured personality prompted unparalleled crowd admiration. One particularly dedicated fan felt it necessary to holler, "We love you, Beezer!" after the national anthem of each game. With a personality like that, it's tough to argue.

Special moments stand out in hoop season

The Cohasset Skippers' fairy-tale season came to an end last week in the Boston Garden, the first time a Cohasset team has played in the Garden since 1951. The great squads of the early to mid 1980s were robbed of the experience while Divisions 1 and 2 partied on the parquet.

"It was such a positive experience for us," head coach Ron Ford remarked. "A bunch of great kids; as a group they were best friends. If you looked up the word 'team' in the dictionary, this group is right there. The memories that I will have as a coach will be fantastic. I realize that I've had 12 guys give up everything to be the best basketball team that they could be. As a coach, it's such a rare occasion when that happens, and they have definitely set the tone for this program. There is no better blueprint for success in Cohasset basketball than these guys. They sacrificed everything, did everything the correct way, not always the easiest way, but the correct way. They took the hard road.

"As I've told them before, success is not defined by your final destination, but by the journey. If you look at the whole picture, it was one heck of a journey."

The Skippers' year was filled with last-second heroics, but no season is about the last three seconds of playoff games. Dues are paid during the summer, in the weight room and in early-season games. Some of Cohasset's better moments will never make a highlight film, but they showed what this magnificent team was all about. The following are some of the best moments of this great season.

* Hardwick's slam: Early in the first half of the first game of the year in Norwell, junior Jared Hardwick picked up a loose ball at half-court, Hardwick closed in on his destination and, with style and grace, sent out a warning signal for any and all basketball teams all over the state. Hardwick's tomahawk jam opened the floodgates and the Skippers took off.

* Slotnick versus Bryant: On the way home from a road game, captain Joe Slotnick and Dorian Bryant started to discuss college basketball. As the conversation grew more heated, the Skippers' other captain, Pete Bishop, adopted the role of devil's advocate. Bishop fanned the fire and Slotnick and Bryant were soon involved in a colorful argument, the debate raging whether Grant Hill was a better player than Shaquille O'Neal. The flowery prose of Cohasset's forwards soon had the conscious members of the bus in hysterics.

* The Game: The die-hard Skippers battled tooth and nail against the Canton Bulldogs in the first round of the state tourney and pulled out a 44-42 victory in the final seconds when Thomas Allen stole the ball to clinch the victory. Skipper fans flooded the floor after the victory.

* The Comeback: (Cohasset's dramatic comeback against Apponequet in the South Sectional semifinals) Trailing 49-42 with 3:15 left, Ford called the now famous timeout. Ford challenged his players and they accepted. The hapless Lakers were never to score again as defense and hustle won the contest for Ford's boys.

* The Future: Hard-working, talented center Ryan Bishop and high-flying, versatile Jared Hardwick are the only remaining members of Cohasset's stellar varsity squad. This duo will bring experience and skill to next year's team.

Juniors Fred Howard and Bret MacQuarrie and sophomore J.L. Williams, all had spectacular seasons at the JV level and were called up to fill the varsity's tournament roster. With this nucleus of stars and more prospects coming up from the JV level, Cohasset's rich basketball tradition shows no signs of letting up.

Seahawks Bantam A team wins state championship

By Jim Kirby
Special to the Mariner

After a fast and furious week of playoff style hockey, the South Shore Seahawk Bantam A hockey team was crowned Massachusetts State Champions at the Rockland rink this past Sunday.

The week began with a match-up of the only two undefeated teams in the South Shore Conference, pitting the South Shore Seahawks (10-0-3), who hail from Scituate, Cohasset, Hull, Norwell and Marshfield, against their arch-rivals, the Randolph-Avon-Stoughton-Holbrook Mohawks (12-0-1), in the final game of this year's regular season. After falling behind 2-1 in the third period, the Seahawks rallied on goals from Hull's Mark Concannon and Scituate's Tim Roland to win 3-2 and finish the season as the conference's only undefeated team.

Next came the Massachusetts Hockey Bantam A-Tier 2 State Tournament which began Friday night and ended 48 hours later, after a five game "endurance test" between 16 of the top Massachusetts Bantam teams selected during conference play downs last fall.

The Seahawks pulled one out of the fire in the first game when, after Needham pulled ahead 2-1 with just over two minutes left. Marshfield's Ray Kirby scored with 1:01 left to gain what turned out to be a critical 2-2 tie. The Seahawks ended the preliminary round tied with Needham in points and had to rely on a tie-breaking plus/minus rule to move on to the semi-final round.

The Seahawks' defense, one of the state's best with a 1.50 goal-against average and led by tournament co-MVP goaler Tim King, defensemen Barbara Prall, Tim Smallcomb, Jon Kadish, Dan Collins, and Mike Hoffman, backstopped the Seahawks to a semi-finals berth Saturday with superlative defensive victories over Lynn, 4-0 and Acton-Boxboro, 8-1. The offense was powered by goals and assists from Co-MVP wing Brian Rodgers, forwards Tim Roland, Steve Manning, Ray Kirby, Mark Concannon, Greg Steen, Jon Timmons, P.J. Ennis and Greg Bell. Defensemen Prall, Smallcomb and Hoffman also contributed goals and/or assists.

After putting away Tewksbury by a score of 6-3, in a rough, penalty-filled semi-final, the Seahawks met Melrose in the finals Sunday night. Jon Timmons spotted the Seahawks to an early 1-0 lead which the team defended through two periods. After a second period intermission, Melrose stormed the Seahawks end of the ice and struck for the tying goal in the first minute of play. But, as was this Seahawk team's hallmark all season, they fought back into the lead on a clutch goal by Rodgers with just over five minutes left. This, of course, unleashed a fury of Melrose offense, finally pulling their goalie and blitzing the Seahawks defense. Defenseman Tim Smallcomb iced the game when he intercepted a dangerous Melrose pass and fired into an empty net to end the game at 3-1.

"Each game a different Seahawk would step up and lead the team with one amazing play or another, whether it was Tim King with a game-saving glove stop, or Greg Bell, Jon Kadish or Dan Collins repeatedly sacrificing their bodies by stepping in front of opponents as they charged into our zone," said Seahawks coach Joe Timmons.

The Seahawks start the South Shore Conference playoffs this weekend and you can be sure there'll be more than a few teams looking to knock out the favorites early, but there's one thing no one can ever take away from this South Shore Seahawks Bantam A team, something that they will have for the rest of their lives: the memory of how hard they had to work, but how good it felt, to win the 1995 Bantam A State Championship!

Rowing camp to begin April 11

Want to row like the Lifesavers, the Snow Rowers, and the championship crews from all over the South Shore? Signup for spring rowing camp will be held Saturday, April 1, at the Pemberton Point Boathouse, located at the very tip of Hull. The camp will be run by staff of the Hull Lifesaving Museum's Maritime Program, who have been coaching youth open-water rowing programs for 15 years.

Last fall, five youth crews from the South Shore engaged in a season of competitive rowing, representing their towns and schools in races throughout the region. The spring camp is open to novice rowers. Youths will acquire skills week by week, rowing in traditional boats, and eventually will work their way to the Brewster Islands and Boston Light.

The rowing camp will be held Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays through mid-June. Youngsters ages 11-19 will row in crews, learning fundamentals of seamanship, coastal navigation, and open-water rowing while exploring the waters and islands of Boston Harbor and Hingham and Hull Bays. Youths will attend two rowing sessions per week. Please call 925-3155 for cost and other information.

Rotary sponsors road race

The 19th Annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea, sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, will be held on Sunday, April 2 at 1 p.m. in Cohasset Village. Check-in for the 10-kilometer race is at the Cohasset Community Center on Saturday, April 1, and Sunday, April 2, from 9 a.m. to noon.

There is a $10 registration fee until March 28. The fee is $12 after that date.

To request an application send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Cohasset Road Race by the Sea, P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025. The completed application and fee should be returned to the same address. For further information about the race call Austin Lyne at 383-6550.

Little League prepares for season

By Bob Moody
Special to the Mariner

The 1995 Little League Board of Directors have been preparing for the 1995 season since January. The board members consist of Bob Moody, president; Jon Caron, vice president; Ernie Grassey, treasurer; Linda Bolster, secretary; John Carr, player agent; Bill Baird, director of umpires; Bob Morgan, director of major leagues; Emmett O'Brien, director of pony leagues; Kevin Lewis, director of farm leagues; and Andy Kreuger, director of minor leagues and equipment. The board has undertaken an ambitious agenda this season. This agenda includes expanding the snack bar, providing sanitation facilities and holding a sports memorabilia auction and the Little League dance as fundraisers.

The board has recently been granted approval by the Board of Selectmen to expand the existing snack bar. This expansion is scheduled to begin the first week in April. The board is asking for assistance with the labor, material or money to complete this project. Tradesmen or volunteers whom are able to donate their time should call Bob Moody, 383-0385. Tax deductible monetary donations should be made payable to CYBA. Please stipulate on your check "Donation for snack bar" and mail to P.O. Box 121. The construction is scheduled to be completed before April 29, 1995.

Saturday, April 8, 1995, Cohasset Little League will be sponsoring a Sports Memorabilia Auction at The South Shore Community Center. Auction items will include autographed memorabilia from Ray Bourque, Larry Bird, John Bucyk, Tom Glavine, Drew Bledsoe and many others. In addition former Boston Bruin great Johnny (Pie) Mckenzie will be present to sign autographs. The entire family is invited. Auction preview will be from 7 to 7:30 p.m. This is an opportunity to purchase that special sports item which can only appreciate in value.

The other important fundraiser for Little League is the annual dance. This year the dance will be held Saturday, May 27, at the Community Center. Further information concerning this function will be available as the season progresses.

The board once again has attempted to improve the 13 year old to 18 year old program. The board has entered teams in a 13 year old division, 14 year old division and a 15 and 16 year old division. The competition for these teams will be demanding. The 16 to 18 year old team will be defending their Senior Babe Ruth championship.

Sign-up for these programs will be held March 25 and April 1 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Deer Hill School. Please bring a copy of your birth certificate to the sign-up. This will be the only sign-up for these age groups.

Lastly, anyone interested in coaching or umpiring this year should call the appropriate director. The board and the children in the program would like to thank the community for its continued support.

Skippers set for stiff schedule of last year's game when Adams found the back of the net. And Cohasset will want to do the same after coming out on the short end of an 11-7 decision.

Ekberg is especially pleased with the gain in popularity of the sport throughout the South Shore and predicts a new league will be formed out of the Eastern Mass Lacrosse Association. Marshfield will field its first varsity team and Norwell has begun a JV program. A varsity team is expected for the spring of '96.

"Ultimately there'll have to be a realignment in the future," Ekberg said.

But what exactly is the game's biggest selling point? Ekberg believes the combination of contact and finesse gives players the chance to utilize their talents. And with the field 110 yards long and 60 yards across, there is more than enough room to maneuver.

"There's a lot of room for individual creativity and strategy," he said.

The Skippers have used theirs in fine fashion and are hoping to continue the tradition this spring.

extra points

Hingham lost 3-2 and Tewksbury went on to win the state crown beating ACL team Whitman-Hanson 9-1. If the Harbormen had another minute of ice time, they would have won the game.

Hottest Goalie Award: Marshfield High's Jason Kadish.

The junior keeper was called up from the JV's early in the season and proceeded to reel off 11 straight wins before losing to eventual state finalist Whitman-Hanson in the state tourney.

Kadish's play brought the Rams together this season and big things are expected next year.

The Saddest Story Award: the death of North Quincy High hockey player Matt Messing.

Messing, who grew up in Hanover, died after being checked in a game against Quincy High. The check apparently caught Messing at the wrong moment and shocked his heart into cardiac arrest.

His death hit home with everybody and not just hockey fans.

The Courage Award: to Scituate High freshman Colin Reedy.

During the first-round state tourney game against Westwood, Reedy re-broke his foot yet kept playing until the half. SHS coach Roger Kvam said Reedy knew the foot was broken as soon as the play happened but still wanted to play. Former Red Sox Ellis Burks and Wade Boggs would have fallen to the ground like they were shot instead of giving it a go.

The Biggest Surprise Award: to the Hingham High girls' basketball team.

After getting off to a slow start, HHS coach Skip Mortimer started using all his underclassmen and the Harborwomen battled all the way to ten wins and a state tourney berth.

With junior sharpshooter Cristi Gigon and super frosh Melissa Christino coming back next year, the Harborwomen should finish with a lot more than ten wins.

The Player to Watch Award: to Norwell High's Matt Lewis.

The 6'7" sophomore center helped the Clippers to a state tourney berth in '95 and should rule the paint next year after Cohasset graduates Peter Bishop.

Add outside bomber Billy Lynch to the mix and the Clippers look strong for '96.

The MIAA boys must be tickled pink by the turnouts and excitement generated by the winter tournaments in hockey and basketball. Not that they could really lose out with many of the sectional and state finals being played for the final time in the Boston Garden.

Just in case you've been living in a cave for the past few months, let me update you. The Garden is set to be razed to make room for what was to be the new Shawmut Center. But when Fleet decided to take over Shawmut Bank, in came the new name: FleetCenter.

This year's tourneys marked the final time high school hockey and basketball players would have the chance to show off their talents in the old rat trap.

And with the Celtics playing like the cast of "Little Women" on a nightly basis, watching the schoolboy action was a welcome relief from the green's endless drudgery on the court, Dee Brown's on-again, off-again play, Dino Radja's injuries and Rick Fox's continued hold of Boston's underachiever title among sports personalities.

As a special treat to all the local sports fans who want to see the Garden drop like a Dominique Wilkins popularity rating, Tommy Lee Jones should be flown back into town to detonate the explosives, just as he did two summers ago while filming "Blown Away" on location. There'll be no bothersome Jeff Bridges to stop him this time around. And I tend to doubt the good people of East Boston would mind a few blown out windows, given the fact the shattered glass would be the direct result of a worthy cause.

Still, it is a bit sad to see the old building go down in a heap of steel, brick and dust. Those high school teams who had the opportunity to play in the Garden for the final time will, without question, have memories that will stay with them for years to come. It's not every day you get to skate on the same rink as Esposito, Orr, Bourque and Neely. And let's not forget the legacy Russell, Cousy and Bird brought to the old barn.

The EMass tourney of '95 was one for the ages.

—Joe Reardon

Cohasset's Kevin Lewis brought his hockey coaching skills to Duxbury High this past winter where he was behind the bench alongside coach Peter Saggese. Lewis is no stranger to high school hockey, having formerly coached at Foxboro and North Quincy High Schools, as well as Milton Academy and Cohasset.

—JR

I wasn't there, but from all accounts it sounds as though there is little doubt that the Hanover High hockey team was robbed of a 3-2 victory over Coyle-Cassidy in the Division 3 EMass semifinals. Videotapes of the Taunton-based team's goal, which forced the game into overtime, show the puck didn't cross the goal line, despite the officials' ruling it had.

C-C went on to win the game over the nine-time SSL champions in a 15-minute period, 5-3. And though the loss was an especially tough one to bear because of the controversial circumstances surrounding it, the defeat can hardly take away what the Indians proved yet another time: The Indians are still the team to beat in the SSL until another squad proves otherwise.

Hotarek exhibits at library

Christine Hotarek's photography exhibit, "Southern Exposures," will be on display at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library through April. The collection reflects the beauty, philosophy and cultures the artist has experienced, particularly in the Southwest.

Hotarek, a well-known South Shore photographer, has won many honors for her work and has studied with modern photographer Sam Abell at the Santa Fe Photographic Workshops.

Her work was recently acclaimed at the South Shore Art Center's prestigious Juried Photography Show.

CDROM service offered

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset, has two new CDROM services for public use. The products are SIRS RESEARCHER and SIRS GOVERNMENT REPORTER.

The computer workstation and the two CDROM services are on loan for the summer from the Cohasset High School.

Each CDROM can hold nearly 190,000 pages of text.

SIRS (Social Issues Resources Series) RESEARCHER provides full text of thousands of articles selected from over 800 sources from 1988 to the present. These articles relate to the sciences, social issues, global events, historic, economic and political information.

SIRS GOVERNMENT REPORTER gives full text of selected articles from publications of federal government departments, agencies and commissions. It also includes a congressional directory, with information on U.S. Senate and House members and their staffs.

Here is an example of photographer, Christine Hotarek's work which is on display in her exhibit "Southern Exposures" at the Paul Pratt Library.

Both files are searchable by key word, or by subject category, or by names of persons or agencies. Summaries of articles or the articles may be read on screen or printed.

Sticker drive could wake up sleepy election

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Two years ago it took a few joggers and a wedding party to break up a very long day at the polls.

At that time, the only contested race was for a seat on the board of library trustees.

But this year, an eleventh-hour sticker campaign could cause some excitement in what was previously a "race-less" town election.

Steve Gaumer, 208 Fairoaks Lane, decided Monday to launch a last-minute write in and sticker campaign and challenge health board member held by Robert V. Davenport of 135 Sohier Street for the one-year unexpired term on the board of health

Davenport was appointed to the health board about a month ago by a majority of the remaining members of the board of health and selectmen to fill until the election the seat of long-time health board member William Baird, who had stepped down. Davenport, who had previously sat on the health board for two years, was defeated by current health board member Alix

Committee to do its homework on school options

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The school building committee got the go ahead from town meeting to conduct a feasibility study which will compare the costs of renovating and modernizing the Osgood School with the cost of constructing a new elementary school.

Voters appropriated $20,000 to conduct the comprehensive study which will be performed by an architectural/engineering firm with experience in these matters.

School committee chairman Nancy Sandell explained that the school facilities committee — which has been renamed the school building committee — reviewed the school department's preliminary report on long-range options.

Building committee chairman Richard Silvia said some of the systems at the 70-year-old Osgood School have been in place since before the Great Depression. He said an in-depth professional feasibility study will determine if it's prudent to upgrade Osgood or build a

Oldest Cohasset house celebrates its tricentennial

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

Here's a riddle for you:

Noel Ripley's house has stood in two different towns in two different countries and never moved an inch. How is this possible?

It's very simple if you know Ripley's house dates back to Cohasset's earliest days when it was part of Hingham and Hingham was part of Merry Olde England.

Like Cohasset, the red cape at 179 South Main has changed over time. It's seen the addition of wood sheds and dormers, the coal-burning furnace that replaced the fireplace was in turn replaced for a more efficient heating source, walls went up and walls came down.

But at its heart, this old house remains the same cozy full Cape that Joshua Bates built in 1695 to shelter his wife, Rachel Tower Bates, and the baby she would have the following July.

In the early years, the house almost certainly consisted of a keeping room, the only room with heat, the borning room right off the keeping room, a master bedroom and a sleeping loft accessible only by ladder. It probably had an attached woodshed that was renovated into an additional room as the family grew.

And Bates' family definitely grew. Daughter Rachel was born in July 1696 followed two years later by the birth of Joshua. Over the course of the next 10 years, Rachel Bates would give birth to five more children: Bathsheba, Elizabeth, Solomon, Isaac and Jacob.

Cohasset Genealogies and Town History says of this house "It is doubtless the oldest house in town." And according to Heritage Trail: The Old Houses of Cohasset 1695-1811, its nearest rivals in the antiquity division are the J.H. Smith House, built circa 1700, and the Red Lion Inn, said to date back to 1704.

If Ripley's house is the oldest house today, it was not always that way.

"The earliest house in town stood on a hill by Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road," Ripley recalls. The next

Cohasset's week

Tree trimming to begin

Beginning Monday, April 3, the Eastern Utility Company, along with the Cohasset tree and park department, will begin a tree-trimming project to remove potentially hazardous trees and branches. They will begin on South Main St. at the Scituate line and continue onto North Main St. to the Hingham line.

All of Beechwood St. and King St. will then be done, because the main lines that power the town are located on these streets. The side streets and private ways will be done last.

Trimming will be done by the Asplundh Company in orange-colored vehicles. Residents will first be asked whether they wish trees on their property to be trimmed or they may call the tree and park department ahead of time at 383-6709.

Permit deadline extended

The Cohasset Board of Health recently voted to extend the purchase deadline for 1995 Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility permits to Wednesday, May 31. They may be purchased through the mail for the first time. The fee is $65.

Cohasset residents qualify for two permits per household for $65 by providing both motor vehicle registrations with the same address at the same time. If information on a second vehicle is provided at a later date, an additional $25 fee will be charged.

The RTF permit fee for a single person household is $33. To qualify the applicant must sign an affadavit available only in the office of the health department. There is no senior citizen discount.

To obtain a 1995 RTF permit by mail send a copy of vehicle registration(s) with current address and a check for $65 payable to the Town of Cohasset. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Mail to: Permits, Board of Health Office, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

Advisory Committee Chair Nancy A. Roth addresses the first session of the annual town meeting Saturday. The 200 citizens who attended approved the town's fiscal year operating budget of about $14.6 million which will require a Prop. 2-1/2 override. The town will put the override before the voters at a special election in May. (Staff photo/J. Paul MacDonald)

Health office closings set

The Board of Health has voted to continue closure of the Board of Health office to the public temporarily. The times of closure are Thursdays from 1 to 5 p.m., continuing each Thursday through April 6.

Prior to April 4 the board will review its decision and determine if the closures should continue beyond that date.

Mini-bus to be bought

The town will spend $30,000 for buy a mini bus for the school department. The mini-bus, which will be handicapped accessible will replace the 1987 bus which has more than 100,000 miles, School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell said.

Sandell said the school department will make the van available to other town departments when it's not being used by the schools.

Spill control kits needed

Town meeting appropriated $3,500 to pay for spill control kits for Lily Pond and Cohasset Harbor. The kits, which will include booms to be used to contain and clean up a spill, will be kept at the fire department.

Cohasset's week

Board increase is nixed

By a vote of 70 to 50, town meeting did not set the stage for increasing the members of the board of health this year.

Saying the matter needed further study, health board members Tom Cook and Robert V. Davenport recommended against the increase. Their view was shared by the advisory board.

But three selectmen and the remaining health board member Alix White lobbied for the increase.

"I felt the board of health with its case load would be greatly served with more talent on the board," White explained.

Selectman Peter Pratt, who was supported by selectmen Martha Gjesteby and Merle Brown, said the case load is overwhelming and the board could use more manpower and expertise.

But Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan noted that the issue was raised about a month ago and he did not favor rushing in and voting on it without more discussion.

John K. McNabb, 53 Pond St., said the board of health needs more members to share the workload which includes grappling with the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill and ramifications of Title V, state regulations covering the upgrading of septic systems.

Connie Afshar, 141 S. Main St., said the amount of work board of health members deal with discourages citizens from running. She said if the board is opened up to more people, it would serve the town better.

Nod to tank removal

The town will borrow up to $88,000 to remove the gas line and diesel underground tanks and fuel dispensing system at the junior/senior high school and to purchase and install new above ground tanks.

Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan said the tanks will come out this spring and the town may have to go out to a third party to buy gas as an interim measure until the new tanks are installed.

It is not clear where the tanks will be located. They can't go back in their current location in the high school parking lot because of the placement of the new athletic fields. If the new public works garage is supported in the May override election, the tanks could go at the new garage site at the town landfill or if not, they could possibly be installed by the town garage, Sullivan said.

Bathrooms fix-up coming

The town will borrow up to $40,000 for some badly needed renovations to eight bathrooms at the junior/senior high school. The bathrooms are 30 years old and are in "desperate" need of repair, School Committee Chairman Nancy Sandell said.

Money for agent approved

The Conservation Commission got the okay to spend $8,876 to pay for a part-time conservation agent. The commission has the money to pay for the agent through its fee fund and trust fund, members explained. The commission plans to increase fees so it can become self-sustaining, member Veneta Roebuck told town meeting.

Elections to be flexible

A by-law change supported at town meeting eliminates the need for special elections for overrides by allowing up to 35 days between town meeting held the last Saturday in March and the annual town election. The change was recommended by the government structure committee, selectmen and advisory board. The current by-law says the annual election must take place the first Saturday in April and therefore does not allow enough time between town meeting and the town election to place an override question on the ballot if needed.

CHARITABLE FUNDS AVAILABLE

The George E. Curtis Charitable Trust is accepting applications from charitable organizations which provide nursing care, day care, respite care or home care for low income adults who are handicapped, disabled or infirm. To be eligible for the grant award the charitable organization must be exempt from taxation and must be able to use the funds in Plymouth County and contiguous towns. Priority will be given to those programs which offer direct aid to eligible individuals in their homes by maintaining such individuals in his or her home so as to improve the quality of home life.

Funds are also available to assist in the design, construction and equipment of facilities for use by low income adults who are handicapped, disabled or infirm so as to improve the quality of their living arrangements. Individuals are not eligible for funding. The deadline for submitting a completed application is June 19, 1995.

Applications are available by sending a written request to:

Budget survives floor challenge

The town will spend $14.6 million in FY'96 if voters in May pass a $340,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override

The budget won the support of town meeting despite challenges to cut and to add to it by concerned citizens.

F. Roy Fitzsimmons wanted to slash the school department and fire department budgets by $300,000 and $250,000 respectively but was later persuaded to withdraw his amendments because of the upheaval amending the budgets by line item would cause on the floor of town meeting.

"I disagree with the override," Fitzsimmons said. "Some people who approached me must now consider moving out of town because the tax rate is prohibitive."

Fire Capt. Robert Silvia asked town meeting to add upward of $90,000 to the fire department budget to fill three vacancies. Silvia's amendment was defeated.

Selectmen and advisors supported the $14.6 million budget as necessary to maintain current town services.

"We've spent many hours debating, discussing and reviewing the budget," Selectmen Chairman Michael H. Sullivan said. "A huge amount of time went into approving the budget before feeling comfortable presenting it to you."

Advisory Board chairman Nan Roth said if the override fails, the town side and school side of the budget would be cut equally. She explained that free cash had been used in fiscal years 1994 and 1995 to balance the budget and avoid the necessity of small override elections.

She said inflation, personnel contracts, and debt service have contributed to the budget increase which exceeds the 2-1/2 percent tax cap and therefore necessitates an override.

Sick leave benefit ok'ed

Special town meeting approved adding $4,863.40 to the fire department salary budget this fiscal year to make a lump sum payment to a retiring firefighter for unused sick leave. Fire Chief Roger Lincoln explained that firefighters who have reached the age of 55 and have 30 years of service and were hired before Jan. 1, 1980 are eligible for this benefit "per contract." He noted that the firefighter who is retiring in May has "an excellent attendance record."

In answering a question at special town meeting posed by Roy Fitzsimmons of 116 Doane St., Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon explained that while the town budgets for overtime to pay for firefighters who cover when one is out sick, money to cover sick-leave buy back is not budgeted for.

DPW garage gets go ahead

Town meeting approved the design and construction of a $752,000 public works garage to be built at the Recycling Transfer Facility off Cedar Street.

To pay for it, voters will likely be asked to approve a debt exclusion override which would raise taxes for the duration of the debt.

The garage study committee presented town meeting voters with a detailed explanation on the garage ranging from an analysis of current facilities used in town to the kind of garage and its cost.

The garage received support from selectmen, health board, advisors and the capital budget committee. Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield and Tree & Park Supt. Peter Laugelle also praised the concept.

Garage study committee chairman Terry Atherton pointed out that while the garage is expensive, it will actually save the town money in the long run.

He said the town would realize savings from a more efficient use of personnel who are now scattered over several locations and from extended vehicle life. With the new garage, the town's vehicles could be stored inside. With consolidation, the town would also need fewer vehicles he said. Over 25 years, the town could save $1.2 million, Atherton explained.

Town meeting also approved a by-law setting up the position of DPW Superintendent.

Cleanup continues of chemical spill at cleaners

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Half of a chemical spill that took place more than two years ago behind Dwyer's Cleaning Spot, 754 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, has been cleaned up, and plans are underway to use the latest technology to remove the rest, according to the attorney representing the cleaner.

Robert A. Fasanella, an environmental lawyer with the Boston firm of Fasanella, Johnson and Wood, told the conservation commission two weeks ago that the some four gallons of the spill have been removed and that efforts to clean up the remaining three gallons will likely start this summer.

The incident occurred Sept. 30, 1992, when seven gallons of the cleaning chemical tetrachloroethene (PCE) spilled onto the parking lot behind the cleaner's on Route 3A.

Fasanella explained that the PCE was being delivered from a tank truck and being pumped into a container in the cleaner by a hose, similar to the way home heating oil is delivered.

During the delivery, a hose from the delivery truck split open and PCE was inadvertently spilled onto the parking lot.

The truck was owned by the John Denais Co, of Manchester, NH, a chemical supply company, and the driver was a Denais employee.

Fasanella said the Denais firm has accepted responsibility for the spill.

"It was a sudden, accidental release and it (PCE) got on the pavement," the attorney stated.

The driver of the vehicle apparently got some PCE in his eyes which caused a delay in reporting the incident, according to Fasanella. "They didn't realize the magnitude of the spill."

According to a file in the conservation commission office, the spill took place Sept. 30, 1992, but was not reported to the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) until Oct. 5, 1992. This is a violation of the state's two-hour reporting requirement in PCE spill cases.

DEP found the Denais Company responsible for the spill and liable for cleanup costs.

Fasanella declined to discuss cleanup costs, which he called "substantial," but did confirm that Denais and its insurance company are picking up the bill.

"They (Denais) did not respond quickly enough," and therefore the chemical was able to slide from the parking lot and into the ground water, according to Fasanella.

He said that traditional environmental technology was used to cleanup the four gallons of PCE. Soil was removed and brought to an incinerator, while a plastic liner was placed in the soil to prevent the substance from filtering further into the ground.

The lawyer said PCE contaminated soil is not allowed in landfills because the substance breaks down very slowly.

Some other hazardous materials, such as petroleum, is permitted in landfills because it disintegrates into other substances relatively quickly.

"They (PCE) are tough spills to clean up," Fasanella said. The PCE remaining in the soil at the site has been resistant to traditional technology.

The alternative treatment will require the removal of the plastic liner and the stimulation of bacteria already present in the site. It is hoped that the bacteria will become more active and devour the PCE faster than would happen otherwise.

Fasanella stressed that no new bacteria will be introduced to the location.

"Only bacteria found on the site will be used. Nothing

Greenbush meeting slated for April 11

The MBTA has announced the release of the Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Statement/ Report for Transportation Improvements in the Greenbush Line Corridor. The document is being printed and will be available at the State Transportation Library in Boston and at public libraries in Greenbush corridor towns by March 22.

Five public information meetings have been scheduled. They will begin with an open house from 6:30 to 8 p.m., when attendees may view project documents and displays and speak informally with the project staff. A question-and-answer session will follow from 8 to 9 p.m. The locations and dates of the remaining public meetings are: Braintree Town Hall Auditorium, off Washington St., Thursday, March 30; Hingham Town Hall, 7 East St., Wednesday, April 5; Weymouth Town Hall, 75 Middle St., Thursday, April 6; Cohasset High School Cafeteria, Pond St., Tuesday, April 11.

Three public hearings have also been scheduled at which comments and testimony will be taken. A formal transcript will be made of the proceedings. The MBTA will not answer questions about the project or respond to comments at the public hearings because the public information meetings were designed for this purpose. Public hearings are scheduled as follows:

State Transportation Building, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, Wednesday, April 12, 1 p.m.; Scituate High School Auditorium, 606 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Rt. 3A at First Parish Road), Wednesday, April 12, 7 p.m.; Hingham High School Auditorium, 41 Pleasant St., Thursday, April 20, 7 p.m.

Written comments will be accepted at the public hearings or may be sent to the Federal Transit Administration regional office in Cambridge or to the Massachusetts Secretary of Environmental Affairs in Boston. Comments are due by Monday, May 22, 1995. Anyone with questions about the meetings or hearings, reviewing a copy of the SDEIS/R or about submitting comments may contact Joseph Connor, MBTA Project Manager, at (617) 722-3422.

Cleanup continues. . .

will be imported," he said.

Water and sugar will be inserted into the site to encourage the growth of the bacteria. During the conservation commission meeting, there was some discussion that this might involve pumping out groundwater at the site, injecting it with the nutrients, and then returning it to the ground.

Fasanella said that is one method of handling the procedure, but that further study is required before a treatment method will be selected.

The conservation commission and DEP must approve any clean up treatment, so actual work is unlikely to start before early summer.

In addition, either the conservation agent of a consultant employed by the commission will probably monitor the cleanup activity. Denais was asked to pay $2,000 fee to the town to cover the costs incurred by having a consultant or the conservation agent watch the situation.

The lawyer also explained that PCE is not necessarily dangerous to use or handle. He explained that dry cleaning is not actually dry, that clothing is soaked in chemical mixtures which are more effective than plain soap and water.

PCE is mixed with water. During the drying process, the chemical is removed from the clothes and recycled.

Traces of PCE left in the clothes evaporate rapidly when exposed to air.

William Mitchell, project manager for Clean Soils Environmental, LTD, which is handling the cleanup, declined to discuss the case, requesting that all questions be submitted in writing.

While PCE spills are not common, they do occur. PCE contaminated groundwater forced the closure of two town wells in Marshfield in 1986. Anton's Cleaners on Route 139 has been asked to pay for the cleanup, since the firm has been linked to the pollution.

Please take a look at the picture — who is this baby with the Masai Warriors? Here are a few hints: He is one-year-old March 21, his mother is a CHS grad, class of 1974; and, his grandparents live in Cohasset. Give up?

His mom is Kay Marten, his grandparents are Dr. and Mrs. James Marten of Nichols Rd. Grandmother Shirley was kind enough to share the picture with us, isn't it wonderful?

We congratulate John W. Kinchla this week, we just received word that John made the dean's list for the 1994 fall semester at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Good work, John!

We'll bet that in his free time John followed that great basketball team up there, what fun that must have been!

Julienne R. Guemere, daughter of Kathleen Guemere and granddaughter of Kay Talarico, has been nominated for a John Christopher Hartwick Scholarship (JCHS).

Julienne, a 1992 CHS graduate, is currently a junior at Hartwick College in Oneonta, NY, majoring in music ed. Nomination for this award is in itself a high honor. JCH scholars exemplify for the college community the Hartwick ideal of academic achievement and character. No more than six scholars are selected each year by the scholarship awards committee from among students nominated. In recognition of the achievement implied by the nomination itself, each nominee is named a Faculty Scholar. This honor will be conferred at Hartwick's Honors Day Convocation in the spring, at the time the JCH scholars are announced.

By the way, Juli has been student teaching in the New York area since her freshman year, but next year you will see Juli around CHS where she will be student-teaching in the music department.

South Shore Hospital is proud to announce the appointment of C. William Zadel to the Board of Directors of the South Shore Hospital and Educational Foundation. Mr. Zadel is president of Ciba Corning Diagnostics Corporation. The foundation is the hospital's fundraising arm.

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School is getting ready to celebrate Spring and the upcoming holidays with an April Fools Day Celebration for children. Plan on being at the Community center on Saturday, April 1, from 9 to 11 a.m. for their annual spring "Funraiser."

The kiddos will enjoy springtime and holiday crafts in the lower function room including edible necklaces, waving chicks, crowns of all kinds, bunnies that turn into helicopters and ducks that turn into bunnies. A complete breakfast will be served in the gym. The real treat will be the celebration "topper," the Easter Bunny! He will arrive during the festivities to say hello then will settle in the upper function room for photos with the children. There will be a baked goods table and a raffle table. Admission is $4 for adults and $3 for children which will include breakfast and craft activities. Please make note of the fact that the last serving of breakfast will be at 10:30 a.m.; advance tickets are advisable and are available at the South Shore Community Center. Call 383-0088 or 383-0036 for further information.

Hats off to the PSO fundraising team, their annual Silent Auction was a smashing success! They give credit to Betsey Connolly, Lesley Faber, Andrea Flynn, Susan Magruder, Patty Smith, Irene Volpe and Jan Weisenfeld; they were a huge help.

Through the generous donations of local businesses and individuals, more than $6,700 was raised.

The Easter Bunny is certainly going to be hopping around Cohasset this year! As mentioned above, it will be at the Community Center this Saturday. Next Saturday (April 8) it will be hiding eggs at the Deer Hill School. The egg hunt will be at noon — children should bring an adult and a container to hold the chocolate eggs they will find. The Easter Bunny and helpers will be there, they are arriving in a fire truck! Prizes will be given, too! Sure sounds like fun for all!

A round of applause goes to Nick Welz, CHS' student of the Month! An honor indeed!

Here's a reminder that should make you happy — be sure to "spring ahead" this weekend. Another harbinger of spring, right?

And, please don't forget to call me with your news!

Be positive

We think Cohasseters need to be reminded what a special place this town is.

Just take a drive along Forest Avenue and savor that spectacular ocean vista which pops up at you.

Or walk around the Town Common — chances are someone will be enjoying a leisurely lunch on one of the park benches around the duck pond. Some youngsters may even be throwing a baseball around.

It's unfortunate however, that behind the scenes, Cohasset has not been the lovely, tranquil place that it should be. We think a disturbing trend, which started with the finger pointing during the water crisis last summer, has picked up steam and now spread into other areas of town government.

At town meeting it became clear that the tone of some residents and board members has become quite negative.

We appreciate the long hours that our elected and appointed representatives on the selectmen, board of health, advisory board, school committee and so on, put in to present town meeting with budgets and capital requests. We know for a fact that the midnight oil was burned on many occasions. Sometimes tempers flared a bit and people got testy. It's not an easy job and our representatives sure don't do it for the pay.

So we'll be the first to say, they all deserve our gratitude for their dedication and hard work.

However, this Herculean effort shouldn't be held over us like a cudgel. If citizens want to ask questions about the process or its results, they should be heard without being told if they had bothered come to all the meetings and hearings — they wouldn't have to ask.

The truth is some people come to town meeting to debate and to understand. Many don't have the time to attend weekly meetings and others may feel uncomfortable walking into a board meeting held in cramped quarters.

The blame for this negative trend doesn't sit solely with the boards. We thought when posing questions several of the usual cast of "cut-and-slash" town meeting faces treated their representatives and town employees with contempt and that's a shame.

However, no matter how tired officials are of their questions and at times, accusations — every citizen the right to stand up and be heard and should never feel intimidated from doing so because they're not clued in.

Difficult times aren't over. The town is now in a deficit position and the hard work toward educating voters about what's at stake in the upcoming override election is just beginning.

Now more than ever, it's important that residents work together to educate and be educated on the issues.

Citizens need to feel comfortable asking questions. While we may not always agree with the answers — it's important to remember we're all — board members, firefighters, teachers, ordinary citizens alike — on the same team.

So take a big breath and look around your town. It's time for some positive thinking because Cohasset is a lovely place and it can be a nice one too — from the inside out.

Town meeting is for the citizenry

To the Editor:

An interesting event occurred at the Cohasset Town Meeting Saturday, March 25. Our government, which was founded to be "....of the people, by the people and for the people...." was set back by the politicians, appointed authorities and bureaucrats when citizens who asked questions, offered suggestions, or challenged systems were publicly berated.

Attendance at Town Meeting is not great. We may have 200 citizens who attend. Many are not willing to stand up and speak their mind because of the attitude of our public servants. Citizens who do speak out against the politically favored viewpoint are immediately branded with demeaning name-calling and statements. These are made by elected officials, appointed officials and of all things, bureaucrats.

Saturday Mr. Stephen Hart, superintendent of Cohasset schools, appeared to become very angry at a proposal that I made. He made a very derogatory statement to me in his anger. I forgive him for that because I know that some people, when angered, cannot control what they say. I, for one, am not seeking to anger Mr. Hart. I want to have the best school system that we can have with limited funds. I am looking for creative solutions to our funding problems that will not overburden the taxpayers and will help to solve the educational problems that we have in our schools today. I have lived in this town since 1968. 1 have been lucky to have five wonderful children who have and are attending our Cohasset school system from K through 12.

The United States has fallen behind in education on the world stage and we constantly see our systems failing. We must work together to change those systems. We must offer challenges to the bureaucrats and politicians to make them think. Through my years in Cohasset I have been very involved in the town government, having served on many committees and at one point having run for public office. At work I challenge my managers to be creative and to think and offer opinions and to place ideas on the table for discussion. This is the process that will help this town enter the future; we must hear, discuss and think about new ideas.

The forum that has been given to us, as citizens by law and regulation, is our Open Town Meeting. This meeting has a moderator. This person is elected by the people and is charged with conducting the meeting by a set of rules. This meeting should also be conducted without intimidation and with the encouragement of a free exchange of ideas. This is the people's meeting. Politicians, appointed authorities and bureaucrats should not be allowed to stifle the free exchange of ideas and opinions or a simple question. The moderator must ensure that the citizens are free to express themselves without fear or threat of public chastisement or future punishment.

I would urge everyone, who is able, to participate in your town government by attending town meeting and to offer his/her opinion.

Marks family is grateful

To the Editor:

The family of David R. Marks wishes to express how grateful we all are for the love and support everyone showed us during our time of sorrow. This was a very difficult time for all of use and your thoughts, cards, and prayers were greatly appreciated. It was a great comfort to see all the many friends whose lives he touched.

Greenbush will ease gridlock

To the Editor:

The restoration of commuter rail service on all three of the Old Colony lines, including the Braintree-Greenbush line, is the effective, time-tested means of easing auto gridlock during the commuting hours. Such restoration is also necessary to curb the considerable direct and indirect costs to the public of our ever-growing auto traffic. And the restoration is required to begin to diminish the pollution from engine exhaust, oil and rubber residues, and other automotive contaminations of the environment.

Deadline for nominations to school councils looms

The Education Reform Act mandates that each public school building in a town will have a school council consisting of the school's principal, teachers, parents and a community representative. The school council is charged with formulating a school improvement plan that is submitted to the town's elected school committee.

Responsibility for overseeing the election of parent members to the councils was given to the "locally recognized parent organization," which in Cohasset is the Parent School Organization.

For 1995 there are four openings for parent school council representatives: Osgood — one two-year position; Deer Hill — one two-year position; Jr./Sr. High — two two-year positions.

Notices asking for interested persons to submit their names will be posted in schools, publicized in newspapers and sent home with school communications. Names must be submitted no later than March 31.

Every parent who has a student at a school for the length of the council term is eligible to run. Each candidate will be asked to write a background paragraph which will be included with the voting ballot which will be mailed to parents by April 6, along with an information sheet of the candidates. Write-in votes will be accepted.

Each school will have its own color-coded ballot. Voters must return ballots to the school's office by Thursday, April 13 at 4 p.m., the final day of election week. In the event of a tied election, a run-off will be held.

Parents of 12th-graders will not receive ballots. Parents of registered kindergartners will receive ballots for Osgood and parents of third-graders will receive Deer Hill ballots. Parents of sixth-graders will receive Jr./Sr. High ballots.

For further information about the school councils or the election, call Ruth Wilcox at 383-1827.

candidates corner

Maureen Jerz, school committee

A recent Mariner editorial asked school committee candidates to comment on issues in education pertinent to Cohasset. At a time in which public schools are being asked to be all things to all people, one might find it easier to discuss the issues that are not facing public education today. Recognizing the need to refocus and reprioritize our expectations of public schools, the state legislature, in 1993, passed the Education Reform Act. Implementing the changes outlined in this legislation will certainly be one of the primary issues facing school departments in cities and towns across the state, including Cohasset.

Like many pieces of legislation coming out of the state and federal governments, Education Reform is a mixed bag of "good" and "not so good." On the positive side are the curriculum frameworks, school councils, and the emphasis on increasing the time spent on core subjects. On the negative side, I would have to say that the funding formula is cause for great concern. I would place charter schools somewhere in the middle, with an "A" for concept, and a "D" for funding.

Curriculum frameworks will provide specific content standards at various grade levels. This means that, for example, fourth-graders in Cohasset will have to know and understand the same material that fourth-graders elsewhere in the state know and understand. Cohasset schools will have to, if they do not already, meet these standards.

School councils, implemented in the first year of Ed. Reform, provide an opportunity for just about any interested person to be a part of the local educational decision making process. Having served on the Deer Hill School Council, I feel that the inclusion of a community representative on the council has been invaluable, often providing a fresh perspective and giving voice to a segment of the population that might otherwise go unheard.

In September, the Commission on Time and Learning set forth its recommendations on the length of the school day and year. Some changes in scheduling will take effect next year, with the rest taking effect in 1996-1997. A survey conducted by the present school committee has shown support in Cohasset for this type of change, with over half of the respondents supporting both the concept of a longer school day/school year, and the funding that this would entail.

The question of funding all of these changes is a difficult one. The best that can be said of the current funding formula is that it is simplistic in its complexity. Given Cohasset's fiscal projections for the next few years, I feel that it will be crucial for the school committee to work with the board of selectmen and the advisory committee in an effort to insure that all local services are maintained

MBTA 'skirted' train safety issues

letters

To the Editor:

It has become painfully obvious that most of the people of the South Shore towns have no idea what the issues around the proposed Greenbush rehabilitation project are, and why some of us appear "crazed" to get the information out to them. Neither the MBTA, nor many of the political powers-that-be want the public to fully understand what is going on, because the outcry would be deafening!

Since August of 1994 when I first became involved, the number one issue for me has been that of safety. It absolutely frustrates and angers me to think about what will inevitably happen here and all along the track if this high-speed double-decker (taller than the second floor windows at the South Shore Art Center) is allowed to careen through our villages. We all have to be able to draw an accurate image of this monster in order to allow our feelings to be felt, and our anger to be heard. Consider these easily substantiated facts:

1. In the entire U.S. now, there is only one other rail line that has as many grade crossings per mile as Greenbush, and that is the Metro Blue Line in L.A. In the three years since opening this new line, there have been 182 train-vehicle and 24 train-pedestrian collisions resulting in 16 deaths and numerous injuries. It's a horrendous problem there! Cohasset alone will get 11 grade crossings, four of them in the village itself with virtually no visibility for the engineer or car drivers, kids on bikes, walkers, etc. Can you imagine six Mack trucks driving past the Community Center at 45 mph with horns blasting...basically because they have no chance of stopping for anyone or anything between the duck pond and the library, a quarter of a mile away? Move over to the Strawberry Parfait and the Art Center, and that's exactly where the 700-ton diesel engine will do that very thing... 24 times a day when all of us are out and about!

2. The MBTA wants the only double track section to lie between Sohier St. and Pleasant St. in Cohasset...this is where one train will pull over and wait as another flies by; because this line is a single track line, they have to be able to get out of each others' way during each run. Imagine, for whatever reason, that one of those trains is not accurately on time ... bingo, a two-train collision behind Osgood Elementary School and our village. Does this make you feel warm and fuzzy all over?

3. In Massachusetts now, as stated by Ms. Julie Brown of the MBTA, the average deaths per year by the commuter trains alone (not the T) are eight people...and many times that are injured. Our fair state is in the top seven states in the nation for such casualties, two times the average for the next highest deaths/state. Railroads have the worst safety records of all mass-transit systems, including commercial airways.

4. According to Department of Transportation statistics, nearly 90 percent of all rail deaths in the country occur not in train crashes, but at the spots where railroads and roads intersect. In 1993, 1,149 people died in grade crossing and pedestrian railway accidents. What makes the MBTA think we will have better luck in avoiding these tragedies, when they must realize more grade crossings equals more risks!

5. Now to really toast your marshmallows; the MBTA is proposing in its Environmental Impact Study that we be given a new system of bells, pole mounted horns and lights at each crossing... a system which is not approved, and has never even been studied, nor is it in operation anywhere else! Are we, in effect, the guinea pigs here? We are being asked to choose between safety and intolerable noise if the usual horn system were to be used. The whole EIS is based on this theoretical safety system, thereby skirting safety altogether.

6. Bottom line item...the boat is safe, there are no grade crossings, no need for added police and fire protection (which you pay for), no ear-splitting screams, no disruption of the wonderful way of life we have here...and it will cost the taxpayers less than a third what this train rehabilitation will cost us.

The MBTA has admitted that this train will only remove approximately two percent of commuter traffic...and we can do that with a better boat. Write to Ms. Trudy Coxe, Secretary of Environmental Affairs, 100 Cambridge St., Boston, 02202, and tell her to be responsible to all of us on the South Shore, and vote for a better state-of-the-art ferry system. It's your town, and everyone's safety you will be trying to protect.

Wounded ducks find local refuge

To the Editor:

Many of you have possibly seen an interesting group of ducks swimming in Little Harbor near Cunningham Bridge on Atlantic Ave. There are usually five to nine of these ducks in the group. These are Common Eider ducks most often found only in the ocean. Most of the group is made up of males with beautiful black and white feathers with a greenish coloration at the sides and back of their heads. There are usually two females in the group. Their feathers are a dark brown. One of the females has lived in Little Harbor for more than three years!

How can this be when they are sea ducks and only pass South along our shores during the fall migration?

These are not normal Eider ducks. They are crippled Eider ducks and cannot fly. They would much prefer being out in the ocean with other members of their species getting ready to fly north to the breeding areas in Maine and Canada.

During the fall and early winter these ducks are hunted in the ocean off Cohasset. This is perfectly legal and most people do not mind this activity as long as the ducks are killed and taken away, hopefully to be eaten.

The tragedy of the situation is that there are a few hunters who do not take the trouble to know the limit of range of their guns and take a shot, hoping it will kill the duck. The problem is the shot hits the duck but does not kill it.

These ducks in Little Harbor were hit, probably in their wings, which often means they can still dive successfully for their food. Hunters are supposed to take time if a duck is hit and crippled to chase it and kill it but ...

After being crippled, a duck will seek out a quiet estuary such as Little Harbor where living is easier than in the ocean and go on living for a few months or years — or in the case of one of the females who showed up in Little Harbor in the fall of 1991, quite a few years! What can be done for these ducks? Nothing. We only hope that duck hunters in the future will be a little more considerate of the suffering of their prey and in the way they conduct their sport.

COA activities are listed

The Council on Aging has many trips and programs planned for April.

Shopping trips will take seniors to Braintree Plaza, Hanover Mall, Bay Club in Hingham, Bradlees and the Mill Wharf in Scituate.

The van has a regular schedule for shopping, local doctor's appointments, banking, hairdresser and barbershop visits and trips to the library, as well as church transportation. On Tuesdays and Wednesdays rides are offered in the new 16-B-2 special needs van.

The Tuesday luncheon program will feature Rev. John Gallop and his wife, Helen, on April 4, with a slide presentation about the Scandinavian countries, and Ted Rubin on April 11. He will discuss "Elderhostel Education for Seniors."

A senior computer training program will be held on Thursdays for four weeks, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. The cost is $65.

A Multiple Sclerosis Walk will take place on April 1 at 10 a.m. Participants should meet at Bancroft Hall.

On Wednesday, April 19, at 10 a.m. there will be a panel discussion about financial topics entitled, "Staying at Home."

Jan Stewart from the Protestant Social Service Bureau in Quincy will speak about "Financial Counseling: Accessing Unused Benefits and Home Equity Conversion" on April 25.

Loss of staff is critical concern, firefighters say

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The town will spend about $27,500 this year and more than $100,000 next to pay for training and salaries for personnel to run the Enhanced 9-1-1 telephone system to be on line in May.

Although E-9-1-1 — which automatically shows the caller's address on the control board at the dispatch center, has broad-based town support as a public safety improvement — local firefighters are concerned that cutting the fire department to pay for civilian dispatchers will actually do the opposite.

By reducing the number of firefighters from 24 to 21, the town will save about $95,000 which will offset the cost of hiring dispatchers. The three firefighter positions will be vacant through attrition.

Firefighters distributed a flyer entitled "Public Safety Alert" outside town meeting Saturday warning residents that fewer firefighters mean greater reliance on mutual aid and longer response times.

But town meeting voters followed the selectmen's and advisory board's recommendation and did not support Fire Capt. Robert Silvia's request to amend the fire department budget adding back the money for three firefighters.

(See page 15)

Town Counsel Richard Henderson keeps a watchful eye on town meeting. Saturday, he sat at the selectmen's table on the floor but at Monday's session, at the request of Town Moderator George Marlette, Henderson sat to Marlette's left on stage to be close at hand to advise the moderator.

White in last year's election. Gaumer, who operates his own consulting practice and has lived in town for just over two years, said concern over spiralling legal costs the town is incurring relating to Cohasset Heights Landfill prompted him to run for the seat.

"I am running because the board of health needs responsible management and budgetary planning," Gaumer said.

Davenport, who is a familiar figure at selectmen's meetings, was unflappable Monday when he heard the news about being challenged for the health board seat.

"That's the democratic way," he said.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas predicted the turnout Saturday would be less than 10 percent of the town's 4,846 registered voters.

The polls are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the town hall auditorium.

Seeking re-election Saturday are Merle S. Brown and Michael H. Sullivan for two seats on the board of selectmen; Ross W. Rosano for assessor; Ralph D. Kidder for school committee; Barbara M. Power and June S. Hubbard to the board of library trustees; Thomas C. Cook, board of health; Henry A. Rattenbury, sewer commission; Stephen C. Endris, recreation commission; and Stephen F. Wigmore, housing authority. Sarah R. Pease is seeking election to the library trustees. Last summer Robert E. Kasameyer was appointed to fill the unexpired term until the election of former water commissioner Ronald Goodwin who resigned. Kasameyer is seeking election to a full three-year term as water commissioner.

The study will look at site safety and adequacy, building interior, heating and ventilation, plumbing, electrical systems, lighting, and even adaptability for high technology and communications systems. Schematic plans for additions and renovations to Osgood and for a new school will also be developed with estimated costs of each including the effect of school building assistance aid.

There will also be a number of public presentations on the study.

Last fall a consultant hired by the school committee, reported on census projections and how they will affect Cohasset's school system. He said Osgood, which is suited for about 325 students, is projected to have an enrollment of 427 by the fall of 1996. He said while Deer Hill needs more art, storage, and music space as well as a conference room, that school facility is adequate. Cohasset Jr./Sr. High also has enough space to handle the town's needs for the next 30 years, he said.

Loss of staff is critical concern

"With the cut, the fire department will rely on mutual aid and response times will increase in an area where seconds mean lives," Silvia said.

The cuts reduce the manning at the fire department from five to four per shift. Selectmen said the firefighter who currently works the desk won't be needed when E-9-1-1 comes on line.

With the current set up, the firefighters on the desk can be called off the phones if necessary to respond to an emergency and the phones are switched to the police department. E-9-1-1, which is being paid for and constructed by NYNEX, is setting up a central dispatch station at the police station.

Firefighters are concerned that by not filling three vacancies the town will be left shorthanded. The ambulance was out of town 341 times in 1994. With the cutback in fire department staffing, two firefighters and sometimes one will be left to cover the town when the ambulance is out of town, firefighters said.

Selectmen have said since a firefighter acts a dispatcher under the current system, using civilian dispatch doesn't change staffing. They say the times a firefighter has been called off the desk to respond to an emergency have been minimal.

Silvia said keeping the fire department at full force would add about 11 cents on the tax rate and the town would be "guaranteed to always have three fire fighters on duty when the ambulance is out of town."

Silvia was also concerned that the town is paying for dispatchers who "only run the telephones." He said the town would get more for its money by keeping a full contingent of firefighters who also perform inspections and make ambulance runs.

"I question the wisdom of the removal of three positions in the fire department and using the money to pay for positions that only answer the phones," he said.

Silvia said having only one dispatcher on duty is risky if simultaneous incidents occur.

Selectman Peter Pratt said there is a plan in place to manage calls. Although only one dispatcher will be on duty, the phone center has the capability of being staffed by two should a second serious incident occur, he explained. Police officers will be trained on the system and a police officer will be called in off the road if back up is needed, he said.

Pratt said Cohasset selectmen did not have any luck in trying to get other towns, which opted to go ahead with their individual plans, to form a regionalized dispatch center which could have saved money. Five area towns, including Cohasset, have been studying regionalized fire service for about 2-1/2 years.

Burning season is open

The 1995 Open Burning Season in Cohasset, which began on Jan. 15, will continue through April 30. Permits are issued on a daily basis, between 9:30 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. Residents should call the Fire Department business line (383-0616) on the day they wish to conduct burning.

Residents requesting permits will be required to supply the name of the person supervising the fire, the address where the burning will take place and the type of materials to be burned.

Burning must take place between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on land close to the place where the material to be burned was generated, and must be done at a location more than 75 feet from any building. Burning of leaves grass, hay and stumps is prohibited. A complete set o rules is available at Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm Street

Permits may be suspended at any time by the Fir Department due to environmental conditions or non compliance with the open burning rules. A water hose tools and constant supervision of an active fire ar strongly recommended.

Auditorium to be painted

The town will spend up to $12,000 to repaint th town hall auditorium and replace its window shades. Town meeting voters approved the appropriation on Saturday.

Special ed plan available

The Annual Program Plan for Special Education in the Cohasset public schools is available for public review. The program plan is required of all public schools by the Massachusetts Department of Education.

Anyone interested in reviewing this document may make arrangements for an appointment by calling 383-6104.

Teen Center provides positive place to hang out

By Laura Ricketson Doherty
Mariner correspondent

Residents passing through the town center on weekends can't help but notice a marked change in activity in one venerable old building. What was once home to the town's police force and more recently a gown museum, the Independence Building, as it is popularly known, now houses a Teen Center.

According to board president Peter Collins, the purpose of the center or Cohasset Youth Resources, Inc. as it is formally known, is to "provide a place for kids to be in a safe environment under supervision."

What is especially impressive about Cohasset's center is the number of families that have taken an active role in making a dream become a reality. Keith and Paula Knowles, for instance, who with their daughter, Jennifer, became involved several years ago or "way back when," according to Keith, who served as the organization's first president.

At that time, the Teen Depot, as it was then called, was located directly across from the Community Center whose board of directors made space available on a rent-free basis. It functioned through 1992 and proved a mixed experience for those involved.

"We were new and learning," Knowles continues.

One mistake, according to Knowles, was not recognizing the need to build a continuum for change into the process, without which "you can get old fast when working with teens."

Due to the uncertainty about remaining at Depot Court and other issues, the center closed in December, 1992. Both teens and adults, however, remained committed. They took advantage of what could have been considered a setback. It became an opportunity to "take a deep breath and reevaluate," Knowles says.

A search was conducted for a facility which would both be appropriate to their needs and available. And, in the spring of 1994, they signed a lease with the board of selectmen for the Independence Building.

"It is to their credit that selectmen have been very supportive," Knowles adds, in dealing with a difficult concept and also the uncertainty connected with such a venture.

That spring, the board also began the process of organizing as a charitable corporation. This was necessary in order to solicit grant money.

Both Knowles and Collins emphasize the need for paid staff rather than volunteers in the day-to-day operation of the center. Three young adults in their twenties have been hired part time.

A core group very active on the teen board helps plan ideas and activities. The atmosphere is non-structured and casual with teens able to pop in and out at will.

"We are not a babysitter," Collins underlines. There is a variety of activities to choose from including pool, ping pong, computers or just "shooting the breeze."

Seventh- and eighth-graders have been targeted with the hope that they will continue coming as they get older. Use is open to all and varies anywhere between 15 to 40 teens at a given time.

So far, the cost to refurbish the center has amounted to $20,000 and was raised entirely, Rose Collins states proudly, through local donations. Plumbing supplies, outlets, a suspended ceiling, cabinets and rugs are just some of the items which have been contributed

(See page 17)

League offers scholarship

The Social Service League of Cohasset is offering a $[illegible]00 scholarship to any Cohasset resident continuing their education in the health field.

Any student, regardless of age, currently attending or planning to attend a secondary school or college may apply for this scholarship.

Applications are available through the Cohasset High School guidance office or at the Social Service League office at 16 Highland Ave. (383-0771). The deadline for all applications is April 14.

SSAC offers scholarships

The South Shore Art Center has announced the availability of scholarships for graduating high school seniors continuing in an arts education.

The Fred E. Bergfors Art Scholarship ($1,000), the South Shore Art Center Scholarship ($500) and the Macivor Reddie Award ($200) will be announced at graduation exercises or Senior Awards Night and at the 40th Annual Art Festival on the Common June 16 at 6 p.m. The scholarship will be paid directly to the winner's school toward tuition at the beginning of the second semester.

Portfolios must be submitted to the SSAC on Friday, April 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Interested students may call the center at 383-ARTS for an application form.

Drama workshop at DHS

The Deer Hill School is beginning a Drama Workshop, a special project funded by the PSO. Wheelock College's Story Troupers will kick off this project with a performance for the DHS on Tuesday, April 25. On Thursday, April 27, they will conduct a workshop. Two additional workshops will be held on Thursdays May 4 and 11, with Deer Hill student participants and the parent, teacher and Jr. High and high school volunteers.

Volunteers will continue to run the workshops for students on May 18, 25 and June 1. At this time they will direct the students in scenes from Charlotte's Web. The hope is that this drama club will continue next year, with the help of some of the same, as well as different, volunteers, based on this year's model.

Deer Hill students wishing to attend need to fill out a sign-up sheet that will be sent home with the Deer Hill menu. Students will be chosen by lottery, since Wheelock's limit per workshop is 20 students. A possible total of 60 students may be involved.

Deer Hill phonathon slated

All PSO board members are reminded that a Phonathon will be held on April 6 from 7 to 9 p.m., asking parents of school age children for pledges to support the programs that directly effect Deer Hill's students. These include teacher grants, artist of the month and curriculum enrichment programs.

Parent volunteers are needed to help out in the Deer Hill library to re-input data that Marge Murphy and others have diligently entered for the past three years.

Through an error the information is no longer in the computer. Interested volunteers should call the school with times they are available. An easy and understandable system will be formulated for the data entry project.

Stanton family scholarship

The Stanton family is pleased to announce the awarding of its scholarship to a member of the Class of 1995 who is the child of an employee of the Town of Cohasset. The student should be graduating from any secondary school and pursuing post-graduate studies.

Applications may be picked up in the Cohasset High School guidance office and must be returned to the office by April 7.

Students participate in show

Ten students from Cohasset High School have been selected to represent the school at this year's Scholastic Art Show, sponsored by the Boston Globe. They will join over 2,000 other entrants from across the state who will have their art work displayed in a gallery at the Transportation Building in Park Square, Boston.

Participating CHS students are: Amy Silvia, Mike Dunphy, Kevin O'Donnell, Simone Carlisle and Michael Coates from the high school and Rob Buckley, Kyra Lea Cogill, Janet Hoyler, Whitney Cook and Todd Bestick from the Jr. High. An honorable mention was awarded to Amy Silvia for her still life drawing.

and installed.

Teens worked along with their parents and other adults to clean and paint their center. In addition they have been conducting bake sales — one of which is planned for April 8 during the Recreation Department's annual Easter Egg Hunt. Senior citizens have also been among the center's greatest supporters both with their words of encouragement and their financial donations.

As president, Collins lobbies strongly not only for continuing but also increasing this community support. Cost of operation amounts to $1,200 per month.

"If the support is there," he concludes, " the center will flourish and grow, if not, it will die."

The center schedule is planned by students and is flexible. If there is a dance at the high school, then the center is closed. Current hours are Friday 4 to 10 p.m.; Saturday 1 to 10 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 6 p.m.

Oldest Cohasset house celebrates its tricentennial

oldest was probably the Lincoln House on South Main Street. According to Ripley, the Lincoln House burned the the ground in 1912.

Cohasset's early settlers were the sons of Hingham families who were looking for a piece of land to build a house, pasture their sheep and grow timber for building and heating purposes.

"They were the second and third generation of people," Ripley said. "They were looking for a place to set up housekeeping."

Joshua Bates was clearly one of those. His 1711 tax bill finds him assessed for one house, two acres of farmland, and six of pasture land. Ripley also assumes he was some sort of tradesman because his will bequeaths his shop and tools to his youngest child, Jacob.

Jacob shared the house with his parents before his death. In 1749, Joshua Bates was taxed for only half the value of the house. The tax bill goes on the note that Bates owned a half-acre orchard, half-acre of tillage, six pasture lots, four slaves and two cows. Ripley believes the aforementioned slaves were more likely indentured servants than slaves as we understand the term.

Joshua was also a civic-minded citizen. He served on the town's first school committee and was on the committee that organized and built a new meeting house.

Joshua's oldest son, also named Joshua, continued his father's tradition of civic-mindedness. A bricklayer and constable by trade, Joshua the younger was one of six men to buy the land for the Beechwood Cemetery in 1737.

Zealous Bates, great-grandson and great great-grandson to the the aforementioned Joshua Bateses, lived in the house in the early 19th century. According to Cohasset Genealogies, he ran a grocery store in one section with the assistance of his daughters.

Several of his sons would build houses on South Main Street, one virtually across the street from his father.

Other descendants living in the homestead included Joshua's son Jacob, his grandson Simon and yet another Joshua. The latter day Joshua was a clergyman and also served as president of Middlebury College from 1818 to 1843.

The oldest picture Ripley has of the now-red Cape on South Main Street dates back to about 1860. The photograph shows the house minus the dormers and rear additions subsequent owners built on. In place of the low stone wall, a fence separates the house from the as yet unpaved street.

After passing from generation to generation of Bateses, the house was sold to the Dean family in 1915 or so. They renovated the house soon thereafter.

"The Deans Victorianized the house," Ripley laments. They added casement style windows in a former study, Victorian style dormers and a fireplace along an exterior wall with small windows on either side as well as a back shed.

"The colonialists never put their fireplaces on the outside walls," Ripley comments. "They kept them on the inside, to keep the heat in."

The Deans also adorned the outside of the house, adding a covered entry way, a low stone wall and a patio along the street side of the house. Some things they couldn't change or alter such as the low root cellar laid on fieldstone.

"They used to bury carrots and potatoes in sand down there," Ripley explains. "In the winter they would pull them up and they'd be as good as new."

This picture of Noel Ripley's house at the corner of Summer and South Main Streets was taken in about 1860. The photo shows the house minus the dormers and rear additions. In place of the low stone wall, a fence separates the house from the as yet unpaved street.

When Ripley bought the house, the first thing he and his wife did was rip up and rip out many of the modernizations to uncover the original architecture. The process of restoring the house has been ongoing.

Ripley delights in showing off the old features such as the gunstock beams.

They draw their name from the fact the beams are made of trees turned upside down. The resulting shape is unmistakable.

The walls of the keeping room are filled with hardpan and bricks between the studs. Although some antiquarians like to believe this was done to protect the residents from Indian attacks, Ripley dismisses the idea as romanticized claptrap.

"It was done for insulation, not against Indian attacks," he says matter of factly. "How could an arrow penetrate a wall?"

The keeping room was the main living, dining and cooking area. The adjoining borning room was probably used for the very young or sick children because it, too, could be kept warm in inclement weather. Otherwise children would sleep, dormitory style in the sleeping loft.

In the earliest days the loft was reachable only by ladder. At some point a narrow, steep stairway with a hairpin turn was installed. Typical of the era, a hole was drilled in the newel post for safekeeping the mortgage document. When it was paid off, the mortgage was burned and its ashes inserted.

Ripley's newel post contains the tell-tale ivory button.

The floors in the upper story reveal the thrifty nature of early builders. The wide soft pine planks are tapered and fitted together like a jigsaw puzzle.

"They wasted nothing," Ripley said.

Ripley says tradition has it that every home should have a room with seven doors, one for each day of the week. The master bedroom fills the bill. Its doors span the history of door architecture.

Ripley points out a Queen Anne door with its high raised panels. That period was followed in turn by the era of the Christian Cross Door. That, too, has raised panels between the cross pieces that give it its name.

In the Victorian period, door panels were barely raised above a flat plane and by the 1930s the door is flush.

Ripley gutted the ceiling on the second floor, revealing the beams. Each beam is carefully pegged. Looking closely at the beams, notch marks can be seen.

"The houses were framed on the ground in those days," Ripley explains. "The notches show the order in which they go up."

In keeping with his profession, the house is chock-a-block with clocks of every description. The parlor alone as four grandfather clocks keeping watch over a portrait of a dour-looking Cushing of uncertain first name.

Ripley's next project is removing the covered entry way with its pillars. He finds it incongruous with the period of the house. He fancies it with a different front door flanked by sidelights, in keeping with so many of the other antique Capes.

As he looks up and down the streets of Cohasset he is cheered by the houses that have been lovingly maintained, carefully restored or thoughtfully expanded. He sees other houses that are a jumble of architectural styles and periods.

Ripley has no problem with enlarging old houses. After all, Cohasset's forefathers and mothers routinely converted woodsheds to sleeping places and added on

Road race set to kick off spring in Cohasset

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The Cherry Blossoms are in full bloom in Washington D.C. The faceless Boston Red Sox are set to take the field for better or worse. Michael Jordan has suddenly made the Chicago Bulls a legitimate contender for the NBA title with his dramatic return.

And when starting gun pierces the air at Cohasset Village this Sunday at noon, the 19th annual Cohasset Roadrace-by-the-Sea 10K will mark what has been the traditional beginning of spring for the seaside locals.

As of Wednesday evening, more than 400 runners were officially entered in the Cohasset Rotary Club-sponsored race. And depending on Sunday's weather conditions, race director Roy Fitzsimmons believes the field could swell to a race record of more than 1,000 runners.

"If it's a lousy day we'll have about 100 more post-entries," said Fitzsimmons, who has served as director since the race's inception back in 1977. "If it's a nice day we could have more than 500 runners."

Fitzsimmons originally had the idea of celebrating the country's bicentennial with a bicycle race, but planning the event would have been overwhelming and he quickly abandoned the idea. The road race, he says, has been a staple in the community and is looked forward to runners and non-runners alike.

"When I started this I wanted to see something that would pull different factions of the town together," Fitzsimmons said. "People I never knew are now good friends of mine."

What sets the Cohasset race apart from other 10Ks lies squarely in the fact that those other runs don't have the breathtaking stretch of Jerusalem Road to define their races.

Runners can take their minds off the fatigue during the middle 3.5 miles of the race which twist and wind along the picturesque road. So impressive, in fact, is the rolling stretch above the Atlantic, New England Runner magazine has recognized the race in past years as one of the most beautiful in all of New England.

But don't let the seaside view of the course lull you into believing the race is an easy one. It's not. The route is littered with short hills and long rolling upgrades. The most challenging comes when runners make the turn from Jerusalem Road and face a steep uphill on Forest Ave. The last mile of the race is flat along Highland Ave., right to the finish in front of town hall back in Cohasset Village.

Many of the runners use the race as their final tune-up before the Boston Marathon, which is run two weeks later. In the past, runners have asked Fitzsimmons if he could change the date of the race but he has held firm with the first Sunday in April.

Weymouth's Robert Chasen will be looking for his second consecutive victory after battling the cold win and rain in '94. Chasen should be challenged early by a host of sub-33 minute runners. Bob Hodge, who finished third in the 1979 Boston Marathon, holds the course record at 31:32.

Andy Collins positions himself in front of John Whitehouse during Cohasset High lacrosse practice. The Skippers are looking to get back into the tournament this season after beating Marblehead in postseason play last spring.

Redfield, Adams to lead Cohasset lacrosse

By Terry Kahn
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset High School lacrosse team will aim for its third consecutive state tournament appearance when it opens the 1995 season Wednesday, April 5, against Duxbury at Milliken Field.

Led by senior co-captains Chris Adams and Ben Redfield, Cohasset returns seven starters from a 15-3 squad that upset Marblehead in the tourney's first round, before losing to top-seed Newton North. Attackman Adams, who finished among the top scorers in Massachusetts in 1994, goes into the current campaign with 132 career points, second all-time to Charlie Endris' 162. Adams should surpass Endris, now at Hamilton College and one of three 1994 graduates playing college lacrosse, before season's end. Redfield, who along with Adams was a 1994 Bay State Games all-star, anchors the Skippers' midfield, after registering 33 points in 1994.

Put those hockey skates away and stop pumping those Reebok hoop sneakers because spring has sprung.

I know it's not even April but area high schools and colleges have already started their spring athletic seasons and I cannot wait for the games to begin.

As a service to the thousands of Extra Points readers (Okay, I know a few people who read the column) the following is a guide to spring sports.

The weather

Mother Nature is the wild card element here.

So far, teams have been able to practice outside for a week or so and that is a great help in getting one's timing down.

Or in another words, taking batting practice with tennis balls inside the gym just isn't the same as hitting cowhides off the mound.

If the weather holds up, look for some high powered offensive numbers from South Shore baseball and softball hitters.

But if it gets chilly or heaven forbid, starts to snow, just watch for those no-hitters to start rolling in because no one will want to hack away with a real good pitcher on the mound.

The reason: when you take a vicious swing at a blazing fastball in 35 degrees weather and it hits off the end of the bat, your entire hands goes numb and you start to curse like a sailor.

As for other spring sports (tennis, lacrosse, golf and track) they are also greatly affected by the weather.

Warm weather leads to happy practices. Happy practices lead to happy coaches, happy players and best of all, happy journalists.

Therefore, if you are a sports fan in this area, pray for sun.

Beach fever or senioritis

This usually hits upperclassmen as their days at the old high school hit the single digits.

Instead of hanging around school for practice and games students get visions of Baywatch dancing in their heads as May rolls around.

This could lead to discipline problems.

Sample dialogue

Coach: "Where's Johnny Ace? He's our starting pitcher today and if we don't win we are out of the state tourney."

Other player: "Johnny wasn't in school today, coach. I drove by his house this morning and he was out front waxing his surf board and drinking a Mountain Dew. I don't think he'll be pitching today."

Coach: "Rats."

Motivation is a key in the spring season and a good coach is more valuable than an 85 mile an hour fastball.

The teams with the most discipline and dedication will be there for the long haul. Talent is one thing. But the programs that keep on winning have more than just great players.

Beach fever and senioritis can also play havoc on an athlete's academic eligibility.

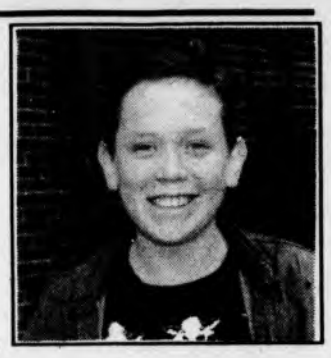
Baseball roundup
with Jim O'Sullivan



Improved baseball team should excite

The train kept a rollin'. Cohasset's sports odyssey, which included the best football season in years and strong soccer seasons for both boys and girls, finished a solid winter with boys' basketball closing out as the Division 3 South Sectional champs. Now the Skippers look ahead to a spring that should showcase talents of the Cohasset athletes.

Cohasset's baseball team, which brings back only four seniors, is a young, talented team with speed and firepower. Coached by Ron Ford, the Skippers face a tough schedule but promise to be a fun, exciting team.

Seniors Jonah Berger, Brendan Kinchla, Jim Magner, and Nick Welz head the squad and bring experience to the team. Berger, who plays catcher, and Welz, a pitcher, both were important pieces to the football team. Magner (pegged by Ford to play everywhere this year) captained the soccer team and helped anchor Cohasset's backcourt over the winter. Kinchla rows for crew, skates for the hockey team, and is a sure thing at shortstop this season.

Juniors Eric Henry, Greg Stevens and Rob van der Pool are all excellent players who Ford will fit into the puzzle. Henry plays soccer and his fellow outfielder, van der Pool, paces the gridiron in the fall. Stevens will help anchor the Skippers' pitching rotation.

Ford's sophomores are all versatile and able to give in whatever area they're needed. Rob Buckley, Grant Emde, and Kevin McKenna are all players with strong arms, who can hit and field with the best of them. Buckley, who plays second base, and McKenna, holding down the first base position, also show their skills for the soccer and hockey teams. Emde plays football and hoop, and should bring his speed and tenacity to Cohasset's outfield this year.

Pitcher Rob Moody and infielder Pat Hurley are the Skippers' freshmen. They should see action in varsity games this year. Moody should give Ford some solid pitching for the next four years and Hurley's glove in the outfield is a bonus to go along with his hitting prowess. Hurley is another soccer player and both he and Moody play basketball.

Greg Taylor is the lone eighth-grader on the team. Taylor brings speed and accuracy to the field, but he's also dangerous with the bat. A versatile athlete, Taylor also stars for the eighth-grade football team.

Ford was optimistic about his team's chances. "We're going to be a much improved team this year. We really finished strong last year. We have a lot of good arms and we should go a long way. But, we're only going to go as far as our pitching staff will take us."

With a nucleus of talented seniors and a cluster of promising underclassmen, the Cohasset Skippers should put a good team on the field this year, and there will be yet another lethal Cohasset team to keep an eye on.

Young softball club looks to future

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The rest of the South Shore League may be playing 16 games this spring, but Cohasset softball coach Mike Gill is preparing his young squad for a 32-game schedule.

With no seniors on the club, the Skippers, 1-15 in '94, the entire varsity squad will be comprised of sophomores and juniors, many of whom will be playing high school softball for the first time.

Gill's major objective is to try to form a team unity among the younger players and look more in terms of the future success of the squad. "We know we won't be losing anyone to graduation so we'll try to come together as a team."

The Skippers are shaping up as a team that will be strong up the middle, defensively, but whether or not that defense will cancel out other weaknesses on the field will be answered once Cohasset is a half dozen or so games into its schedule.

Catcher Amy Theriault, shortstop Kathy Fitzsimmons and center fielder Megan Fahey should provide the Skippers with the strongest defense. Gill believes all three have the talent to be potential league All-Stars. Junior left fielder Tammy Maitland is another returning starter, while Michelle Ward, back from two years of injuries, will be holding down first base.

Liz Mahoney and first-year starter Tafana Fiore will share the pitching duties. When Fiore isn't on the mound she'll be the Skippers' starting second baseman. Emily Henderson, up from the JV squad, will be starting at third.

Offensively, Gill doesn't see Cohasset as a club that will pound its opponents into submission with the bat. There is adequate power, but for the most part he predicts his club will be a "scrappy hitting," crew, punching out more singles than homeruns.

Driscoll elected Laxmen captain

Milton Academy graduate Jamus Driscoll of Cohasset has been elected as captain for the men's lacrosse team at Haverford College. A senior English major, Driscoll will look to help the squad improve on last season's 4-9 record. In a preseason poll, Haverford was ranked among the top 40 in Division 3 for the current 1995 season.

A four-year starter, Driscoll led the team with 51 points, including 14 assists and 37 goals in the 1994 season. Driscoll is leading the way once again in 1995; through six games he already has 17 goals and 12 assists. Jamus also recently broke Haverford's record for career goals with his 152nd career goal against Wooster March 19. Jamus is the son of Terence Driscoll and Gil Coyle of Cohasset.

Sexton gets ski award double

Noble & Greenough School athletic director Maura Sullivan announced that senior Alissa Sexton of Cohasset has been awarded the Independent School Leagues Council All-League Award in skiing for the 1995 season. In addition Alissa was awarded the Bride Trophy for 1995 by Noble & Greenough School for sportsmanship and leadership in skiing.

The Independent School Leagues Council governs athletic competition for 18 independent schools in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, including Milton Academy and Thayer Academy, as well as Noble and Greenough School. Skiing competition was held in a series of slalom and giant slalom races at Nashoba Valley, Blue Hills, and Cannon Mountain. All-League awards are based on results for the entire season.

Summer youth hockey registration

Cohasset summer youth hockey will be holding registrations for the 1995 summer season Saturday, April 1, between 9 a.m. and noon at Deer Hill School. The season will run from June 19-August 26 and consist of 10 games. Cohasset will be submitting one PeeWee team into the league. This is a checking league designed for PeeWee players or Squirts moving up. The team this year will be limited to 14 players and two alternates. Tryouts are scheduled for Sunday, April 30, at 6:50 a.m. at Hobomock Rink in Pembroke. There will be a non-refundable $25 fee due at the time of registration. The cost to each player selected will be $110 and must be paid prior to May 13. For further information call Bob Moody at 383-0385.

Wrestling clinic

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting telephone registrations for grades 6-12, open-mat wrestling clinic, to be held Monday evenings, from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., at the Deer Hill School gym, beginning April 3.

The 10-week wrestling clinic is sponsored by the Cohasset Wrestling Booster's Club and recreation department. Tom Littauer will volunteer his expertise conducting the Monday evening clinics, scheduled to continue each Monday through June 19, except for the two holiday Mondays, April 17 and May 29.

To register for this unique, off-season opportunity, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. The fee for the 10-week, two-hour weekly, program is $24 per participant. Non-Cohasset wrestlers will be accepted upon a space-available basis. All wrestlers must currently be in grades 6-12.

Parents should come into Deer Hill School the first meeting of April 3 in order to complete and sign the registration and permission form.

Say a student-athlete has already been accepted at the college of his or her choice and is simply killing academic time.

All of a sudden that Calculus homework doesn't look like too much fun and the grades start to tumble like the Red Sox in a pennant race.

Next thing you know, that student is ineligible and there goes the shot at Glory Days.

The lacrosse factor

Just as soccer has taken many top athletes from football programs at schools over the last few years in the fall, lacrosse is starting to drain baseball, softball and track talent in the spring.

Without a doubt, lacrosse is the fastest growing high school sport on the South Shore and many young athletes are ditching their baseball gloves and tennis racquets to join in all the fun.

I have nothing against lacrosse but baseball has been berry, berry good to me and I hope programs don't suffer from the talent drain.

However, as I was a late-blooming soccer fan, maybe I will fall in love with lacrosse if I watch another action-packed season.

And maybe Uma Thurman is reading this column and wants to do the twist at Poopsie's one night.

Fax me Uma.

New England Patriots fans beware.

On Thursday, March 30, the Famous Faces Patriot Team will play basketball against the Kingston D.A.R.E. All-Stars.

The game starts at 7 p.m. and will be held at the Silver Lake Junior High in Pembroke.

It should be great fun for all as the $10 price goes towards a great cause.

Autographs and door prizes will be given at the game.

Last year the Patriot hoop team, which played in many charity games on the South Shore, had many talented players including Ben Coates and Vincent Brisby.

This year should be no different.

Who knows, maybe Drew Bledsoe will show up and hoist a few threes.

Congrats are in order for Mariner correspondent and Sacred Heart baseball player Dave Rogers on his selection to attend the Washington Journalism Conference from March 28-April 2, in Washington D.C. Dave is one of just 350 high school journalists across the country attending the conference.

Dave will get a first-hand look at the fields of print, radio and television from experts in the respective areas. More than 25 seminars with 40 speakers are scheduled. Students will be able to work with journalists from CNN, C-SPAN, Fox Broadcasting Company, Reuters, UPI, USA Today, Voice of America and The Washington Post.

Again, congratulations Dave.

Like Dave said above, "Spring has sprung." Unfortunately, it's come time to put away those big baggy sweaters that are so stylish because they hide the tire tubes and bulging buttocks, courtesy of a winter with too much time with the clicker and not enough time, oh, how do you put it...Moving!

I'm as much a culprit of the winter blahs as I am preacher. I learned just how far I had to go before getting back into shape when I "ran" my first race of the season last Sunday — a quaint 3-miler in Newton.

I started far behind the greyhounds, back where the runners' outfits were more suited for racing across the Tundra rather than the winding streets around Newton Corner.

By the time we reached the first hill at the half-mile mark, more than a few of the runners realized the errors of their ways. Jackets were tied around waists and the water station at the 1-1/2 mile mark was besieged with runners choking for a gulp of water to moisten the dry throats, brought on by oxygen debt.

I decided to use my own advice and run a steady pace throughout and not worry about the hundreds of runners in front of me at the halfway point. It's amazing how many of them actually do slow down to a snail's pace because of their overexcitement at the start.

Because I was running the race as a workout, I made up my mind beforehand not to push the final mile to the finish line. A few runners passed me over the last half-mile, but my goal was to get a general assessment of where I am, aerobically, and how far I am from putting my head down and charging toward the finish.

The verdict: 30-45 minutes per day and losing 15-20 pounds should get me there in. But I'm going to do it smart. There's no hurry. After all, it's only spring. Why not enjoy the races and get in a training run at the same time?

Rowing camp

Want to row like the Lifesavers, the Snow Rowers, and the championship crews from all over the South Shore? Signup for spring rowing camp will be held Saturday, April 1, at the Pemberton Point Boathouse, located at the very tip of Hull. The camp will be run by staff of the Hull Lifesaving Museum's Maritime Program, who have been coaching youth open-water rowing programs for 15 years.

Last fall, five youth crews from the South Shore engaged in a season of competitive rowing, representing their towns and schools in races throughout the region. The spring camp is open to novice rowers. Youths will acquire skills week by week, rowing in traditional boats, and eventually will work their way to the Brewster Islands and Boston Light.

The rowing camp will be held Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays through mid-June. Youngsters ages 11-19 will row in crews, learning fundamentals of seamanship, coastal navigation, and open-water rowing while exploring the waters and islands of Boston Harbor and Hingham and Hull Bays. Youths will attend two rowing sessions per week. Please call 925-3155 for cost and other information.

Baseball sign-up

The final sign-up for little league and senior league will be Saturday, April 1, at the Deer Hill School from 9 a.m. to noon.

through graduation," said head coach Ron Ekberg, "but we have a good nucleus returning. And we need it. This is our toughest schedule ever."

Joining Adams at attack are juniors Ken Leahy, Andy Collins and Kevin Smith. Leahy, whose older brother Dave became Cohasset's first Division 1 recruit (as a defenseman at the University of New Hampshire) tallied 31 points in his first varsity season. Collins (seven goals) and Smith (eight goals, two assists) should build on their totals, with Smith slated for midfield action as well.

Juniors Brett MacQuarrie (25 points) and Chris McKenna (20 points) give the Skippers potent offensive depth at midfield, while sophomore Jon Lacks (four goals, two assists) will build on his surprisingly successful freshman season. Other middies expected to see plenty of playing time include juniors Ed Hamilton, Greg Schultz, and Schuyler Doten, and sophomores Bob Stansell, Matt O'Connor and Burke Davis.

Two sophomores who started every varsity game as freshmen — Matt Belson and Doug Cameron — provide the foundation for the defense, which has lost both Leahy and Brandon DeVoe, now playing goal for nationally-ranked Roanoake College. Filling the third defense slot may be either senior letterman Anthony Wigmore, junior returnee John Whitehouse, or sophomore Ryan McWilliams.

Taking over the goal will be sophomore Ely Kahn, whose two-year junior varsity record was 25-3 as a starter. Kahn, who played on a Massachusetts all-star team at a world junior tournament in Manchester, England last summer, had a 1-1 record as a varsity starter in 1994.

1995 Varsity Schedule: April 5, Duxbury; April 8, at Boston College High; April 13, at Wellesley; April 17, at Sandwich; April 19, at Barnstable; April 21, Brookline; April 25, at Bedford; May 1, Norwell; May 5, Wellesley; May 11, at Marshfield; May 12, Falmouth; May 16, Bedford; May 19, Sandwich; May 22, Xaverian; May 25, Beverly.

Weltner to speak on 'ADD'

Boston Globe columnist Linda Weltner and her husband, Jack Weltner, M.D., a child psychiatrist, will share personal observations and lessons learned about ADD in adults on Thursday, April 6, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the Lightkeepers Residence in Cohasset. Weltner will share how she was diagnosed and how she has successfully managed her disorder. Her husband will discuss what it is like to be married to someone with ADD.

Jefferson Prince, M.D., Department of Psychiatry, Massachusetts General Hospital, will give an overview of the disorder, including treatment of adults with ADD.

Admission is $5 and preregistration is required. Seating is limited. For tickets and directions send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with a $5 check made out to Social Service League to SSL, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025. Tickets are also on sale at the Cohasset Consignment Shop, the Children's Shop and the Front Street Book Shop. For further information call Pat Carleton, LICSW, at 383-0771.

Easter Bunny breakfast set

The South Shore Community Center Nursery School will celebrate spring with its annual fundraiser, an April Fool's Day Celebration for children.

Children are invited to have breakfast with the Easter Bunny from 9 to 11 a.m. on April 1 at the SSCC. A complete breakfast of pancakes, fruit salad, donut holes, juice, milk and coffee and tea will be served to children and their parents in the Gym. Children may then participate in various seasonal craft projects.

Photos with the Easter Bunny will be available for $3. A baked goods table will be featured along with a raffle table.

Admission is $4 for adults and $3 for children, which includes breakfast and craft activities. The last serving of breakfast will be at 10:30 a.m. Tickets are available at the SSCC office. For further information call 383-0088 or 383-0036.

Organ concert is planned

As part of its recital series, St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset will present David Garth Worth in an organ recital on Sunday, April 9, at 3 p.m. This Lenten program will include works by Bach, Tunder, Brahms and Jongen.

The carillon will be played before the program and there will be an open tower for those who wish to observe. A free-will offering will be taken, and a reception will follow the program.

The church is located at 16 Highland Ave. in Cohasset and is handicapped accessible. Parking is available in the village lot. For further information call 383-1083.

Harbor Islands benefit

The Harbor Island's League, a non-profit organization dedicated to the restoration and preservation of historical sites on the Boston Harbor Islands, will kick off the spring season with a square dance (and round dancing) on Friday, March 31, from 8:30 to 11 p.m. at the Weymouth Eagles, 1338 Washington St., Rt. 53.

Tickets are $8 per person at the door. A cash bar will be available. Proceeds will go to the Harbor Islands League. For further information call (617) 925-4794.

Dance and fitness at SSCC

The South Shore Community Center dance program, in cooperation with DanceVisions Dance Company, will perform on Saturday, April 1, at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Center gymnasium.

Admission is $1, with children under six free.

A Funky Fitness Workout for adults will be held on Tuesdays at 6:30 p.m. Funky Fitness Workout for high school students will take place on Wednesdays at 5:30 p.m.

Jazz and Ballet is offered for adults on Wednesdays at 6:30 p.m.

All new classes will begin the week of April 4 for a $5 drop-in fee.

Easter egg hunt April 8

The Cohasset Recreation Commission will conduct its annual Easter Egg Hunt for children ages three through 11 years on Saturday, April 8, at noon at the Deer Hill School.

The Hunt is made possible by donations from a number of local civic and business organizations. It is also through the efforts of a number of resident volunteers that this event is offered every year.

The Cohasset Teen Center will hold a Bake Sale in conjunction with the egg hunt.

Children should be accompanied by an adult and bring a container to hold the chocolate eggs.

The Easter Bunny and helpers will arrive at Deer Hill at noon aboard the Cohasset fire truck. Every child will receive candy, and more than 60 prizes will be awarded. The rain date is Saturday, April 15.

Call 383-6791 for further information.

Health board race could repeat in '96

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Steve Gaumer's sticker campaign, launched less than a week before Saturday's election, wasn't enough to boost him into office — but it may have set the stage for a run next year.

And although he lost by only 37 votes, Gaumer said Monday he was not overly concerned about the defacing of four voting booklets which could have caused some confusion.

"It was a whole lot of fun to put a week-long campaign together and come away only 37 votes shy," the Fair Oaks Lane resident said.

"It's probably reasonable to believe that next year could be a pretty good run."

Gaumer challenged incumbent Robert V. Davenport, 135 Sohier Street, to fill the one-year, unexpired term on the board of health.

It was the only contested seat in the election.

The turn out was 18.8 percent of the town's 4,846 registered voters — nearly double what Town Clerk

Greenbush vote on override election slate

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

If past override elections are a gauge then the turnout May 13 will be considerably higher than the 18 percent who voted in the town election this week.

And coupled with two questions on restoration of railroad service to Cohasset — an issue which deeply divides the board of selectmen and many residents — the special election could be a real "vote-getter".

Selectmen decided Monday to place an override question on the ballot asking voters to allow the town to assess an additional $358,000 in real estate and personal property taxes in fiscal year 1996, which starts July 1. Town meeting voters approved a $14.6 million budget last month putting the town in a deficit position without an override. If passed, owner of the typical Cohasset home, which is assessed at $242,000, would see a permanent tax increase of about $108 a year.

Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby's effort to split the override question asking for $180,000 for the schools and $180,000 for the town did not win support from the other selectmen.

If the override fails, Advisory Committee Chairman Nancy A. Roth has said that $180,000 would have to be cut from both the school and town sides of the

Planners check out Shaw's at hearing

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

While many neighbors remain apprehensive about the size and proximity of the Shaw's supermarket proposed for Cushing Plaza, there appears to be a consensus building among officials and residents in support of the $5 million plus project.

At a planning board hearing on the plan last week (which was to have been continued April 5), Al Moore, planning board chairman said, "It's easy to imagine that this is a pristine site. What's there is not necessarily the best situation in the world and we'd like to do the best job we can for the town."

Moore's comments were a reference to the troubled history of Cushing Plaza, at the intersection of Route 3A (Chief Justice Cushing Highway) and Beechwood Street.

The zoning board of appeals in January issued a special permit allowing Shaw's to use 200-feet of the site which lies in the residential zone. The planning

Cohasset's week

Tree trimming to begin

Monday, April 3, the Eastern Utility Company, along with the Cohasset tree and park department, will began a tree-trimming project to remove potentially hazardous trees and branches. They will begin on South Main St. at the Scituate line and continue onto North Main St. to the Hingham line.

All of Beechwood St. and King St. will then be done, because the main lines that power the town are located on these streets. The side streets and private ways will be done last.

Trimming will be done by the Asplundh Company in orange-colored vehicles. Residents will first be asked whether they wish trees on their property to be trimmed or they may call the tree and park department ahead of time at 383-6709.

Brown is new chairman

During their reorganization this week, selectmen elected Merle S. Brown as the new chairman and Peter J. Pratt as vice chairman. The board thanked former chairman Michael H. Sullivan for a successful year.

Grinnell steps down

Selectmen accepted the resignation of Richard Grinnell, 63 Sohier Street, from the Hagerty Property Acquisition Committee. Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown thanked Grinnell for a great job.

In his letter of resignation, Grinnell said his "business and personal life are demanding my full attention."

Selectmen are looking for volunteers to serve on the new sidewalk-study committee, approved at town meeting. Interested citizens should contact the selectmen's office.

Rabid skunk attacks cocker spaniel

By Charlene Vandini
Journal & Mariner staff

With the warmer weather of spring, local wildlife and human populations will once again confront the rabies epizootic that first invaded the area last year.

Last week, Cohasset police Sgt. Robert Jackson reported that Patrolman Richard G. Abbadessa shot a skunk that charged at him from behind bushes at a house on Nichols Road. The skunk tested positive for rabies.

Jackson said Abbadessa had responded to a call from a woman whose cocker spaniel had been attacked by a skunk. He said the dog did not provoke the skunk.

The dog was taken to the Hingham Animal Clinic where stitches were required to close its wounds, Jackson said. With its vaccinations up to date, the dog also received a booster dose of rabies vaccine.

Local animal control officers and public health officials said that at this time of year, raccoons, skunks and other small wildlife become more active and the rabies threat is still with us.

Cohasset animal control officer Bill Quigley said that although these animals do not hibernate they are less active during the winter months.

In addition, the warmer weather encourages more outside activities by humans, which increases the likelihood of contact between humans and potentially rabid wildlife.

During January, he received between two and four calls each week regarding suspected rabid animals. At the end of March, he received eight calls in a week.

"It will get worse," he said, noting the recent change to daylight savings time will encourage more outside activities in the evenings.

He reminds people of the precautions that were recommended last year: garbage and trash should be kept in places inaccessible to raccoons and skunks which forage for food. Garages or sheds with doors that can be securely closed are ideal.

Pets should be fed indoors and should not be allowed outside at night unless on a leash.

He also advises to watch for animals that do not customarily wander around during daylight hours, and any animals that exhibit suspicious behavior.

An infected animal can still transmit rabies, he said, and should not be touched.

Quigley also advises parents to remind their children of the precautions they learned last year.

Dogs and cats must be vaccinated, he added.

Hingham public health nurse Patricia Smith said the bureau of animal health of state department of food and agriculture has made changes in the guidelines for vaccinations of pets and quarantining animals that are exposed to rabies.

The changes went into effect August 11, 1994.

All dogs and cats must receive their initial rabies vaccination by six months of age or, for older animals, within 30 days from the time the pet is acquired, unless there is proof of a previous vaccination.

All dogs and cats must receive a booster dose of vaccine between 9 and 12 months after the first vaccination. From that point on the 3-year vaccination is satisfactory.

Smith said many people believe that their pets are

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

DECISION FOR NEWLYWEDS

QUESTION: I am engaged to be married. We have about $18,000 in the bank between us. Our question is whether to invest our savings in a home or rent an apartment until we are ready to have children?

ANSWER: Apartment rents are climbing as available space lessens. On top of this, the monthly rent checks represent money that is gone forever. On the other hand, house payments are a form of forced savings and actually build an equity for you while allowing you to deduct the interest and property taxes from your income. Also, you can probably look forward to a good profit when you eventually sell. Either way, have a happy honeymoon.

Health board race could repeat in '96

Marion Douglas had predicted.

Election officials discovered by mid-morning Saturday that someone had placed a Gaumer sticker over Davenport's name on a voting booklet, making it possible that some voters may have punched #20 on their ballot thinking they were voting for Gaumer when their votes would have been counted for Davenport.

That voting booth and three others whose booklets were altered using a pencil were closed immediately when the discrepancies were discovered.

Robin Hall, legal council for the elections division at the Secretary of State's office, said since a recount wouldn't make any difference — the only recourse for the sticker candidate, is to go to court and try to persuade a judge that the outcome was affected and that 38 people were potentially misled.

"It's a difficult thing to prove," she said.

Douglas said the booklet tampering did disable four machines. She attributed the incidents to voter error and stressed that any voters who were confused could have asked any of the election officials at the polls for assistance.

Gaumer said he was informed about the problem Saturday. He said although he might feel differently if the margin were 12 votes, he didn't anticipate pursuing the matter.

Selectman Peter Pratt said he called the Norfolk County District Attorney's office to bring the matter to its attention.

"It's no secret that I supported Steve Gaumer," Pratt said. "But I wanted the DA's office informed about what could be an attempt to tamper with the ballot.

"At the very least, there should be the message sent that this is not a school-boy prank — if there's a whisper of evidence that this was done maliciously, the DA can prosecute."

Pratt stressed that he did not believe Davenport had anything to do with it or that anyone conspired to alter the booklets.

Davenport said he heard about the defacement of voter booklets Tuesday at town hall and felt it was unfortunate that some people did not understand the instructions about where to place the sticker.

"Some people get confused doing something they've never done before," he said. "But placing one there (on the booklet) was no place to put one."

Davenport said he was "very pleased" to win. He thanked everyone who did get out to vote "especially the 509 who were not predicted to turn out"

Davenport said it was too early to talk about next year.

"I assume I'll run again but that's a year away and who knows," he said.

Legal issues discussed

On Tuesday, April 11 at 7:30 p.m., the local branch of AAUW will welcome Judge Geraldine Lombardo, who will speak on the topic, "Legal Issues of the Day." The public is welcome to attend.

The meeting will be held in the Hingham High School IMC. For further information call 749-8756.

Gardeners to meet

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday, April 25, at 9:30 a.m. at the Walton Rodgers Hall in St. Stephen's Parish. Coffee served at 9 a.m.

Members will participate in a mini in-club horticultural competition. Please bring plants to be judged at 8 a.m. Share the fun.

Greenbush vote on override election slate

budget.

Payment for the $752,000 public works garage approved at town meeting last month requires a debt-exclusion Prop. 2-1/2 override. No dollar figure will appear in this ballot question. Under Prop. 2-1/2 rules for debt-exclusion overrides, the amount is not included because the figure cannot report the full cost of the principle plus interest charges.

If the ballot question authorizing the town to borrow to pay for the project passes muster with the voters, owners of a $242,000 home will see about a $27 increase in their property taxes the first year assuming a 20-year bond issue. That figure would gradually decline thereafter until the debt is paid off.

Last year's debt exclusion override election for the new town athletic fields drew a 30 percent turn out. In 1992, a majority of the 43 percent of the town's register voters who turned out passed five override ballot questions including one for $377,000 to fund the town's operating budget.

Voters will also decide two Greenbush train ballot questions May 13.

The first asks if the voter favors "restoration of the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Railroad which would provide commuter rail service from the South Shore to Boston along the existing corridor.."

And the second asks if the voter would commute on the train if the service were available.

Peter Pratt was unsuccessful in adding "intermittent freight" to the restoration question.

Selectmen Jane Goedecke and Gjesteby objected to the commuter question because it doesn't include future commuters, such as children who will grow up or people who may move to town.

Goedecke explained that the questions may influence the way selectmen respond to the recently released Environmental Impact Report (EIR) on the Greenbush line. The public has until May 22 to comment on the report which will be sent to the state Secretary of Environmental Affairs for action.

"People have an opportunity to influence our dealing with the EIR," Goedecke said. "The (ballot question) process here must be as non-editorial, neutral as possible.

"The more qualifiers that are put in the muddier the results will be," she said.

Selectmen did not support Beechwood Road resident Julie Hassan's request to add a third question asking if voters would support transportation alternatives such as boats, buses and high-occupancy-vehicle lanes.

In the 1985 referendum on the train, Cohasset voters favored restoration by a vote of 1,192 to 266. In 1991, 1,324 said yes to restoration and 754 voted against it.

Officials agree to meeting

Both sides don't want landfill legal costs to be bottomless pit

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Town officials want to hold down legal costs, but appear divided over how to keep the 13-year battle with the Cohasset Heights landfill from burying them financially.

In an effort to reduce expenses, selectmen plan to solicit bids from law firms interested in representing Cohasset — a move which turned out to be controversial with other town officials during a mammoth meeting on the subject Tuesday night.

DISPUTED WETLANDS BOUNDARY

Selectmen also agreed to a meeting between the chairmen of three town boards — selectmen, conservation and health — and the owners of the landfill, Paul and John Barry.

Paul Barry said he is pleased that officials have agreed to his request for a meeting.

"It's something that I've looked for a number of years," he said Tuesday night after Merle Brown, selectmen chairman, announced that he and Thomas Cook, health board chairman, and Roseanne McMorris, conservation commission chairman, will meet with Barry in an open session at a date which has yet to be decided.

Although Barry declined to state what he wants to discuss, it is likely that he will bring up the boundaries of the watershed protection district which consultants Camp, Dresser & McKee outlined in 1986. (See related story.)

Barry claims that part of his landfill is incorrectly included in the district. If the landfill is in fact determined to be outside the district, it could be more difficult for the town to prevent the facility's expansion. The landfill buries construction debris and the remains of demolished buildings.

In a March 29 letter to selectmen requesting the meeting, Barry said it is now time to settle his lawsuit against Cohasset to force the town to grant permission for his landfill to expand.

Both in the letter and at the recent town meeting, Barry has cited high legal costs on both sides. "This ongoing litigation is costing us each hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said during town meeting.

NEW LAWYERS CONSIDERED

Selectmen are also worried about expenses.

Tuesday night they asked members of the conservation commission, board of health and water commissioners to consider submitting ideas on how the town should word its request for proposals (RFP.) The law firms will be expected to frame their responses in accordance with the specifications laid out in the RFP.

If the town does opt for different legal representation, town counsel Richard Henderson will choose from among those who responded to the RFP.

On March 20 selectmen voted three to two in favor of soliciting proposals from other law firms. Selectmen Peter Pratt, Martha Gjesteby and Jane Goedecke voted in favor, while Merle Brown and Michael Sullivan opposed the measure.

During the meeting Tuesday, which was conducted for some two hours in executive session before being opened to the public at 9:45 p.m., officials seemed confused over how to proceed, and some were irritated that selectmen were even thinking of changing legal counsel.

Michael A. Leon, of the blue chip Boston law firm Warner & Stackpole has served as the town's special counsel handling landfill business.

Town meeting two weeks ago approved $83,000 which include engineering costs and legal expenses to defend against a lawsuit brought by owners of the landfill.

According to unofficial estimates, the town may have spent as much as $450,000 in legal fees since the early 1980's.

Selectmen Pratt and Gjesteby have been concerned about high legal costs, especially considering the town's precarious financial situation.

There have also been questions about how effective Warner & Stackpole has been, considering that the issue of the landfill's expansion has remained unresolved for so long.

During Tuesday's meeting, Pratt said that simple good business practice dictates that the town consider all options before proceeding with an expensive, long-term purchase, which is what the services of a special counsel representing the landfill have become.

Both Pratt and Gjesteby said they did not use the word "excessive" to describe the legal costs, rather they want to get an idea of what other firms might charge before proceeding.

Other officials doubt that the town would be wise to switch horses in the middle of the stream. They also question whether other attorneys would be that much cheaper.

"I have been very pleased with Leon," said selectman Michael Sullivan. "I think he has done a great deal for the town." Sullivan also said it will be tough to quantify the requirements for a legal case.

He also pointed out that legal costs for the sewer plant have been greater. However, unlike the landfill case, the town has reached agreement with the state over sewer improvements and is now looking at three alternatives to correct the situation.

Cook did not like switching lawyers. "It has been ramroded down our throats," he told selectmen sternly.

McMorris, said the conservation commission was never consulted on the subject. "I'm surprised you never asked us about the RFP," she stated.

Selectmen Jane Goedecke said that while she originally opposed the RFP process, she finally voted for it in order to resolve the questions about cost.

"This issue will never go away until we put it to rest," she said. "We spend a lot of time discussing this."

ALLEGATIONS OF POLLUTION

In the meantime, basic issues in the landfill case remain unresolved: a business owner maintains [illegible] has the right to expand, while others charge [illegible] operation endangers public health by polluting groundwater.

Barry wants to expand operations beyond the 20-acres he is now limited to. There are some 48 acres at the site.

As a private business, the landfill pays about $30,000 per year in taxes, including about $2,000 for machinery, listed as personal property, and employs a total of five people.

The original permit was granted in 1978 to James Tyeryar, who sold it to the Barrys in 1982. Paul Barry moved to Cohasset from Newton shortly thereafter.

On the other hand, there are those who maintain that the landfill is polluting groundwater and that at the very least, the operations should be limited to their present scope.

Five members and supporters of SAFE — Stop Any Further Expansion — were on hand Tuesday night to watch the proceedings.

According to Kevin O'Donnell, the landfill has caused polluted water to run onto the adjacent 700-acre Trustees of Reservation property, held as conservation land.

He claimed that tests have indicated that some 6.5 acres of that land are already polluted. He said any landfill expansion would likely exacerbate that situation.

Steve Gaumer, who ran an unsuccessful sticker campaign for the board of health, losing to Robert Davenport by 37 votes, said that he supports SAFE, but is not a member.

"Believe it or not, there are still citizens who gather to see how their money is spent by the town," Gaumer said.

"There are still people who care about protecting clean air and water," added Mary Gainor, who showed up with her husband, Charles.

As the group waited for the selectmen and other board members to come out of executive session, the famous lawsuit, Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce, which Charles Dickens described in his novel, "Bleak House," was mentioned. Outlasting generations of lawyers, the lawsuit had gone on for so long, no one could remember what had started it.

Asked if he thought the current situation reminded him of that case, O'Donnell remarked that Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce ended when the litigants finally exhausted their resources and had no money left to pay for more court battles.

The town and the landfill, by contrast, still have money. "The dump is still open making money," O'Donnell said. "And the town is still collecting taxes."

'Simple' die test could resolve watershed dispute, CHL says

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset Heights Landfill owner Paul Barry, 21 Mohawk Way, tried to extend the olive branch to the town again at the selectmen's meeting Monday night.

He said lawyers are costing him money too.

Cohasset will spend nearly $83,000 in engineering and legal fees for the remainder of this fiscal year, which ends June 30, relating to "minimal defense" of a lawsuit CHL has launched against the town, according to the health board.

The $40,000 budgeted in the health board's legal fund for FY'95, which ends June 30, was used up by Dec. 31 of last year.

Selectmen, the conservation commission, and health board met with special town counsel Michael Leon of the law firm Warner & Stackpole in executive session Tuesday to discuss strategy and assess where the town is going regarding legal issues surrounding Cohasset Heights. They also planned to discuss issuing a request for proposal to check the market for special town counsel and see if the town has the best deal right now (see companion story).

At last month's town meeting when the request for the money to pay the legal fees was raised — Barry offered to step back without lawyers and engineers and "get in a room to see where we're going with this project," he said.

Barry, who stressed that the reason he instituted these lawsuits was to protect his business, followed up his town meeting suggestion in writing to selectmen this week. He requested a meeting between himself, his brother and partner John Barry, and with the chairmen of the board of selectmen and board of health to discuss the lawsuits and the proposed landfill expansion.

Barry says the mapping approach of the town's watershed by the engineering firm Camp, Dresser & McKee (CDM) back in the mid-1980s was "over inclusive." He said a simple, inexpensive test could be performed to determine if the area in question is in fact in the watershed.

Landfills are excluded from water resource protection districts according to a town zoning by-law adopted in 1986, so Barry would be precluded from expanding CHL if the proposed expansion is in the watershed.

According to Barry's attorney Anton Moehrke the town could resolve the watershed delineation issue by conducting a simple "red-die" test to determine where landfill drainage culverts run for less than $1,000.

"Why spend $100,000 to defend a mistake — why not admit an error and move on," he said.

In the course of discovery in the context of the litigation, Moehrke has taken deposition testimony from CDM engineer Robert Weimar, who was in charge

'Simple' die test could resolve watershed dispute, CHL says

By Mary Ford

Cohasset Heights Landfill owner Paul Barry, 21 Mohawk Way, tried to extend the olive branch to the town again at the selectmen's meeting Monday night.

He said lawyers are costing him money too.

Cohasset will spend nearly $83,000 in engineering and legal fees for the remainder of this fiscal year, which ends June 30, relating to "minimal defense" of a lawsuit CHL has launched against the town, according to the health board.

The $40,000 budgeted in the health board's legal fund for FY'95, which ends June 30, was used up by Dec. 31 of last year.

Selectmen, the conservation commission, and health board met with special town counsel Michael Leon of the law firm Warner & Stackpole in executive session Tuesday to discuss strategy and assess where the town is going regarding legal issues surrounding Cohasset Heights. They also planned to discuss issuing a request for proposal to check the market for special town counsel and see if the town has the best deal right now (see companion story).

At last month's town meeting when the request for the money to pay the legal fees was raised — Barry offered to step back without lawyers and engineers and "get in a room to see where we're going with this project," he said.

Barry, who stressed that the reason he instituted these lawsuits was to protect his business, followed up his town meeting suggestion in writing to selectmen this week. He requested a meeting between himself, his brother and partner John Barry, and with the chairmen of the board of selectmen and board of health to discuss the lawsuits and the proposed landfill expansion.

Barry says the mapping approach of the town's watershed by the engineering firm Camp, Dresser & McKee (CDM) back in the mid-1980s was "over inclusive." He said a simple, inexpensive test could be performed to determine if the area in question is in fact in the watershed.

Landfills are excluded from water resource protection districts according to a town zoning by-law adopted in 1986, so Barry would be precluded from expanding CHL if the proposed expansion is in the watershed.

According to Barry's attorney Anton Moehrke the town could resolve the watershed delineation issue by conducting a simple "red-die" test to determine where landfill drainage culverts run for less than $1,000.

"Why spend $100,000 to defend a mistake — why not admit an error and move on," he said.

In the course of discovery in the context of the litigation, Moehrke has taken deposition testimony from CDM engineer Robert Weimar, who was in charge

We applaud David Shumaker this week. Boy, did he receive good news recently!

David was notified by the University of South Carolina that he has been accepted to their doctoral program in child psychology and will begin the five-year program this summer. There were literally hundreds of applicants, and David was one of 12 to be selected! So it's off to Columbia, South Carolina for David and his wife, Tricia — you can believe that his parents, Sue and Jim, are mighty proud, and that they will be making several trips to South Carolina over the next five years!

David is a CHS graduate, class of 1988. He is also a Harvard College graduate.

Peter Ferenz recently ran in the 26-mile Hyannis Marathon and placed third in his 0-19 age group, finishing with a 4:27 time. Peter is currently at Loomis Chaffee School in Windsor, Ct. and is training for the Boston Marathon that will be held later this month. We all hope that you do well, Peter, and that you will let us know your results! Meanwhile, happy training!

Four Cohasset residents have been elected overseers of South Shore Health and Educational Corporation, the parent of South Shore Hospital. Donald Grilli is president of Johnson & Johnson Professional, Inc. of Raynham. He also serves as a member of the board of directors of the Old Colony YMCA and is a past chairman of South Shore Health and Educational Foundation's business division.

Christy Mihos is president of Christy's Markets and serves as a member of the board of directors of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. Michael P. O'Donnell is president/chief executive officer and chairman of the board of Ground Round Corp., and David Replogle directs the general and international publishing division at Houghton Mifflin Co. in Boston.

The overseers of the South Shore Health and Educational Corporation represent the community in electing the hospital's officers and directors and advise on the extent to which community needs are being met. South Shore Hospital is a not-for-profit, tax-exempt regional provider of acute outpatient and home health care. It is the first hospital in Massachusetts to have consecutively earned maximum accreditation with commendation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations. Call South Shore Hospital's "Ask-a-Nurse" at 1-800-325-5454 anytime for a physician referral or with any questions about your health.

WBZ-TV entertainment reporter Joyce Kulhawik, who's again served as chairwoman of the American Cancer Society's' annual "Daffodil Days" program, kicked off the program locally with a visit to South Shore Hospital recently. Curing her visit she toured the hospital's "Look Good, Feel Better" salon, a full-service salon where cancer patients receive professional hair and skin car. Shown with Joyce are (from left) volunteer cosmetologist Olivia Peters of Cohasset's Hernan Salon, and Jabel Gharavi, RN, manager of the hospital's oncology unit.

When last we knew, Cohasset Little League needed umpires! You must be 13 years or older and have played organized baseball. If you are interested, give Bill Baird a call at 383-6997 and he'll be able to fill you in on the details.

Please mark this date on your calendar right now! April 25. The event? On that date Cohasset students and adults will gather at two sites along James Brook (Sanctuary Pond outlet and Smith Place wetland) to remove debris inhibiting the flow of water. Members of the Cohasset Mosquito Control Board are spearheading this clean-up and have contacted the high school with the hope of arranging the people power necessary to remove the debris contributing to this problem.

Conservation Commission members will actively manage the wetland activity to minimize damage resulting from human impact. They are going to invite the Council on Aging to organize its seniors to participate in this clean-up alongside the students. They are also seeking active support from school administrators and members of the school committee to take an active role in this project.

Jack Buckley, a teacher at Cohasset High School, is the person to contact if you would like to be a part of this clean-up — 25 students from the environmental studies and alternative programs have already said they would participate in this day of service. Perhaps if you don't have the time to spare you could give a few dollars toward the effort. Please call Jack at the high school, 383-6100 and let him know how you can help with this grand clean-up!

The Boston Globe is sponsoring this year's Scholastic Art Show, and 10 students from CHS have been selected to represent the school. Todd Bestick, Whitney Cook, Kyra Lea Cogill, Rob Buckley and Janet Hoyler are participating at the Junior High level and Amy Silvia, Kevin O'Donnell, Mike Dunphy, Simone Carlisle and Michael Coates are taking part at the High School level. Their art work will be displayed in a gallery at the Transportation Building in Park Square, Boston. Amy Silvia won an honorable mention for her art — a still life drawing. Congrats!

The Easter Bunny is certainly hopping around Cohasset this year! Saturday (April 8) it will be hiding eggs at the Deer Hill School. The egg hunt will be at noon — children should bring an adult and a container to hold the chocolate eggs they will find. The Easter Bunny and helpers will be there, they are arriving in a fire truck! Prizes will be given, too! Sure sounds like fun for all!

weddings

Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Silvia

Silvia/Souther

Sharon R. Souther, daughter of Peter Souther of Cohasset and Pamela Souther of Scituate, married Harry M. Silvia, son of Mrs. Muriel Silvia of Cohasset and the late Harry Silvia, on March 4 at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset.

Rev. Cutler officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Maid of Honor was Stephanie Creedon of Hingham.

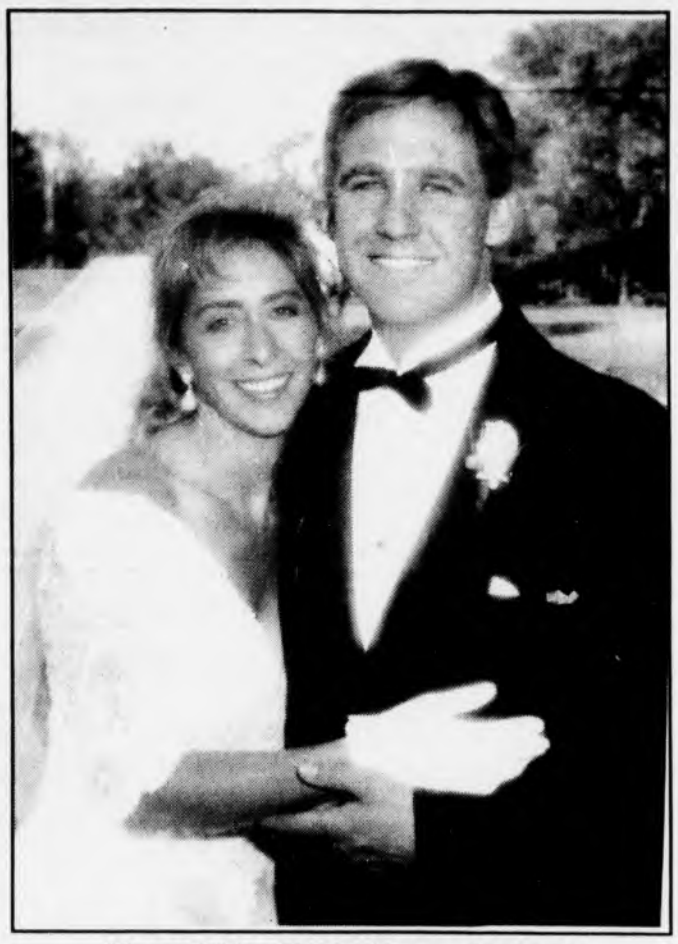
Donald Silvia of Hull, brother of the groom, was Best Man.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Burdett School and is employed as an office manager with Garity Associates in Norwell.

Her husband is also a graduate of Cohasset High School and Laboure College and is a correctional officer in the Norfolk County Sheriff's office.

Following a reception at the Weymouth Elks, the couple took a wedding trip to Aruba.

They are residing in Weymouth.



Mr. and Mrs. Victor E. van der Lugt

Van der Lugt/ DiGiovanni

Justine M. DiGiovanni and Victor E. van der Lugt were married Oct. 16 at the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset. Celebrants were the pastor Rev. Gary Ritts and the pastor of St. Anthony's of Cohasset, Rev. Fr. John J. Keohane.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, is the daughter of Anthony and Nancy DiGiovanni of Lexington. The groom is the son of Hubert and Wilhelmina van der Lugt of Cohasset and the grandson of Mrs. Elizabeth C. van der Lugt who was in attendance from the Netherlands. Mr. and Mrs. van der Lugt hosted an international pre-nuptial dinner party honoring the bridal party at Kimballs by the Sea.

Attending the bride as her matron of honor was her sister Susan DiGiovanni Wright of Reading. Bridesmaids were Robin Shuman of Boston, Sarah Costa of Newton and Judith van der Lugt of Cohasset, sister of the groom. Flower girl was Emilia E. Wright, niece of the bride.

Attending the groom was Timothy Libby of Boston as best man. Groomsmen were Jeffrey Walls of Boston, Joseph Donnolly of Scituate, Eric Libby, nephew of the groom, and A. Richard DiGiovanni, brother of the bride, of Cambridge.

A dinner reception followed at the Scituate Country Club. The bride, a graduate of University of Massachusetts, is a self-employed landscape and floral designer. The groom, a graduate of Bentley College, is the vice-president of Hub Shipping International. Following a wedding trip to St. Marteen they are residing is Cohasset.

Take another look at Greenbush

We can just about guarantee there won't be a reprieve from the Greenbush media circus until the MBTA makes its decision and then, all hell may break loose.

But despite your being bombarded by information about the restoration of the train to Cohasset — there are opportunities over the next several weeks to take a first-hand look at the recently released environmental impact report (EIR) on transportation alternatives and to ask questions about what it means.

The EIR looks at six transportation options including doing nothing; using more boats and buses, and sending us a train at-grade or with a tunnel under Hingham Square.

Next Tuesday (April 11) in the cafeteria at Cohasset High School, the MBTA has scheduled an informational meeting. It begins at 6:30 p.m. with an open house where citizens may view project documents and displays and speak informally with the project staff. A question-and-answer session follows from 8 to 9 p.m.

So whether or not your mind is made up or if you're a fence sitter or undecided — we urge you to attend.

Transportation is a critical economic and quality-of-life issue. We think there's near universal agreement that the South Shore needs answers and not more grid-lock in the court of public opinion or on the roads if our area is to thrive as we embark on a new century.

So go and ask questions. Find out why options like a monorail have been ruled out. Look at the diagrams of the tunnels. Ask about the "slurry wall" construction. Find out why the MBTA thinks Greenbush will attract more riders than other transportation options.

Formal Public hearings at 7 p.m.. Wednesday (April 12) at the Scituate High School auditorium and Thursday (April 20) at the Hingham High School auditorium have also been scheduled at which comments and testimony will be taken and a formal transcript will be made of the proceedings which will be sent to the state Secretary of Environmental Affairs in Boston.

So please mark April 11, 12 and 20 in your diary. We hope to see some new faces at these events.

Automobile acrobatics are illogical

To the Editor:

Anthropologists, psychologists and physicians specializing in ailments of knee, hip and ankle joints should ponder on the peculiar way by which people enter automobiles.

The logical, painless, easy way (and more modest for women wearing skirts) is to face away from the vehicle, sit the butt in on the seat, then swivel on the butt to bring the feet in.

But no: most people place one foot in, then swing the butt in, while supporting the body between that foot and the other foot that's still on the ground. Think about the tremendous twisting and compression stress on the hip, knee and ankle joints! Finally, they drag in the other foot.

letters

There must be hundreds of thousands of damaged joints resulting from such awkward and illogical acrobatics.

Do we have some genetic peculiarity that compels us to start every journey by putting one foot forward, rather than beginning by backing up (into the vehicle)? Even those who recognize how ridiculous and harmful the conventional mode of entry is, find it difficult to overcome instinct and break the habit.

Safety issues of Greenbush rail service

To the Editor:

Despite their disclaimers to the contrary, a number of alarmist misstatements of fact continue to be made by some opponents of the restoration of commuter rail service to Greenbush. The self-interest of some of the abutters to the Greenbush Line is certainly understandable, but their interest should not lead to dissemination of misinformation. From my firsthand involvement with railroad operations and their safety for the past forty years on five continents, I wish to correct certain statements made in letters to the Mariner. My practical field experience especially includes Southern California, where I was once a locomotive engineer, including running over the four main tracks of what is today the 22-mile route of the Metro Blue Line having some 100 grade crossings.

My decades of research and participation in programs for grade-crossing safety include all of the attendant issues and their standard measures such as critical-stopping, approach, hazard, and collision zones for highway vehicles; circumstances of vehicle-train conflicts; and sight triangle calculations. Interestingly, these time-tested calculable data are not used after gated crossings are installed because the gates present a physical barrier, among other indications, to an approaching vehicle. In short, the safe, but costly, answer to any problem uncovered by the standard measures is to install gates at the crossing in question. Gates, of course will be installed at all grade crossings on the Greenbush Line.

In the March 30 Mariner, ergonomic disinformation [in a letter to the editor] was again presented in the form of aggregated disparate data concerning grade-crossing accidents. One cannot validly compare apples and oranges my freshman students learn as they develop their skills in critical thinking. If the Greenbush Line will have only gated crossings, then logically, only homologous data (for such crossings) can apply in discussion of potential accidents at these kinds of sites. Throughout the U.S. during 1993, 170,622 public at-grade crossings existed of which 4 % had no warning signals, 59 % had passive warning signals only (static crossbucks and/or other shape- and letter-coded signs), and 35 % had active warning signals (lights and bells, about half with gates). Only 28,139 crossings, or 16%, are gated. In addition to their reflectorized gates, bells, and flashing red lights, such crossings have at least two passive signals: white street pavement markings and yellow, circular, post-mounted advance warning signs. When citizens request it, this advance sign can be made active with a flashing yellow light coordinated with the crossing gates and their red stop lights.

On the Greenbush Line, each crossing will be far less dangerous than the intersection of South Main Street and Forest Avenue has proven to be, during my twenty years residence near this site. The average U.S. crossing, of all kinds, averages one fatality in about 300 years. As a standard textbook on the subject

School council elections

Parents who have not received a School Council Election ballot by April 6 should contact Ruth Wilcox at 383-1827. Ballots for each school's election were mailed directly to parents.

Ballots must be returned to the specific school office by Thursday, April 13 at 4 p.m. There is a box in each school's office to receive ballots. Candidates will be contacted with results as soon as the ballots are counted and verified.

Results will be announced at the PSO general meeting on April 27 at 7:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

TV raffled okay'ed

Although they're concerned this may set a precedent, selectmen agreed to hold the Harborfest raffle drawing in front of the cable-TV camera during their June 12 meeting.

Saying he didn't see selectmen "as a vehicle to conduct raffles" while at the same time acknowledging that Harborfest is "fabulous for the town", Selectman Michael Sullivan cast the sole dissenting vote.

But Harborfest coordinator Bob Martin, who explained there would be eight drawings, persuaded the rest of the board that because Harborfest is a town event, the raffle drawing would be appropriate.

Legal counsel paid

This week, selectmen approved payment of $4,601 to Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson for professional services rendered the town in March.

Art center gets license

This week, selectmen approved issuing a one-day liquor license to the South Shore Art Center for its 40th Anniversary Gala, April 8.

Safety issues of Greenbush rail service

concludes about this particular and similar data: "These rates simply point to the rarity of this type of accident. . . ." Are, nevertheless, people killed or injured by trains at such gated crossings? Yes, but ordinarily only if they choose to become thus involved, by violating the law and ignoring the gates and their flashing red stop lights. In 1993, when the highway death toll was about 42,585 persons with additional hundreds of thousands injured, of these 114 motorists were killed and 237 injured because they either drove through or "slalomed" around crossing gates. Another 19 were killed and 73 injured for other reasons including not stopping at these gates.

Data are dissembled in the March 30 Mariner [letter] with the out-of-context statement that, in the Los Angles area, the Metro's Blue Line had 182 train-vehicle accidents in three years. Here we find both a comparison of avocados with ostrich eggs and a lack of comprehension of these data. The presentation is incomplete and thus misleading. This Blue Line operates new electric streetcars having close headways both on segregated rights-of-way and with in-street running in the downtown areas of Los Angeles and Long Beach. During research in the region, I saw one of these accidents: at about 5 mph, an auto ran into a standing streetcar. A good number of the accidents, nevertheless, were indeed at the entirely gated grade crossings, in particular areas. In fact, 158 of the streetcar-auto accidents occurred in the initial two years of operation. This constituted a safety problem.

After grade-crossing research, the local South Central and Long Beach practices of motorists choosing to have an accident by illegally making a left turn into the path of a streetcar and, to a lesser extent, "slaloming" around lowered gates were stopped. The often four-track route makes it fairly easy for pivoting an "S" turn around lowered gates, we learned. Our solution was installation of sophisticated video recording equipment at grade crossings. These video devices captured the license plate numbers of autos driven by scofflaws, who were then prosecuted. At the first TV installation, on Compton Blvd., we obtained an immediate 84% reduction of the targeted traffic violations. As they now say regarding this matter in the neighborhoods targeted for the TV recorders: "Smile, you're busted." Are the motorist practices regarding lowered crossing gates in South Central and, say, Cohasset similar? If not, as I have written for 60 semesters on my students essays, what germane point is made with the presentation of these data? Incidentally, four-quadrant gates and channelized street lanes with center-lane curbs will be used additionally to physically prevent scofflaws from electing to drive around gates into the path of a streetcar.

A valid comparison for the proposed Old Colony service, the kind admissible as evidence in a court case, would have been not with Metro, and its considerable urban in-street running, but with Metrolink, the extensive new commuter rail service re-established for Southern California in October 1992. Metrolink totals several hundred miles of lines, has track speeds of up to 90 mph, and provides all public crossings with gates. About a year ago, Metrolink had its first two train-auto fatalities at a gated crossing, and none since then. Attempting to save a few seconds, a motorist slowed and then impatiently drove around and past a car stopped for the beginning-to-flash red gate lights, through the then-lowered crossing gates, and into the path of an approaching commuter train. The passage time over a crossing of a typically short commuter train is less than a minute. This motorist, who elected to crash through the gates, was attempting to save a few seconds of time in his life. Culturally-tailored educational safety programs have helped prevent a similar tragedy. These have been especially conducted in the neighborhoods similar to that of the hapless motorist, where English is not the primary language.

In attempts to alarm further without comprehension of the facts, droll allegations are made about 700-ton locomotives and, once again, double-decker rolling stock. Such a locomotive would collapse structures of the right-of-way and break steel rails. Because of overhead clearance restrictions no passenger car can be double-decker, anywhere in the world. Within the standard clearance profile for rolling stock in the Eastern U.S., a coach may be made bilevel, however, by depressing the lower floor and by decreasing interior height on each of the two resulting levels. Without even the most rudimentary knowledge of the intricate railroad operations more alarm is conjured, for a collision between two opposing commuter trains (but not for overtaking movements?). What specific failure(s) of the redundant, interrelated systems of rail traffic control and on-board train control are hypothesized for this groundless allegation? What do state-of-the-art "fail safe systems," to be used on the Greenbush Line, mean in this regard? How do these systems fail unsafely? What do the governing operating rules require in the conjured situation? It is easy to sound an uninformed simplistic alarm but more difficult to document a genuine problem.

Forcing a comparison of the safety records of all the nation's railroads—including 250,000 miles of track, frequently without gated crossings, on the freight railroads—with those providing only commuter rail service is also deceptive. The freight lines add considerable crossing and trespasser accident data to the consequently aggregated miscalculation of data for discussion of commuter service. Further, on commuter railroads, no hobos, brakemen, or switchmen are injured while mounting and dismounting from or walking near moving freight cars. Germane is the safety record of the commuter rail service provide in Massachusetts by Amtrak on behalf of the MBTA during the last three federal report years: one operator of a motor vehicle was killed at a grade crossing, when he remained in his stalled vehicle while a train approached.

As informed citizens, we must continue to discuss the facts of the forthcoming commuter service on our Greenbush Line. Because we are not candidates for citizenship in a police state, we must always ask questions. Uninformed, illogical, and irresponsible scaremongering, however, has no place in our reflections regarding any issue before our town.

Bring back the railroad

To the Editor:

As long-time property owners on the South Shore, my wife and I strongly support the restoration of rail service to our area. It will:

1. Provide the most convenient means of traveling to Boston,

2. Alleviate the absolutely terrible road traffic into the city,

3. Be much more effective than riding the MBTA, which is completely inconvenient from most South Shore towns, and

4. Enhance the economy of the South Shore and support real estate values.

Do away with detail pay

To the Editor:

Well, the town's Annual Report is finally out. Hope you picked up a copy. Take a look at pages 155-156 and you'll see once again we shelled out a tremendous amount of money for "Off Duty Police Dept." That's "detail pay," and for 1994 it was $87,000!

We pay for it in higher utility rates. The Town of Plymouth is trying to do away with it and we should, too. We don't need it and shouldn't have to pay for it. All utilities can easily provide their own flag people, if needed, at minimal cost.

board later voted three to two to sue the ZBA, but selectmen killed the suit by refusing to pay for it.

The supermarket giant plans to use the section in question for a truck turn around and delivery station behind the supermarket.

Some neighbors continue to be worried about the size of the supermarket, potential future encroachment into the residential zone and probable noise during construction, which would include blowing up part of the site to make it lower.

TAX BILL

Cushing Plaza is now assessed at more than $4.2 million, with an annual tax bill of just under $61,000.

The new supermarket complex will likely be worth considerably more, paying a larger tax bill to the town.

Shaw's public relations spokesman Bernard Rogan said the store would generate 225 full or part-time jobs.

Headquartered in East Bridgewater, Shaw's currently has 88 supermarkets in all New England states but Vermont. A new store is planned to open each month for the next 14 months, according to Rogan.

A wholly owned subsidiary of the British grocery giant, J. Sainsbury's, Shaw's had sales of $1.7 billion for the period from Feb., 1993 to Feb., 1994.

THE PLAN EXPLAINED

During the lengthy hearing last week, Shaw's executives and engineers frequently compared their proposal with the current situation in the plaza, which now has a failed septic system and many vacant stores.

Using an array of colored drawings and charts, Martin Healy, an attorney with the Boston firm Rackeman, Sawyer & Brewster, summed up Shaw's testimony at the end of the evening, stating that Shaw's would mean less noise, fewer traffic problems, better sewage treatment and less environmental impact than what is now there. He also said the Shaw's plan confirmed more closely with Cohasset zoning law than the current shopping center now does.

"In each case the proposal is an improvement over the existing condition," Healy claimed.

SLIGHTLY LARGER SHOPPING CENTER

Specifically, Shaw's proposes to demolish almost all of the existing buildings at the 30-year-old shopping center, keeping only the Bergson's Ice Cream building.

A new building to house a supermarket and several of the plaza's current tenant's would be built toward the rear of the site, toward Beechwood Street.

The current plaza is 9.6 acres, while Shaw's plans a 24.7 acres total site, including areas to remain as wetlands.

Stores presently occupy a total of 73,803 square feet, and Shaw's wants retail space to occupy 75,225 square feet, an increase of about two percent.

According to Healy, Cohasset zoning would allow a total of 102,500 square feet of retail space on a 24.7 acres site.

The supermarket chain proposes 47 percent of the site would remain open space. The current plaza site includes only 18 percent open space, he said, adding that Cohasset law requires 40 percent of the site to be open space.

The supermarket building would include a 46,000-square-foot supermarket, which Shaw's engineer, Larry Wagner of Appledore Engineering called "a tiny supermarket by today's standards."

He said a typical market being built today is normally from 75 to 80,000 square feet large.

On either side of the supermarket would be additional retail space, including 13,500 square feet set aside for Walgreen's Drug Store, and an additional 9,000 square feet for other stores, including the Cohasset Consignment Shop and Buttonwood Books and Toys, which are currently tenants.

Bergson's would remain in its separate building, and another building for BayBank would be built at the far southern end of the site, near Rte. 3A.

Other tenants, including Papa Gino's, Dunkin Donuts, and Radio Shack have been told to move by May 31, while Sea N' Cheese is planning to move to North Scituate.

NEW ENGLAND DESIGN

Architect George Fisher stated that the supermarket will be designed to combine elements of traditional New England architecture with modern supermarket construction.

A multi-gabled roof covered will be covered with gray-green fiberglass shingles intended to resemble slate.

The out-facing section of the gables will be covered in cedar clapboard and painted beige. White trim with mouldings and elaborate dental work will surround the building and the ten-foot high covered arcade running along the front of the supermarket and all the stores.

The three main gables will be illuminated, Fisher said.

Walls will be built of red colonial brick, while green painted aluminum trim will frame the windows.

TRAFFIC CONTROL

There would be only two entrances to the property, one on Route 3A and one on Beechwood Street, down from the eight current openings.

Steven Mitchell, a traffic engineer, explained that the Route 3A entrance/exit would be located further away from the traffic lights than the current exits, making it safer.

In addition, cars could only turn right and head south, on Route 3A when they leave the parking lot.

Delivery trucks could continue to turn left and head north by using a higher ramp, which would be forbidden to cars.

Beechwood Street would be off limits to truck traffic. The ZBA permit restricts deliveries to between 6 a.m. and 10 p.m. Healy said Shaw's usually accepts deliveries from 6 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The Stop & Shop, further north on Route 3A, is restricted by the town from receiving deliveries between 11 p.m. and 6 a.m.

Traffic heading north from Scituate is now often held up before the lights by vehicles waiting to turn left into the plaza. Mitchell called for widening Route 3A to include a left turn lane at the shopping center, so traffic could head north without interruption.

Mitchell claimed that there would not be added traffic on Beechwood Street, which is residential except for the area at the plaza.

Shaw's suggests widening Beechwood Street to include a center lane which would allow cars leaving the plaza to turn left, north, onto Route 3A with a left-turn signal.

He said the possibility of installing lights at the Route 3A exit remains a possibility.

On a scale of A-F, the Route 3A — Beechwood Street intersection currently earns an F, the worst rating, Mitchell stated, pointing out that the Shaw's improvements would make the situation better.

In addition, the new traffic lights could respond to

CHARITABLE FUNDS AVAILABLE

The George E. Curtis Charitable Trust is accepting applications from charitable organizations which provide nursing care, day care, respite care or home care for low income adults who are handicapped, disabled or infirm. To be eligible for the grant award the charitable organization must be exempt from taxation and must be able to use the funds in Plymouth County and contiguous towns. Priority will be given to those programs which offer direct aid to eligible individuals in their homes by maintaining such individuals in his or her home so as to improve the quality of home life.

Funds are also available to assist in the design, construction and equipment of facilities for use by low income adults who are handicapped, disabled or infirm so as to improve the quality of their living arrangements. Individuals are not eligible for funding. The deadline for submitting a completed application is June 19, 1995.

sensors on emergency vehicles, so that when a fire truck approached the light, the sensors on the truck would automatically turn the light green so the vehicle could proceed. Mitchell said the system is now widely used throughout the United States.

PARKING SCHEME

Shaw's wants the planning board to waive 1/3 of the parking requirement, stating that the additional spaces will not be necessary, Mitchell said.

The shopping center would need 644 spaces under Cohasset regulations. The engineer said Shaw's only wants 440 spaces, with room for another 204 spaces available if necessary. There are now about 363 parking places in the plaza.

He said that studies show there need to be five parking spaces for every 1,000 feet of retail space. Shaw's plan calls for 5.8 spaces for every 1,000 feet, Mitchell said.

Additional spaces would be put in the front of the site, reducing the proposed 50-foot green space buffer and in the area behind Bergson's.

Mitchell called the current parking lot "a free for all," with cars able to head in all possible directions once they enter the lot.

The plan would require traffic to be directed into lanes, divided by green space. Most of the parking would be in lanes running perpendicular to the store.

Lights in shoe box style fixtures and located on 20-foot poles would illuminate the parking lot.

The ZBA permit forbids delivery trucks from using Beechwood Street and restricts deliveries to daytime hours. It also restrict cars from turning left onto Route 3A when they leave via that exit.

NEW SEWAGE SYSTEM

Shaw's officials seemed pleased with the plans for a new sewage system. They reminded the audience that the board of health has taken civil action against the various owners of the shopping center for several years to get the situation corrected.

The board of health has unanimously approved the proposed sewage system, Healy stated.

By building up the soil in the front of the site, under the parking lot, a new sewage system can be installed, Healy said.

In addition, water running off from the parking lot would not go under Route 3A in a pipe, as it does now.

Rather, a pond will be built toward the Scituate or southerly side of the site. The pond would allow sediments to filter out.

Another pond would offer further filtering before water emptied into Bound Brook.

NOISE REDUCTION ATTEMPTS

Noise consultant Peter Guldberg said the size of the adequately protected by the three year vaccination. However the state bureau of animal health is now requiring the booster within the 9 to 12 month interval.

According to a state memorandum distributed to public health and animal control officials, the quarantine period for a vaccinated pet that is exposed to rabies is reduced from three months to 45 days. The pet must be revaccinated immediately, unless it had received a dose of vaccine within the previous 30 days.

The state continues to recommend that an unvaccinated pet that has direct contact with a rabid animal should be euthanized. If the owner is unwilling to do that, the state requires strict isolation of the animal at a licensed kennel or veterinary hospital for three months. This must be followed by confinement for three months in an escape-proof building or enclosure. During this confinement period, the animal must be leash-walked by an adult, and be checked regularly by a veterinarian.

Quigley said that in Cohasset, he has seen a large increase in the number of cats that have been vaccinated. The town regularly licenses 650 dogs, which must also be vaccinated.

Offer to buy part of Hagerty site mulled at meeting

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Although they found the proposal to turn the Victorian house that used to house Cohasset Colonials showroom into a ship's chandlery appealing — selectmen don't plan to recommend selling any of the Hagerty site or its structures anytime soon.

Beach Street resident Paul Trendowicz, who is president of Cohasset Harbor Marina, at 33-37 Parker Ave — the former Figueiredo landing property— has offered to buy the house and former cutting room for $200,000 from the town.

The town has owned the harborfront property since 1993 when its purchase for $475,000 was approved at town meeting.

Trendowicz proposes subdividing the Hagerty site and drawing the property line tightly around the house and cutting room. The driveway between the house and abutting residence on Parker Ave would go too, but the town would have an easement over it to access the boat house. He said the cutting room would undergo extensive renovations.

The Hagerty house, which has been vacant for two years, would be used for office space upstairs and retail downstairs, Trendowicz said. The former cutting room would be a boat repair facility for small engine repairs and not body work.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said that by selling the house and cutting room, the town would have no high land left at the site.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said while the proposal was worth considering, the design process initiated by the Hagerty study committee is underway and should move forward.

"It would be nice to have the house back on the tax rate and I like the idea of a retail chandlery," he said.

Selectman Peter Pratt agreed that the process should move forward. He also explained that any sell off of the property must be ratified by town meeting and would have to go to bid.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said while she might consider selling the house, she would never approve selling the cutting room.

Hagerty committee member Paul Pattison said selling part of the property would not be in the best interest of the residents. He said that by selling off the only high land, the town would only be left with an expensive marsh.

The Hagerty committee voted in February to recommend selectmen reject Trendowicz's proposal. The town recently contracted with a professional design firm to come up with a recreational plan for the site.

CHS dedicates new piano

Cohasset schools will have their new Yamaha Baby Grand Piano delivered in time for the Cohasset High School Spring Concert on Wednesday, April 12, at 7:30 p.m. The piano will be dedicated that evening.

According to Ann Whiteley, Project Piano coordinator, community support was excellent.

Bryan Marks, choral music director at CHS, has planned an evening of celebration and surprises on April 12, and the Junior and Senior choruses will perform a composition he wrote for the occasion. The community is invited to attend the concert.

'Sweeney Todd' to open

Hingham Civic Music Theatre will present "Sweeney Todd," directed by Martha Sawyer, on April 21, 22 and 28 at 8 p.m. and on April 30 at 2 p.m. in the Hingham High School auditorium. The play is under the musical direction of Juliet Cunningham.

The cast includes residents of many South Shore communities. Actors and actresses in lead roles are: Bill and Brenda McColgan, Jonathan and Sarah DeLima, Courtney Furno, Scott Kradolfer, Betty McColgan, Stacey Fleming, John Sawyer and Douglas Forbes.

More men are still needed in bass and baritone vocal ranges. Rehearsals are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m. in the Hingham High School auditorium.

Advance sale tickets are $12 for adults and $10 for children 12 and under, although the play is not recommended for this age group. Groups of 15 or more are $10 each. All tickets will be $12 at the door. Call Faye O'Brien at 749-0857 to order tickets.

building itself would screen Beechwood residents from noise in the parking lot facing Route 3A.

He also said Beechwood Road residents would be protected from truck noise because the turn-around area will be below the site line. The trucks would be below a ridge, at the top of which would be erected a noise barrier screened by 95 Austrian pines.

The land will be lowered through blasting, which will be restricted to between 7:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Trash will not be stored in outside bins, as it is presently, rather, it will be packed in closed containers in the store and taken outside by conveyer belt.

Moreover, a steel barrier, more than eight feet high, would screen air conditioning and other equipment on the supermarket's roof in three directions.

One Beechwood Street resident, Thomas Cullinane, was unimpressed with these efforts, stating that noise travels "up and over" obstacles, allowing neighbors to hear truck deliveries, as well as noise on Route 3A.

He also speculated about the possible effect the blasting earth with dynamite would have on nearby houses.

LANDSCAPING

Jamie Calderwood, a landscape architect, told the group that groupings of white pine, red maple and burning bush, which turns red in the fall, would punctuate the front of the parking lot.

Rhododendron would be planted along the noise barrier in the rear, along with the pines.

In response to questioning from a neighbor, Shaw's real estate director, Brian Leahy, admitted that the company has bought the house at the corner of Beechwood Road and Pine Ridge Road, which directly behind the site.

Leahy said the firm was not sure what plans it has for the house, which might be sold or rented out.

In addition, Calderwood explained that 75 arborvitae trees would be planted along Beechwood Street.

Behind Bergson's, a picnic area would be created, with nine tables shaded by honey locust trees. A stairway would ascend a stone wall from the picnic space to the main parking lot. This would be planted with juniper, pine and day lily.

The wetlands will be covered with grasses, shrubbery and trees which attract birds, he said.

NEIGHBORS CONCERNED

A number of neighbors remained leery of the plans.

Chris Wilson of Beechwood Street had several comments, in particular asking about snow removal.

"This is New England, where are you going to put all the snow?" he asked.

Another neighbor, Tom Jerome, complained that last winter, snow from Cushing Plaza was piled at the end of tiny Pine Ridge Lane, in front of his house.

Wagner said snow would be piled up at the rear of the parking lot.

Jerome and several others also asked about the permit the zoning board granted, allowing Shaw's to use 200 feet of the residential zone. Under the law, a business can use only 50 feet of its lot which falls into an adjacent residential zone.

Moore, who was one of two planning board members who did not want to sue the ZBA over the issue, said that "We (planning board) can only enforce the rules. They (ZBA) can change them."

Leahy stressed that the company does not plan to expand further into the residential district.

"We in no way will ever be able to use this area for deliveries," he stated. "We have no right whatsoever of using this area."

TENANTS HOPEFUL

Two Cushing Plaza tenants spoke in favor of Shaw's.

Andrea Merrill, manager of the Cohasset Consignment Shop, explained that the store furnishes 64 percent of the revenue for the Social Service League, a local charity.

Employed in the store since 1972 and manager since 1982, Merrill said the plaza is going downhill.

"I have had five landlords," she said. "It's just going to continue to go downhill. The roof leaks, the shingles are flying. I just hope everything can be resolved smoothly and quickly, so the costs will not be passed onto the tenants."

Betsy Detwiler, owner of Buttonwood Books and Toys agreed.

"This is a very difficult situation for tenants," she stated. "It's been like the sword of Damocles hanging over our heads. People have though we've been out of business."

Shaw's bought the plaza at the end of 1993, after the shopping center had been taken over by the Old Stone Bank of Providence, which took over the mortgage when the previous owner defaulted.

The Old Stone Bank itself failed and its assets were taken over by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC.)

Also during the hearing, Moore read a number of letters from Cohasset residents in support of the Shaw's proposal, pleading with the town to improve the current situation. Several Beechwood Street residents grumbled that none of those letters appeared to come from the immediate neighborhood, saying that it is easy for those living on Jerusalem Road, for example, to be in favor of Shaw's, since the project will not affect them.

Test could resolve watershed dispute of mapping the Sohier Street well field in 1985/86.

The deposition testimony substantiates that CDM, which was the low bidder for the project and had a limited budget, relied on the town to supply certain information and did not do the field checking normally required, Moehrke said.

CHL has performed "red die" tests which prove the landfill culvert drains into Great Swamp and not into the Sohier Street well field on the Rte. 3A side of the landfill.

"If what we say is correct, then we're not in the watershed," he said. "The town can do the test and show us where we're wrong."

Moehrke also said the mistake is compounded because Barry has had to go to court to try and rectify the error — an expensive process.

"There is no mechanism in the by-law for the aggrieved landowner to resolve the mistake in a simple way," he said.

Collect points for software

The Bank of Boston on 3A, adjacent to the Tedeschi Plaza, is giving out "points" for various transactions conducted at the bank by Cohasset residents. These points can be applied toward the purchase of computer software for the Cohasset Public Schools.

There is no obligation. A short form bonus certificate may be filled out by customers that will earn 100 points for the Cohasset school of their choice. The deadline is May 31. Residents may drop off their points at one of the schools in town.

Osgood School earned a color printer (7,000 points). Their new goal is Apple Quick-Take Camera, which is 10,000 points. 4,000 more points are still needed.

The Deer Hill School has already earned a Camcorder (7,000 points). Their new goal is a CD Rom for 5,000 points. They have 350 points collected toward that goal.

The Jr./Sr. High have earned an Apple Quick-Take Camera and are working toward other software goals.

DHS library needs help

Parents are needed to volunteer in the Deer Hill School library to re-input data that was lost through a computer malfunction. Volunteers should call the school with times they are available. An easy, understandable system for entering the data will be devised. The lost information represents three years' of work by Marge Murphy and others.

Deer Hill phonathon slated

All PSO board members are reminded that a Phonathon will be held on April 6 from 7 to 9 p.m., asking parents of school age children for pledges to support the programs that directly effect Deer Hill's students. These include teacher grants, artist of the month and curriculum enrichment programs.

Parent volunteers are needed to help out in the Deer Hill library to re-input data that Marge Murphy and others have diligently entered for the past three years.

Through an error the information is no longer in the computer. Interested volunteers should call the school with times they are available. An easy and understandable system will be formulated for the data entry project.

Parenting workshops

The elementary school adjustment counselors are offering two Wednesday evening parenting workshops to parents of elementary-age students (K-6).

The workshops will be held on April 12 and 26 in the Watermelon Room at St. Stephen's Church from 7 to 9 p.m.

The April 12 session will address "Looking at Your Parenting Style" and "Engaging Cooperation." The April 26 workshop will involve a discussion about "Self-Esteem . . . What Can A Parent Do?" and "Teaching Responsibility and Respect to Children."

The workshops are open to any Cohasset parent and will be led by Ed Leonard and Frank Fitzgerald, who have extensive experience consulting with parents.

To register call 383-6115 or 383-6117.

The recent PSO-sponsored workshop on "Values," presented by Frank Fitzgerald and Ed Leonard, will be aired on local cable television channel 3 at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 13 and Thursday, April 20.

SSAC offers scholarships

The South Shore Art Center has announced the availability of scholarships for graduating high school seniors continuing in an arts education.

The Fred E. Bergfors Art Scholarship ($1,000), the South Shore Art Center Scholarship ($500) and the Macivor Reddie Award ($200) will be announced at graduation exercises or Senior Awards Night and at the 40th Annual Art Festival on the Common June 16 at 6 p.m. The scholarship will be paid directly to the winner's school toward tuition at the beginning of the second semester.

Portfolios must be submitted to the SSAC on Friday, April 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Interested students may call the center at 383-ARTS for an application form.

Preschool screening slated

The Massachusetts Special Education Law (Chapter 766) provides for the screening of three- and four-year-old children whose parents feel may have a special need which might interfere with their future educational progress. The screening process includes a parent interview as well as a health, vision, hearing, motor and language screening.

Parents who feel that their child might have such a special need should call: Alicia Shea, Director of Student Services, Cohasset Public Schools, phone 383-6104.

If the child will be entering kindergarten in September, he/she will be undergoing a pre-kindergarten screening, and it will not be necessary for parents to call the Office of Student Services.

League offers scholarship

The Social Service League of Cohasset is offering a $1,500 scholarship to any Cohasset resident continuing their education in the health field.

Any student, regardless of age, currently attending or planning to attend a secondary school or college may apply for this scholarship.

Applications are available through the Cohasset High School guidance office or at the Social Service League office at 16 Highland Ave. (383-0771). The deadline for all applications is April 14.

Local executive honored by Cardinal Cushing school

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

The Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center will honor T.J. Maxx President Peter Maich, B.J's Wholesale Club president Jack Nugent, and Marshalls president Jerome J. Rossi for their corporate support of the school at its 28th annual Springtime Benefit.

Maich, a Cohasset resident, has been president of T.J. Maxx since last October and said that his company is pleased to support the Cardinal Cushing School.

The $300 per plate, black tie gala is expected to raise more than $1 million for the non-profit special needs school, said Cardinal Cushing publicist Jane Spitz.

In its 48th year, Cardinal Cushing School started out with a handful of students and a handful of nuns who were pioneers in special education, Spitz said.

Richard Cardinal Cushing proposed opening this residential school in 1947 and asked the Sisters of St. Francis of Assisi to run it, Spitz said.

"They did the teaching, cooking, cleaning, everything," she added.

A school that was ahead of its time and chapter 766 laws for special education, Spitz said the small Hanover based school grew quickly and extensively.

Peter Maich

Today the Cardinal Cushing School and Training Center offers academic study and vocational training for students from age 5-22. A retail center and restaurant for senior citizens offers work experience to students who wait tables, cook, bake, work the register or at the counter serving take out. At the horticultural center students grow and care for flowers and make dried flower arrangements, said Spitz who noted that all of these facilities are open to the public.

Cardinal Cushing houses 150 students who start off in supervised dormitories and as their living skills improve move into campus houses with other students where they do their own food shopping, cooking and laundry with little supervision.

"Our goal is to get them as independent as possible," said Spitz, adding "when they leave many live in group homes, or independently in apartments."

Spitz said that Maich is especially supportive of the school, has visited the campus and has shared information about the Cardinal Cushing school with his business associates.

The Springtime benefit dinner dance will be held in Boston at the Sheraton Hotel on Saturday, April 22, at 6 p.m. Local television news personality John Henning will be emcee and Spitz said she expects some local sports and political figures to be on hand as well. Tickets are available by calling Cardinal Cushing School at (617) 871-6159.

Conservatory recital set

Accomplished pianist and South Shore Conservatory faculty member Mark Goodman will perform his annual faculty recital on Sunday, April 30, at 4 p.m. in South Shore Conservatory's Cox Hall. The music of Bach, Chopin, Messiaen and Schumann will be featured.

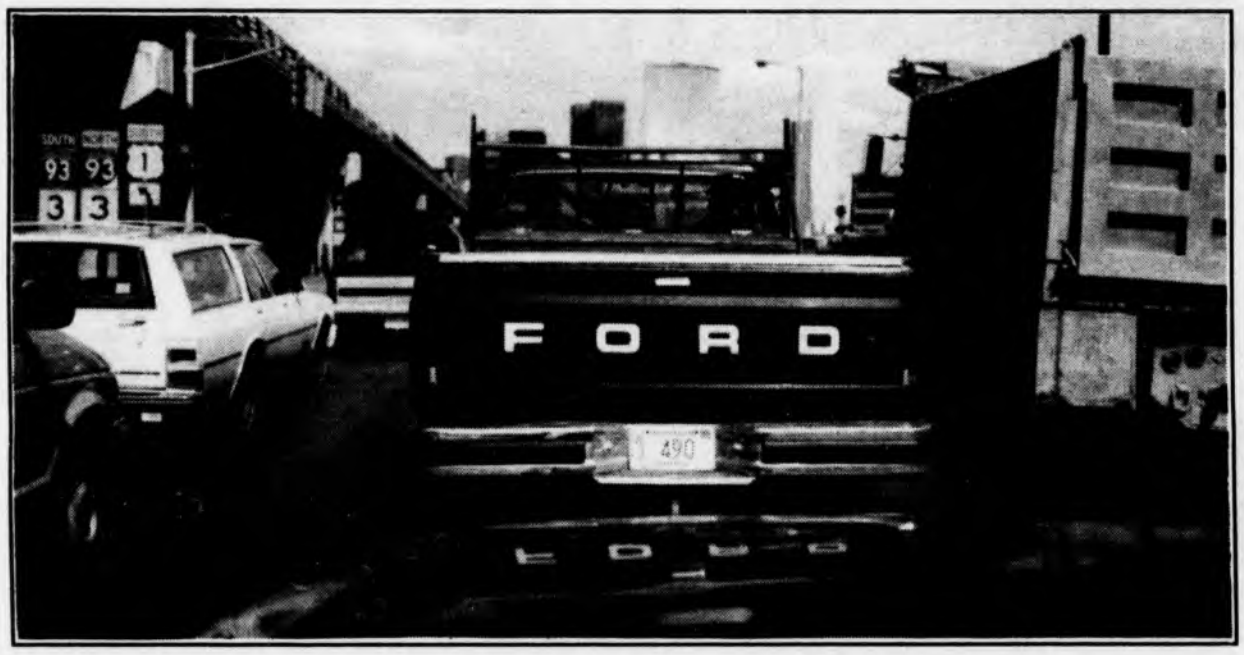
His program will include "L'Alouette Calandrelle" and "La Bouscarle," both pieces of Goodman's ongoing cycle in his performance of the complete "Catalogue d'Oiseaux," a 13-piece set Messiaen composed between 1956 and 1958.

Goodman has been a SSC piano instructor since 1981. He received his master of music degree from New England Conservatory and a bachelor of music degree from Oberlin Conservatory.

Admission to the recital is free and open to the public. For further information call 749-7565.

FED UP?

— bucking increasing traffic on Route 3 and 3A?
— suffering with second-class transportation options?
— wasting hours on the road, away from home and family?
— paying taxes for commuter rail service in other towns and having none of your own?



THEN SPEAK UP!

at the public hearings on Wednesday, April 12:

— 1:00 p.m. in the State Transportation Building, 10 Park Plaza, Boston
— 7:00 p.m. in the Scituate High School Auditorium 606 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A at First Parish Road)

This is your chance to be heard in support of the restoration of commuter rail; Governor Weld, Transportation Secretary Kerasiotes, and MBTA General Manager Haley will pay attention. You don't have to be able to speak like Winston Churchill; just a simple statement will do, explaining why restoration of commuter rail to the Greenbush Line is important to you and your family. If we are successful, you, your children, and your grandchildren will be able to ride to Boston in less than one hour in smooth, quiet, air-conditioned coaches — to work or school, to sporting and cultural events, to museums, to hospitals, and to Logan Airport (with bus connection from South Station through the new Third Harbor Tunnel). Don't let the voices of those who want to deny you this first-class transportation be the only ones heard!

LET'S GET THE SOUTH SHORE BACK ON TRACK!

And if you can't come, please make your position known by writing:

Hills fail to slow Warren's show

Sharon runner bests 875 in 19th annual road race

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

What makes road racing interesting for Sharon's Steve Warren turned out to be the deciding factor in his decisive victory in Sunday's 19th annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea 10K.

"It's tough, but it's a beautiful course," said Warren, a member of the Boston Running Club. "You don't like any course that's pancake flat. Runners look for a few hills."

A field of 875 runners jostled behind the starting line in front of the community center under bright skies with temperatures in the mid 40s. A stiff breeze made it feel that much colder as runners jumped up and down behind the starting line just before tackling the challenging 6.2-mile loop course.

Judging by the numbers, few runners were discouraged by the chilly weather. The field was the second largest in the history of the race. Earlier in the week, race director Roy Fitzsimmons said the event, which is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, could draw more than 1,000 entrants if it looked to be a good running day. Nearly 500 runners registered on race day to bring the field closer to the 900 mark.

The village green and surrounding area was a mass of activity in the hour leading up to the race. Families frolicked on the grass with their children as they waiting to cheer on friends and other family members who were competing. Rollerbladers weaved their way in and out of the runners. The runners themselves jogged and stretched as they tried to stay warm in the final minutes before the gun.

Unlike other years, when a single runner would simply race away from the field at the start. Sunday's event turned into a two-man battle between two well-known South Shore runners.

Warren took the early lead as the runners wound their way past Kimballs By the Sea and along the tree-lined streets of Atlantic Ave. Chasen tucked himself among a large pack of 15 runners that trailed by some 10 yards.

By the time the pair passed the mile mark in a conservative 5:03, it became clear both runners would have to slow drastically if any other runner was to move into contention.

Warren, whose best previous finish was fifth in the '91 race, jostled for position along the winding 3-1/2 mile stretch on Jerusalem Road with last year's winner, Bob Chasen of Weymouth. Warren would take a slight lead on the downhills, but Chasen would catch back up to the wiry runner as the road sloped up. No more than five yards separated the two from Sandy Beach right along Jerusalem Road.

"I usually go faster on the downhills and I expected him to catch up with me on the uphills," Warren said.

The two raced past the three-mile mark in 15:30, but it wasn't until the last of the downhills on Jerusalem Road that Warren began to pull away for good.

When Chasen couldn't close the gap on him, Warren took the hairpin turn onto Forest Ave., and immediately leaned into the sharp uphill and lengthened his lead. He concentrated on pulling away from Chasen, passing five miles in 26:19. Warren kept right on going the final 2-1/2 miles to break the tape in front of Cohasset Town Hall in 32 minutes, 44 seconds.

Chasen, who finished first in the Masters Division, followed in 33:12, in front of Mulloy Muhsrl of Hull (33:28), Brockton's John Saville (33:36) and Bob

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

From the best jumpers and sprinters who finish well ahead of their opponents, all the way down to that first-time miler working on breaking the 8-minute barrier, athletes on the Hanover High track team will be treated as equals.

That was the underlying theme third-year coach Dave Knight couldn't emphasize more at last Wednesday night's preseason meeting with the parents and their sons and daughters on the team.

Knight is truly becoming one of more well-respected coaches around the South Shore League, a league filled to the brim with quality coaches who know what it takes to train high school track teams.

But more importantly, Knight has more than earned the respect of the nearly 100 athletes who make up the Indian squad. Knight also put the talented group of freshmen at ease, as did the rest of the Hanover team. There was a genuine feeling of unity in the Hanover High library and it transcended beyond the team itself to include the parents.

"We just borrow them," Knight said of the athletes. "We hope to return them better. The biggest success is when someone improves his time or throw, not whether or not he qualifies for the states.

"We just want to have fun."

While he did get across the point that the athletes should enjoy the sport, Knight didn't sugarcoat the fact that it is necessary to put in the work if they expect to improve their times, jumps or throws. That's not a knock against the Indians, who are obviously motivated and hungry to better their performances of a year ago. Several Hanover tracksters qualified for the class meet last year and you can bet they broke a lot of sweat more than a few times along the way.

Knight wisely uses the "train don't

Sports memorabilia auction set

Cohasset Youth Baseball Association hosts a Sports Memorabilia Auction this Saturday, April 8, at Deerhill School. Former Boston Bruin great Johnny "Pie" McKenzie will be present from 7 to 7:30 p.m. to sign autographs. Items to be auctioned are autographed Celtic and Bruin shirts, autographed items by Drew Bledsoe, Tom Glavine and others. Other items of interest will be a 1992 autographed Patriots football, autographed hockey sticks, sport pictures, sports cards and various sporting event tickets. This event is for the entire family with many affordable items. All proceeds will go to help defray the costs of Little League and Senior League Baseball.

FINAL SIGNUP FOR SUMMER HOCKEY

Final sign up for peewee summer hockey will be Saturday, April 8, from 9 to 11 a.m. Signups will be at Deerhill School. This league is designed for returning peewee's or squirts who are moving up. A $25 non-refundable registration fee is required. Tryouts will be April 30 at 6:50 a.m. For further information call Bob Moody at 383-0385.

Cohasset spring sports sign-ups

Applications for girls softball for grades 3-8 are now available at the town recreation department. Please fill it out as soon as possible and mail to Susan Carr, 36 Jerusalem Rd., by Friday, April 14. All girls signed up for the program are asked to attend an evaluation clinic to be held Saturday, April 29, at 2 p.m., at the Cohasset High School Fields. A rain date is scheduled for the same time Sunday, April 30.

Little League, Pony League and Senior Babe Ruth applications are now available at the Town Recreation Department. The absolute deadline for sign-ups is Friday, April 14. All Cohasset students, ages 5-18 years old, are eligible to play.

Umpires needed

Cohasset Little League needs umpires. Must be 13 years old or older and have played organized baseball. Prospective umpires must report to Barnes Field, Sunday, April 4, at 3:30 p.m. to sign up and attend a clinic.

strain," philosophy when it comes to coaching. An athlete must do the proper training, but stop short of leaving his race on the track during a workout. Competition is saved for the day of a meet ("The time we really ask them to go is race day") and he believes more in putting in a quality workout rather than giving in to the "more is better" theory many coaches swear by. That method of coaching may garner quick results, but in the long run leaves the athlete so exhausted he or she loses interest in the sport.

The evening was rounded-off with a question and answer period where the parents and athletes were given the chance to make any inquiries they might have had.

Knight obviously knows how to get a season started on the right foot and including the parents as part of the track program is a wise choice in furthering its development.

Cohasset Road Race. . .

Bligh of Roslindale (33:42).

Scituate's Colleen Ellis was an easy winner in the Women's Division. The 42nd-place finisher bested Anne Frame of Chelmsford by 28 seconds (38:32 to 39:00). Joanne Cannon-Hill didn't repeat her second-place run of a year ago, but the first Cohasset finisher's 40:06 put her well ahead of Meg Moisen of Newtonville (40:51) and Kendra Harsford (41:47), the fourth- and fifth-place finishers, respectively.

Like many of the runners, Warren was using Cohasset as a final tune-up and barometer of his conditioning heading into the 99th running of the Boston Marathon on April 17. Warren has had a successful year to date on the roads. He finished 11th in the Boylston 30K and ran well in both the New Bedford and Hyannis half-marathons.

With a personal best of 2:25 in the '91 race and 2:27 two years later, Warren is hoping to dip under the 2:30 mark this year. He figured his winning Cohasset time puts him on pace for a strong race from Hopkinton to Boston.

"I wanted to run 33 minutes so I was happy with my time," Warren said.

He also gave the race high marks for the efficiency in how its run and the course itself. "For scenery in New England, you couldn't ask for a more scenic course," Warren said. "People talk about Falmouth, but this rivals Falmouth any day."

Cannon-Hill, who has finished in the top five on three different occasions, gets a boost from the many spectators who recognize her as a Cohasset resident.

"The fact that I live here brings out a lot of comraderie," said Cannon-Hill. "There's a lot of support, especially along the beach area. People start screaming for you and you get that little lift.

Organ concert is planned

As part of its recital series, St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset will present David Garth Worth in an organ recital on Sunday, April 9, at 3 p.m. This Lenten program will include works by Bach, Tunder, Brahms and Langen.

The carillon will be played before the program and there will be an open tower for those who wish to observe. A free-will offering will be taken, and a reception will follow the program.

The church is located at 16 Highland Ave. in Cohasset and is handicapped accessible. Parking is available in the village lot. For further information call 383-1083.

Celebrate spring with music

Celebrate the arrival of spring at the Cohasset High School spring concert Wednesday, April 12. This year's concert promises to be a very special one. Not only will you be able to enjoy the performances of the talented students in the concert band and the junior and senior choral groups, but you will also celebrate the arrival of a new baby grand piano for the Cohasset schools. The piano, donated through the generosity of many, will be officially presented that evening to Stephen Hart, superintendent of schools.

Marcia Lajoie, instrumental director, reports that the concert band will play an eclectic variety of pieces and that the students are looking forward to being part of this special evening.

The highlight of the concert is sure to be the combined Junior/Senior Chorus' performance of "Celebrate," a new piece composed by Project Piano coordinator Ann Whiteley and dedicated to "The Students of Cohasset." Choral Director Bryan Marks says that his singers are "very excited about participating in a premiere." There will also be a piano duet. Brahms' Hungarian Dance #5, by the two accompanists Jean Birman and Ann Whiteley.

The evening will begin with prelude piano music at 7:15 p.m. with the concert itself starting at 7:30 p.m. As always, the concert is free. A reception recognizing all those who contributed to the Project Piano Fund will follow the concert.

Mark your calendars for April 12! Don't miss this night!

Easter egg hunt April 8

The Cohasset Recreation Commission will conduct its annual Easter Egg Hunt for children ages three through 11 years on Saturday, April 8, at noon at the Deer Hill School.

The Hunt is made possible by donations from a number of local civic and business organizations, whose names will be announced at a later date. It is also through the efforts of a number of resident volunteers that this event is offered every year.

The Cohasset Teen Center will hold a Bake Sale in conjunction with the egg hunt to raise money toward operating costs at the center.

Children should be accompanied by an adult and bring a container to hold the chocolate eggs they will find during the hunt. Children will be divided into three age groups, and parents may help younger children.

The Easter Bunny and helpers will arrive at Deer Hill at noon aboard the Cohasset fire truck. Every child will receive candy, and more than 60 prizes will be awarded. The rain date is Saturday, April 15.

Call 383-6791 for further information or if in doubt about possible cancelation of the hunt.

'Young at Art' gala

Help the South Shore Art Center celebrate 40 years of art at its Anniversary Gala at the gallery April 8 at 6 p.m. Alicia Spenlinhauer, gala chair, promises a night full of activities. The 1995 New England Juried Exhibition and Featured Artists Exhibit, which opened March 31, will provide the perfect backdrop for an evening of cocktails, elegant dinner and 12-item auction. Attire is creative black tie.

Auction items include paintings by Rosalind Farbush, Rita Kirk and Patricia McCarthy, a formal tea for six children, courtesy of Lois Weltman, your home portrait by Joanne Chittick, artist overalls created by Susan Kilmartin, photograph by Christine Hotarek, monoprint by Mabel Colburn, "the ultimate spa day" from Boston Harbor Hotel, a picnic basket with service for four and the essential plaid blanket from Adrienne Thompson, a Dorothy Palmer print and a personal hair styling and cut in your home by Grace Lantini.

Applauding her volunteer committee members Patsy Dean, Susan Nalband, Annick Nivaud, Charlene Sullivan, Adrienne Thompson and Anne Vanderweil, Spenlinhauer said: "Their continuing dedication to the arts and desire to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the art center will make this evening a definite 'don't miss'!"

Septic options on table

What are your options if you discover your septic system can't meet tough new standards under Title 5?

• Before this month, you might have had no options.

• Now you do. You may be able to install one of a number of the "Alternative Systems" newly approved by the state.

What are these Alternative Systems? How do they work? Under what conditions can they be used? How much do they cost?

Here to answer all our questions about Alternative Systems is the state's leading authority on the subject: Christos Dimisioris, Environmental Engineer, Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection.

Dimisioris has been running the Innovative/Alternative Technologies Program for DEP's Division of Water Pollution Control since 1991. Currently he is in the process of evaluating about 20 technologies that have applied for DEP approval under Title 5.

His illustrated presentation on Alternative Systems will be featured at a public meeting sponsored by The Gulf Association Wednesday, April 19, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., at the newly-restored Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island, Cohasset.

Don't miss this chance to learn new ways of solving old problems!

Attendance is free and open to all.

A limited number of tickets are still available at $75 per person through the South Shore Art Center by calling 617-383-ARTS.

Hot dogs & baked goods!

Are you interested in winning a huge Easter Basket filled with chocolate goodies valued at $100? Such a basket, generously donated to the Teen Center's fundraising effort, will be raffled off at the Recreation Department's Easter Egg Hunt, Saturday, April 8, at Deer Hill School, at noon. At that time, the Cohasset Teen Center will host a Hot Dog and Baked Goods Sale at the Deer Hill festivities. Community members who wish to support the center may do so by contributing baked goods or by patronizing the sale and having lunch up at Deer Hill this Saturday. (Rain date will be April 15). Besides finding Easter eggs, lunch, and baked goods, you might find yourself a lucky winner.

The Teen Center continues to be open every weekend, offering a safe, supervised space for Cohasset teenagers to enjoy activities and each others' company. Center hours are Fridays 3 to 10 p.m., Saturdays 2 to 10 p.m., and Sundays noon to 4 p.m.

Sunday, March 19, the NEW Cohasset Teen Center held its first annual spring open house, welcoming the community into the refurbished former Police Station. Throughout the late morning and early afternoon, friends and neighbors came to the center for tours and refreshments from the inviting table of goodies, which included contributions from Dunkin' Donuts and the Atlantic Bagel and Coffee Company. Many of the folks walking through were impressed. Some made cash contributions, some donated things of use to the center. A wish list inspired others to check out their homes for items that the Teen Center will put to good use and appreciate.

The wish list currently includes a pinball machine, a small dormitory-size refrigerator, a wall clock or two, and a large bulletin board. Of course, tax deductible contributions are always needed to keep the center going. Fundraising is ongoing and so far has included youth sponsored bake sales, a teen dance at the high school, and two Teen Center nights at Papa Gino's.

"We had a wonderful response to the open house," said Rosemary O'Connell, secretary of Cohasset Youth Resources, the parent organization of the center. "Folks came through the whole time, and many brought good questions and suggestions."

During the open house, citizens were able to see the results of the volunteer labor and the generously donated building supplies and furnishings. What was once a chilly and out-of-date building is now a warm and welcoming space for the youth of Cohasset.

Donations may be made at any time to Cohasset Youth Resources, P.O. Box 11, Cohasset, 02025.

Pierson talks with inmates

Starting at 7 p.m., Thursday, April 6, "Pierson to Person," shown on Continental Cablevision channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Channel 53 in Hingham, will feature host Wigmore Pierson interviewing 10 inmates of the Plymouth County Correctional Facility. They will discuss how, why and when they began a life of crime and jail.

The program will look at crime from the unique perspective of those who have been incarcerated for committing serious crimes. Following the discussion Pierson will talk live in the studio with several correctional experts from the Plymouth jail.

For further information call the show's executive producer, Robert Belliveau, at 545-2500.
